EASEMENTS - Water right - Dutinction between surface water, and coater flowing in a definite channel! No claim can be made either as a nearement by prescription, to water which does not flow in a definite course, but which should be regarded as surface water or aurface draining. The right to the water of a stream does not cesse, when it cesses to flow in a confined water-course, the surface water seeks to flow in a confined water-course. The other claimstance water is its inability to maintain its identity and existence us a water body. When the flow of weter on one preson's hand can be identified with that on another, a

Well-defined existence arising from an ascertained course is the real test in coming to a conclusion against any body of water being regarded as surface water. The question of elever or not perceival water is surface water is extracted as the surface water is conclused. The region of the surface water is confined existence. The right to the water of a stream is sustainable nowithstanding the fact that it water in the stream is notalways affined for the purpose for which the right is claused, or that it reaches the plaintiful band not discettly, but inducedly by flowing into another channel, A

---- by sudgment-Equitable estoppal-Res Indicata-Indomnity, contract of-Breach-Decree against promises is binding on promiser] The second defendant undertook to pay interest on certain debts of the plaintiff, and in default, agreed to indemnify the plaintiff against all lesses caused thereby. The second defendant having defaulted, the creditor recovered judgment both for principal and suterest on the debts, in a suit to which the plaintiff and second defendant were parties, the court finding that second defendant a plos of payment of interest was false. In a suit by the plaintiff for receivery of damages against the account defendant, on account of the latter's default in Payment of the stipulated interest, the second defendant again pleaded payment Hald, that whather the technical role of res sudscate was applicable or not, the second defendant was equitably estopped, by reason of the finding in the previous cust from reising the contention that he had really pend the interest due to the creditor. Where there is a contract to indemnify, in decree passed against the promiseo connot be impeached by the promisor and if both the promisce and the promisor were parties to the .nit by the third party, or if the promisor had notice of the aut, the indigment would be conclusive against the promiser. The contract on the pert of the promiser is substantially broken when the court finds in a aut honestly defended by the promises, that there has been a violation of duty by the promisor, which has sutitled a third party to the damage for which the indemnity has been given Parker v. The rules of Handn Law are binding on the Court only where it is necessary to decide any question regarding succession, inheritance, marriage, or caste or any religious evage or institution Where maintenance is claimed against a person not on the ground that the property coming by inheritance to him is burdened with the maintenance of the person claiming it, but on the ground that the Hindu Law-givers have placed each a duty on him, the Hindu Law, as such, has no obligatory force, and the Court would he we to decide the question in accordance with equity, justice and good conscience. Though the rules and precepts of Hindu Law givers might often be entitled to great respect in deciding the rule of instice in such cases, the weight due to them would depend upon the circumstances of each tase including the conditions of modern society, and the conceptions of equity and lastice which the Court considers it right to give effect to Semble There may be special circumstance. stanges which may make it courtable and inst in a particular case to appoid the claim for maintenance, is the absence of accestral property Khetra mani Dasi v Lashmath Das (1864) 2 BLR (A.C.J.) 15, applied Rangammal v Echammal (1899) LL It 22 Ma 1, 305 explained that right is taken away by express legulation in some express provincion of law And a second or special appeal to the High Court in cases arising under Nidras Act VIII of 1805 has been held to be in Perraturony v Manosep, Pittoper Estate (1903) ILR, 2, Mad 518. The practice has been ever since the passing of the Act for such appeals to be preferred to the High Court, and their Lordships would not be disposed to interfere with such a long standing practice oven if they thought there was an implied rule against second appeals long from the decisions of the District Judge with respect to adjudications under the Art by the Collector Section 581 of the Code of Orni Froederic, 1885 distantly prohibits second appeals on the Code of Orni Froederic, 1885 distantly prohibits second appeals on with law and procedure. Where therefore, in a suit by a lindicial online section 9 of the Madras to VIII il 1865 to enforce acceptance of a patia by his tenants the sole question was whether on the evidence an arrangement which had been previously come to between the parties was

Where there has been a persolical raising of the rent due by the tennats, and parsolical resumptions of the tenants lands by the laudlords both of which were submitted to by the tenants without any contest, it may be concluded that the tenants have no occupancy rights Lands bold under Amaram tennre have generally been held to be resumable

So far as this Presidency is concerned it would seem to be well seitled that a person who has lawfully come into possession as a tenual from year to year or for a term of years cannot by setting up bowere notoriously during the continuance of such relation any title adverse to that of the landlord income stent with the legal relation between them acquire by limitation, title as owner or any other title inconnectent with that under which he was lat into possession; Schhamma Shettets v Chickeya Heyade (1902) I L R, 25 Mad, 507, followed

Appeal No 197

This is an appeal by the defendants agreest a decree obtained WHITE C.J. by the Raja of Venkatagiri for recovery of poscession of n Rabin, J. certain village Mr Seshagiri Ayyar, on behalf of the appellants, has taken the point that, having regard to the fact that the Madras Estates Land Act, 1908, came into force during the pendency of this appeal, the appeal must be decided with referonce to the law as laid down in that enactment. The Advocate-General on behalf of the respondent took the objection that this question could not be raised as it was not made a ground of anneal in the memorandum of appeal We are of opinion that it is open to Mr Seshagiri Ayyar to take the point not withstand. ing that the question is not raised in his grounds of appeal.

AND ABDUR
RAHIM J

Mr Seshagiri Ayyar contended that an appeal being by way of reherring we should apply the law as it stands at the date of the hearing of the appeal. If we applied that law, he contended, inasmich as he was, when the Act came into operation, in possession of ryoti land he was entitled to the benefit of the enactment contained in section 6 (1) of the Act, as amended by the Act of 1909. He argued that the land in question was not 'old waste' as defined by section 3 of the Act of 1908 since it did not come within the purview of the last paragraph of that section for the reason that as an appeal was pending when the Act came into force there had been at that time no "final decree of n competent Caul Court."

Although we should have expected to find the qualification of the right created by section 6 in the section itself and not in the section which defines 'old waste," the intention of the legislature is clear, viz, to prevent a man being deprived of the benefit of a judgment which he had obtained before the Act came into force

It is to be observed that there is not to be found in the sections of the Code which relate to the powers of an Appellate Court or in the Rules any provision which corresponds to Order LVIII, rule 1 of the English rules of the Supieme Court that all appeals shall be by way of reheating

In Kristnama Chariar v Mongammal(1) those is an observation by Sir Buannam Anyangas, J, that when an appeal is preferred from a decree of a Court of First Instance the suit is continued in the Court of Appeal and reheard either in whole or in part. This observation was with reference to the question of hundrion then before the Court. We doubt if it can be relied on is supporting what we understood to be Mr. Seshagiri Ayyar's proposition. His proposition comes to this that under the Code and Rules an appeal is a rehearing of the suit so as to have the effect of rendering a statute ritiospective in its effect even though no such offect is to be gathered from the terms of the statute itself.

In Quilter v Mapleson(2), the observation of Jassel, M. R., that on a rehearing such a judgment may, be given as ought to be given if the case camp at that time before a Court of First Instance, was made with reference to the English rule under NAMESTA the Judicature Act that appeals should be by way of rehearing, and the same remark applies to the observation of Bowey, L. J. VENERALOURL in the same case that if the law had been altered pending an WHITE, C.J. appeal, it would be pressing rules of procedure too fai to say that the Court of Appeal could not decide according to the existing state of the law In Qualter v Mapleson(1) the Court was of opinion that the section in question was in terms retrospective.

We express no opinion as to whether section 6 of the Madras Estates Land Act 1908, is in terms retrospective Assuming it is, the retrospective rights created aro cut down in a case to which the last paragraph of section 3 (7) applies

As regards the words "final decreo" occurring in this paragraph, we are of opinion that they mean final with reference to the Court which passes the decree and that they are none the less final, for the purpose of the section, because an appeal was pending when the Act came into operation Section 13 of the Code of 1882, as it seems to us, does not help Mr Seshagiri Avvar For the purpose of the law of restudicata explination 4 says that a decision liable to appeal may he final within the meaning of the section until nn appeal is made. The explanation was only for the purposes of the section Moreover it does not find a place in the Code of 1'08

In Govinda Parama Guruvu v Dandas Pradhanu(2) the Lower Appellato Court, reversing the decree of the Munsif. dismissed a suit in ejectment on the ground that the defend ants had occupancy rights The Madras Estates Land Act came into operation after the decree of the Lower Appellate Court and before the hearing of the Second Appeal. This Court, whilst doubting whether the Judge was right in holding that the tenants had occupancy rights, was of opinion that section 6, clause (1) of the Madras Estates Land Act I of 1908. as amended by Act IV of 1909, conferred on the defendants n permanent right of occupancy and they dismissed the appeal The same view would seem to have been taken in Fenhate Gopalarayanım Garu v. Venkatasubbayya(3) No donbt in Gorinda Parama Gurusu v Dandası Pradhanu(2), it was said that it was immaterial that a decree for possession had been already passed But the decree there referred to would seem to have been the VENERATAGIEI decree of the Munoif which had been reversed by the Lower Appellate Court The present case therefore, where there was an existing decree for possession at the time the Second Appeal was heard, is clearly distinguishable

> Assuming section 6 of the Act of 1908 to he retrospective, it does not help the defendante if the land was "old waste" within the meaning of the section We are of opinion that the land is old waste as defined by section 3 (7) since it is ryoti land to respect of which before the passing of the Act the landholder had obtained a final decree of a competent Civil Court establishing that the ryot has no occupancy right

> The result therefore is assuming section 6 to he retrospective, the right conferred upon the tenants by the section is cut down by the definition of 'old waste" in section 3 (7), and the defendants in this case, cannot rely moon the section

> The question whether the defendants have a right of perma nent occupancy in the lands from which the plaintiff now seeks to eject them came before this Coort in the year 1899 on appeal from the Suhordinate Judge of Vellore in Original Suit No 45 of 1897 [Narasayya v Venkatagırı Rayah(1)] This Court affirm ing the decree of the Sphordinate Judgo held a ainst the alleged right of permacent occupancy but dismissed the plaintiff's suit on the ground that the notices to quit which he had given to the defendants were insufficient. The sufficiency of the notices which have been given in the present snit is not contested

> The question of the defendants' alleged right of permanent occupancy has been investigated once again in the present suit hy the District Judge of Nellore, the matter not being res audicata hy reason of the judgment of this Court, and in a very careful and exhaustive judgment he arrives at the same conclusion as that come to by the Suhordinate Judge in the suit of 1894 and hy this Court in appeal from the decree of that suit We think this conclusion is right. There is no documentary evidence to show the origin of the defendants title or to show the terms on which their predecessors in title obtained possession in the first instance or continued in possession after 1802, the dute of Lord Clive's letter when the defendants' ancestors were NARARATA relieved from the obligation of rendering military service. It is not disputed that the village in question forms part of the VENEATAGIES Venkatagiri Zamindari, of which the plaintiff is the proprietor White C.J. On the other hand, the defendants and their ancestors have and Annua heen in possession, with intervals during which the lands were resumed by the plaintiff's predecessors, for some 200 years The defendants made some attempt to prove that their ancestors got into possession under grants from the plaintiff's predecessors, but we think the District Judge was perfectly right in dishelieving the evinence tendered by the defendants in support of these alleged grants The case made by the pluntiff, in his plaint is that the defendante were "allowed to continue" in possession after 1802 There is a good deal of evidence to show that the defendants and their ancestors were described as amaram lars and although the precise nature of an amaram tennre is by no means clear, it seems to have been generally assumed that lands held on amaram tenure are resumable-see Wilson's Glossary, page 21 and Unide Rajal a Raje Bommarauze Bahadur v Pemmasamy Venkatadry Nardoo(1) We think it is clear, in fact it was not seriously contested that the lands were resumable in 1802 See Sitaramarazu v Ramachandrarazu(2), Sannivasi v. Salur Zamindar(3) Mahadem v Vikrama(4) and Radha Pershad Sunah v Budhu Dashad(5)

The fact would seem to have been that after 1802, the defendants' ancestors were allowed to continue in possession on payment of rent, and the defendants' ancestors and the defendants, with some intervals during which the plaintiff and his predecessors resamed possession, have been in possession until กกพ

Two points tell against the right of permanent occupancy claimed by the defendants The plan tiff's ancestors have from time to time raised the jods, or rent, and there is no evidence to show the defendants disputed their right to do so This is not conclusive (see Rajah of Parlakimidy v Gandahatlikota Gajendra Ramachendra Bisave(6) ont it is some evidence against the right of permanent occupancy claimed by the defendants. The other fact is that the plaintiff's ancestors resumed possession of the lands from 1835 to 1849 and again from 1876 to 1882. As regards the period 1885 to 1849, there is no evidence that the defendants contested the plaintiff's right to resume. As regards the period 1876 to 1882, there is some evidence though of a very unsatisfactory character that the defendants depied the right

We think the present case is governed by the decision of the Prive Council in Unide Rajaha Raje Bommarauze Bahadur v Pemmasamy Venkatadry Nardoo(1), where the lands in question formed part of the Zamindary of Karvetnagar in Madras and wero held on amaram tenure and where the letter of Lord Clive of 1802, to which reference was made, relieving the Zumindar from military services, had been sent to the In that case, thoir Lordships observe "It is a Zamındar possible case, looking at the extensive powers with which the Zamındaı is invested, tl at the grant being originally "amaram," and resumable, might, when the military service was dispensed with, and circumstances had changed, been converted into a perpetual grant upon a fixed payment. Had this been the case, it ought to have been distinctly pleaded, and the grants themselves, if produced, would have shown whether such defence could be supported "

In the present case the defendants do not plead a grant in 1802 though they allege that the Zamindar (paragraph No 5 of the written statement) "entered into arrangements with the defendants' ancestors by which the jods payable by them was slightly increased and permanently fixed and the defendants' ancestors were, thereafter, to be in possession of their village as their absolute property with all powers of alienation." There is no ovidence to support this allegation of an "arrangement" having been come to in 1802. We think Torbes v Meer Mahomed Tuques (2), where the defendants were able to prove a grant pro scruttus impenses et uipendends, services which though obsolete might again be required to be performed, is clearly distinguishable from the present case.

We are of opinion that the plaintiff has upart from the question of limitation, established his right to resume the lands in question on giving reasonable notice to the defondants

The question of limitation is, in our opinion, one of greater harasatta difficulty Though the rent has been raised from time to time, it has been uniform since 1876 and has been paid up to a short I ENEATAGIBE time before the institution of the suit

The defendants were out of possession from 1876 to 1882, AND ABDUR during which period the plaintiff bid resumed possession and himself collected the rent direct from the ryots. In 1882 the defendants got lack into possession. The defendants' case is that by twelve years possession they have acquired a prescriptive title to a permanent right of occupancy subject to the payment of the rent fixed in 1876 and regularly paid by them since they got back into possession in 1892

So far as this Presidency is concerned, it would seem to be well settled that a person who has lawfully come into possession as tenant from year to year or a term of years cannot by setting up, however notoriously, during the continuance of such relation, any title adverse to that of the landlord inconsistent with the legal relation between them, acquire, by limitation title as owner or any other title inconsistent with that under which he was let into possession ,-Seshamma Shettah v Chicl aya Hegade(1) But "if after the determination of the tenancy, the tenant remains in possession as tiespasser for the statutory period, he will, by prescription acquire a right as owner or such limited estato as he mucht prescribe for "-sce Seshamma Shettati v Chickana Hegade(1) In Paramesuaram Mumbannoo v Kri hnan Tengal(2), the adverse possession was held to have commenced after the former tenancy had been determined and the plea of limitation was upheld

The doctrine enunciated in these two cases, as we have said, would seem to be well established in this Presidency and to he consistent with the law of Fugland In Arcibold v Scully(3), the House of Lords held it was not within the power of a tenant by any act of his own to alter the relation in which he stands to his landlord Lord Wensleynale cites the observations of Lord REDESUAL in an earlier case [Saunders v Annesley(4)] "I take it to be that whenever a person comes to the possession either by judgment of law or his own agreement, and holds that possession, he and all who claim under him must hold it according to his right to the possession, and cannot qualify it by any VENERATAGIEI other right" A disclaimer of the lessor's title by the lessee may be a ground of forfeiture, but it does not in itself make the statute of limitations run against the lessor See Lightwood's Time Limit on Actions, page 107, citing Archbold v. Scully(1) do not find that the doctrine has been formulated in the other High Courts in India In fact in Calcutta and Bombay, the view would seem to be that the assertion of the adverse night coupled with possession for the statutory period is enough. In Vithalbowa v Narayan Dan Thite(2), the view taken was that the assertion of a permanent right of occupancy during the subsistance of a tenance at will would have the law of limitation into operation and in Thakore Fatesing; v Bamanji A Dulal(3) it was held by Barry, J, that a tenant in India is not precluded hy an admission of tenancy from showing that the nature of the tenancy asserted by him to the knowledge of the landlord has heen for the prescribed period pro tanto adverse to the right of the landlord to evict Gopalrao v Mahaderiao(4), and Budesab v Hanmanta(5), would appear to have been decided on the ground that the posertion of the adverse right coupled with the possession for the statutory period was sufficient independently of the question whether when the right was asserted the relation of landlord and tenant subsisted or not Drobomovi Gupta v C T Davis(6), the plea of limitation was uphold on the ground that the landlord was aware that the tenants were claiming to hold with rights of permanent occupancy, and in Icharan Sing v Nilmoney Balidar(7), it was held that a person could plead tenancy, and, in the alternative, a prescriptive title hy adverse possession of a limited interest

The decision of the Privy Conneil in Bent Pershad Koers v Dudnath Roy(8), where it was held that a notice by a tenant for life that he clumed perpetual right of occupancy did not make his possession ndverse, would seem to have proceeded on

THE CHIEF JUSTICE -This is an appeal by the plaintiff against so much of the decice in electment obtained by him as directs the payment of componsation to certain of the defendants In cases to which the Transfer of Property Act upplies the rights of the tenant are defined by section 108 (h) of that enactment and the extent of the right is the same in cases not governed by the Act See Ismail Khan Mahomed v Jacoun Bibi(1) I do not think section 51 of the Act applies in terms as between landlord and tenant. The observations in Ismas Kans Rowthan v Azzarals Sahib(2), may be said to indicate a contrary view but these observations are very guarded, and they are moreover obster Lven if the section applied, I do not see how, in this case, it could be said the defendants believed in good faith they were "absolutely entitled" to the property in question There bave been at least two resumptions of the property by the Zamındar There is no trustworthy ovidence that these resumptions were resisted by the defendants There have been enhancements were not accepted without profest. Both those enhancements were not accepted without profest. Both the final or under the Hindu and the Wahnmedan law as well as under the Verkansons common law of Iudia a tenant who orects a building on land let $w_{\rm WHITE}$ OJ to him can only remove the building and cannot claim compet

The further question 12, do the facts of this case bring it within any principle of equity which entitles the defendants to say, 'if we are evicted, we must be paid compensation '? At the highest the evidence shows the plantiff knew the improvements were being effected and did not interfere. This is clearly not enough to estop the plantiff in a suit for possession [see Beni Ram v Kundan Lal(2)] and in my opinion it is not enough to give the defendants a right to compensation. In fact I should be disposed to hold, if there is no express contract, unless the lessor is estopped from sunng for possession the lessee cannot claim compensation. If the lessor is estopped from recovering possession the Court can say—) on are estopped but we will not enforce this equity against you if you pay the tenant such compensation as we think fair.

There are however no doubt cases in which courts in this country have granted compensation on what I may call general equitable grounds, without considering the questic whether the facts gave rise to an estoppel against the lessor which would disentitle him from suing to recover possession. Assuming a right to compensation may also in a case in which the lessor is not estopped from recovering possession. I am of opinion, on the facts there is no such light in this case.

The learned Judge in the Court below relied on Dittatraji Rayaji v Shridhar Niu y m(). In that case comperation was awarded to the tenant, the Court being of opinion that the facts brought the case within the principle of the decision in Ramaden v Dyson(4), but there were special circumstances in that case from which the Court was able to draw the inference that the plaintiff by his conduct afforded hope and encourage ment to the defendant that he would be allowed to remain in peaceable possession or in least would not be ejected without a reasonable return for the expenditure incurred by him have done nothing to resist the resumption in 1876, though there is some evidence that the Zamindar had executed pattas VENERALIGIES, to the defendants from 1876 to 1882 and that they refused to receive the pattas and execute muchilikas-see the evidence of the plaintiff's fourth witness, the karnam of the village in cross examination The defendants got back in 1882 they got buck without the permission of the plaintiff and he accepted the situation and continued to receive the rent at the rate fixed in 1876, there is nothing to show that they got back under the assertion of the adverse right which they set up in the suit of 1894 The rent was paid and received as before and there is nothing to show that the landlord accepted the rent as payable by them as tenants from year to year or that they paid the rent as an incident of their permanent tenuie. In the shearce of evidence to show an assertion of an adverse title twelve years before the suit, we must hold that the plea of limitation is not made out.

We think the District Judge was night and that this appeal should be dismissed with costs

WHITE, CJ

THE CHIEF JUSTICE -This is an appeal by the plaintiff against so much of the decree in ejectment obtained by him as directs the payment of compensation to certain of the defendants. In cases to which the Transfer of Property Act applies the rights of the tenant are defined by section 108 (h) of that enactment and the extent of the right is the same in cases not governed by the Act See Ismail Khan Mahomed v. Jargun Bibi(1) I do not think section 31 of the Act applies in terms as between landlord and tenant. The observations in Ismai Kani Routhan v. Nazaral: Sahib(2), may be said to indicate a contrary view hat these observations are very grarded, and they are moreover obiter. Even if the section applied, I do not see how, in this case, it could be said the defendants believed in good faith they were "ab-olntely entitled" to the property in There have been at least two resumptions of the property by the Zamındar There is no trustworthy evidence that these resumptions were resisted by the defendants have been enhancements of rent and there is nothing to shiw NARASATTA those enhancements were not accepted without protest. Both under the Hindu and the Vahomedan law as well as under the Vankatagiri common law of India, a tenant who creets a building on land let WHITE CA to him can only remove the building and cannot claim compen sation on eviction Ismai Kans Routhan v Navarali Sahib(1)

The further question is, do the facts of this case bring it within any principle of equity which entitles the defendants to say 'if we are evicted, we must be paid compensation? At the highest the evidence shows the plaintiff knew the improvements were being effected and lid not interfere. This is clearly not enough to estop the plaintiff in a suit for possession [see Beni Ram v hundan Lal(2)] and in my opinion at is not enough to give the defendants a right to compensation. In fact, I should be disposed to hold, if there is no express contract, unless the lessor is estopped from sinug for possession the lesses cannot claim compensation If the lessor is estopped from recovering posee sum the Court can ear-you are estopped but we will not enforce this equity against you if you pay the fenant such compensation as we think fair

There are however no doubt cases in which courts in this country have granted compensation on what I may call general equitable grounds without considering the que tion whetler the facts gave rise to an estoppel against the lessor which would disentitle him fi m suing to recover possession. Assuming a right to compensation may arise in a case in which the lessor is not estopped from recovering possession, I am of opinion, on the facts there is no such night in this case

The learned Judge in the Court helow relied on Dittatrage Rayan v Shridhar Airiyin(3) In that case compensal r was awarded to the tenant, the Court being of opinion that the facts brought the case within the principle of the deci on in Ramsden , Duson(4), but there were special circumstances in that case from which the Court was able to draw the inference that the plaintiff by his conduct afforded hope and encourage ment to the defendant that he would be allowed to remain in peaceable possession or at least would not be ejected without a reasonable return for the expenditure incurred by him

NABARIYA Mahalatch'ın Ammal v Fhlam Chetti(1), is no don't an engline authority in the defendants' favour hat with all respect, I doubt Weneracher. if this decision is good law See the observations in Ismar White Of Kan Rowthan v Nazarals Sahif(2).

Even accepting the principle laid down in Nundo Kumar Naskar v Banomali Gayan(3), in my opinion the facts of this case do not come within the principle there stated

In Municipal Corporation of Bombay v Secretary of State(4), the Court held, on the facts, that the defendants acted on a helief which was referable to an expectation created by Government that their enjoyment of the land would be in accordance with that belief and that the Government knew that the defendants were acting in this helief so oreated. In this view of the facts the Court held the defendants were entitled to the benefit of the dictim formulated by Lord Kingsdown in Ransadar v Duson'5)

In Ramsden v Dyson(5), the House of Lords held against the alleged equitable rights sot up by the defendant, Lord KINGSDOWN dissenting from Lord CRANWORTH, Lord WENSLEYDALE and Lord WESTBURY There is nothing, however, so far as I can see, in the judgments of these learned Lords which is inconsistent with Lord Kinospown's proposition The proposition is this "If a man, under a verhal agreement with a landlord for a certain interest in land, or, under an expectation, created or encouraged by the landlord, that he shall have a certain interest takes possession of such land, with the consent of the landlord, and upon the faith of such promise or expectation, with the knowledge of the lundlord, and without abjection by him, lays unt money upon the land, a Court of Equity will compel the landlord to give effect to such prumise or expectation" I do not think the facts of the present case bring the case within Lord Kinospowy's dictum. In my upinion the evidence does not show that there has been a hupe or expectation in the tenant which was created or encouraged by the laudlord good faith when they dug the wells in the land that they had a permanent right to the land or that the landlord would grant VENEZIZGIE them such a right If they had acted under such belief they would have been entitled to masst that they should not be ejected at all or that if ejected compensation should be paid to them for the improvements which they had effected under such belief provided they proved that they made the improvements in circumstances which would induce a Court of I quity to imply a contract between them and the landlord that the landlord would not eject them or in case he ejected them that he would pay them the value of the improvements. The court would infer such a contract if the landlord by his conduct encouraged or raised an expectation in the tenant spending money in making maprovements that the latter would not be cyacted at all or et least not without being compensated for the value of such improvenients and the improvements were in fact made under such expectations Such a contract is inferred in order to relieve the tenant from the frand of the landlord This I take it is the extent to which the doctrine of equitable estoppel is well established,

Rameden v Dison(1), Bent Ram v Kund n Lal(2) and Munici pal Cornoration of Bembay v Secretary of State(3) We are not called upon to decide in this case baving regard to its undoubted facts the question whether if the tenants believed that they bad a permanent right to the land and in such belief, but without that helief heing created or actively encouraged by the landlord, made the improvements to the knowledge of the landlord and without any warning or interference by him they could be ejected at all or whether in any case the landlord should not pay them the value of improvements The opinions delivered by the learned Lords in Ramsden v Dyson(1) especially that of the Lord Chancell r. Lord Chanworth, make it clear that in cases of this nature the Court of Equity would raise an equitable estoppel against the owner of the land less readily in a case where tho tenant makes permanent amprovements on the land than where a stranger makes similar improvements. And the grounds for such a distinction are obvious The tenant making permanent improvements might well have relied on the honour of the land lord not to evict him so long as the rent was regularly paid While ordinarily a similar interpretation could hardly be placed on the conduct of a stranger in spending his money upon another's land And I do not think the doctrine of equitable estoppel has been or should be extended as between a landlord and his tenant to a case where all that can be alieged against the former is that he did not interfere and merely remained passive with the knowledge that the tenant was making improve ments under a mistaken belief that he had a more stable interest in the land than that of a tenant at will or of a tenant from year to year This is what I gather from what is laid down in Bens Ram v Kundan Lal(1), Ismail Khan Vahomed v Jargun Libi(2). Ism is Kant Routhan v Nararals Sahib(3), Dattatraya Rayan v Shrillar Majayan (4) and Municipal Corporation of Bombay v Secretary of State (5) The contrary view which is supported by Mahalatchma Ammal v Palana Chetta(6) and a dictum of the lean ed Judges in Aundo Kumai Naslar v Banomali Gayan (7). seems to be ogainst the weight of anthority. The tenant should know under what terms le has been let into possession and the law lays no duty upon the landlord to romind his tenant of his title under which he holds the land so far as the present case rs concerned. Bens Ram v Kunlan Lal (1) and Ramsdan v Dyson (8) clearly lay down the principle from which it follows that if a tenant knowing the extent of his interest in the hand in his possession, as is the case here, chooses to expend money upon a title which le must know would soon come to an end that is his own folly and he cannot ask the owner of the land to recoup him for such extenditure It has been suggested that unless the lessor is estopped from sung for possession the tenant would not be entitled to claim comp assison. I am not prejured without the question heing argued at the bar to give my adherence to it Such a proposition was not advanced during argument and it seems to me that there may be cases where the landlord would not be estopped from recovering possession but only estopped from recovering possession withint paying for the improvements NARASAYYA effected by the tenant I may mention that there is a class of eases in which the court has refused to grant a mandatory Veneraging injunction for the removal of permanent buildings erected on his holding by a ryot having a right of acceptancy, if the landlord has been guilty of laches or delay in bringing his action. But those cases stand on a different principle. As regards section 108 of the Transfer of Property Act-that only deals with the right of the tenant to remove the fixtures he has planted in the land and section 51 of the same Act apparently applies only to the case of a transferee of an absolute right in land. Nor are we concerned in this case with the right nader the Hindu or Muhammadan law of a tenant or a trespasser to remove buildings or the structures crected by such a person

CASE stated under ecction 60 of the Indian Stamp Act (II of THE DISTRICT 1899) by S RANGANADHA MUDALIYAE, the District Munsif of THEOPELIUS Tiruvallur, in his letter, dated 27th Octobor 1910

"The document was executed by the second defendant in Original Suit No 38 of 1901 on the file of the District Court. Chingleput, and two sureties in favour of that Court under rule 7, page 31 of the Civil Courts' Guide, for the production, when called for, of the attached movables left in their custody by an Amen of this Court The warrant was sent to this Court for execution and was entrusted by my Deputy Nazir to the Amin After attachment he obtained this boud as usual in this Court on a one-rapee stamp paper (general), being the ad valorem stamp on the value of the attached cattle When the same was forwarded to the District Court it was returned to this Court with an order that a fresh bond should be taken on a paper with eight anna court fee label attached to it as required by articlo 6, schedule II, of the Court Toes Act I submitted that the bond was correctly stamped under article 57, schodule I of Act II of 1899, and that the Court Fees Act was not applicable Thereupon a further proceeding was received with the bond requiring a fresh bond and a direction that the practice of this Court should be corrected . As I held tudicially elsewhere when such bond was sought to be enforced that boods of this enaracter should bear ad valorem general stimp and not cight-anna court fee label and ae the different opinion of the District Judgo hae thrown doubt on the correctness of my view, I beg to refer the question for the decision of the High Court

Rule 7 of the Carl Courte' Guide was framed under section 269 of the old Civil Procedure Codo. It will be treated as framed under the present sections 122 and 128 (b) It will therefore be enforceable by execution process under section 140, but it has to be determined whether the document is one excluded from the purview of Act II of 1899 Article 15 of that Act provides for 'Bond [as defined by section 2 (5)] not being a debenture (No 27) and not being otherwise provided for by this Act or by the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870)' Among the bonds for which special provision is made are 'Indemnity bonds' (34) and Scennity bonds (57) The Court Fees Act provides for Bail bond or other instrument of obliga tion in pursuance of an order made by a Court or Magistrate under nny section of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1882, Re The District or the Code of Civil Procedure? An order to attach implied Municipal Municipal Code of Civil Procedure? an order to obtain security bond as per rules framed under Tieuvaluur. proper authority but it may be a question whether such an instrument should be described as executed funder any section of the Civil Procedure Code,' Assuming however that it was so I am of opinion that the bond in question does not wholly fall under this article and requires to be stamped under the Stamp Act Under rule 7 of the Civil Courts' Guide (p. 31) cattle may be left m the charge of a indement dehter if he enters into a bond in the form given in schedulo A appended to these rules with one or more sufficient sureties for its prodoction when called for' The second defendant was therefore the principal and his two co executants were his sureties Section 19, clause XV of the Court Pees Act exempts from Court Fees Bail bonds in criminal cases, recognizances to prosecuto or give evidence and recognizances for personal appearance or otherwise' Even if on undertaking to produce the person of onother be exempt, an undertaking to produce material objects, documents and so forth would perhaps not be exempt

Article o7 of the Stamp Act provides for duty on security bonds or mortgoge deeds 'oxecuted by way of security for tho dne execution of an office or to account for money or other property received by virtue thoreof or executed by a surety to secure the due performance of a contract ' The executants of the bond may in certain cases he deemed officers in custody of the attached properties (compare Order XXI, rnle 43) but if not there was certainly a contract and the sureties who joined in the execution of the bond were expressly required as such to join in it and in so far as their obligation is concerned they fall under that article It will be observed that there is no proviso in this article that payments under the Court Fees Act exempted them from liability under this article. The principle in Kulwanta v Marabir Pra ad(1) and Soo spharee Koonwur v Ramessur Pandey(2), would therefore be applicable In this connection the case of the obligation being charged on immerable property may also be referred to. Such instruments are treated as mort rages oven though executed under the Civil

Procedure Code The Board of Revenue bas also ruled to the THE DISTRICT Same effect (ride Resolution No 227, dated 9th September 1899, THUVALLUE Registration Circular No 11, dated 23rd September 1899) And instruments of that nature are not registered by the registering officers unless they are stumped as mortgages. The Legislature did not amend article 57 or 31 even when they thought fit to do so in regard to article 15, Stamp Act and article 16, schedule II, of the Court Fees Act I am therefore of opinion that security bends by sureties to see to the production by the decree-holder, judgment-debtor or claimant, as the case may be, of attached movables entrusted to the former are chargeable under article 57 and that they are not hable under the Court Fees Act In this connection I may also refer to certain other cases under the Civil Procedure Code where the taking of security may be ordered, e a, where there is an attachment of arrest before judgment (Order XXXVIII, rules 1 and 5) or for costs (Order XXV, rule 1 and Order XLV, rule 7), where execution or stay thereof is ordered (Order XLI, rules 5 and 6 and Order XXI, rulo 26), where money is paid out to n guardian of a minor outstled to it (Oider XXXII, rule 6) and where an arrested judgment debtor desires to file an insolvent application (section 55) In most of these cases security on the movable property is demanded and registered bonds are filed bearing ad valorem general etamp "

The Government Pleader for the referring officer

WHITE CJ

THE CHIEF JUSTICE -In this matter a point was raised by the Government Pleader as to whether the rules, in connection with which this reference arises, have now any legal offect

The power given to the Local Government by section 269 of the old Codo to make rules for the maintenance of attached livestock is non given to the High Coart by section 128 (2) (b) Order XXI, rule 43, reproduces the old section 269, but it does not reproduce the provision requiring the officer attaching the property to act in accordance with the rules notwithstinding they may be inconsistent with the provisions of the section Section 157 of the Code of 1908 keeps alive the rules, etc., made ut ider the old Code so far as they are consistent with the Code of I 1908 There is nothing in the Code of 1908, as distinguished from\t the orders in the first schedule to the Code, which 19

inconsistent with the rules issued under section 200, though Rethero is an inconsistency hetween the rules and Order XXI, THE DISTRICT PROBLEM 18 But the High Court has power to alter the rules THEWALDER in the first schedule. This being so, I do not think it where Cr follows that, because the rules mide under the old section are inconsistent with the rules in the schedule, they are not consistent with this Code within the meaning of section 157

The point is not free from doubt, but until rules are made by the High Court, I think the rules made by Government under section 269 of the old Code are in force Section 157 is an enabling, not a repealing, section The rules have never been expressly repealed and I do not think we are bound to hold they are implicitly repealed by virtue of the words "so far as they are consistent with this Cede," which occur in section 157

As regards the question ruised in the letter of reference, as the bond is given in pursuance of a rule made under power

conferred by a section of the Code, I think the bond may be said to be given in pursuance of an order made by a Court under a section of the Code of Civil Procedure, that consequently the hond is "otherwise provided for by the Court Fees Act" (see schedule II, article 6, Court Fees Act, 1870 and sebedule I, article 15 of the Indian Stamp Act, 1899), and that the stamp is an eight anna stamp uncer the Court Fees Act

A question as to whether the entire estate in a samindari and not only the life interest of the namindari was sold in execution and bought by the purchaser is a question of mixed law and fact to be determined by the oridence in each

All that Abd. I dist Rhan x Appayasamt No cker [4]004] I L R. 27 Mad 181 at p 142 (R C)], decided in reference to the above question was that the state of the law as understood at the lipso of sale, as to the rights of the summadar in regard to the summadar; was to be considered along with other evidence in the cost of its not alone conclusive on the question.

In determining the question of what it of Court intended to sell and the Pirrich are maderstood he bongth, evidence as to how it is paties affected by the true action themselves rowed it at the time is of much greater value than civilities which may be procurable some twenty pears after the transaction toolpiace. Appeal to 120 of 1905.

T Rangacharuar and C S. Venkatacharuar for the respondents ALAGARAYA Nes 6 and 7

JUDGMENT -Two points were raised on appeal (1) That the Subordinate Judge was wrong in bolding that the claim in the present suit was not res judicata, (2) that he was wrong in hold ing that the entire estate in the zamindari and not only the life PHILLIPS, J interest of the zamindar was sold in execution and purchased by the first defendant

We think the Subbidinate Judge was right in helding that the whole estate was sold. This being so it is not necessary for us to discuss the question of res judicata

As regards the second point the question is what did the Court intend to sell and what did the purchaser understand that he hought This is a question of mixed law and fact and must be determined by the evidence in the particular case

It is true that when the sale in execution took place it was the accepted law in Madras that the holder of an impartible zamındarı could not encumber the corpus of the estate so as to bind his co purceners -see Abdul Aziz Khan v Appayasami Naicher(1) Mr Simivasa Ayyangar relied strongly on the statement in the judgment of the Priss Council in this case that the parties must be taken to be bound by the law as it was understood when the sale took place. If by this sintement is meant that the state of the law as it was understood at the time is conclusive on the question the observation is inconsistent with other decisions of the Privy Council to which reference is made in the judgment and with earlier passages in the The cases are alluded to in the judgment in Veerabadra Aiyar v Marudaga Nachiar(2) We think all that their Lordships metat by this passage was that the state of the law as understood at the time was evidence to be considered with the other evidence in the particular case in determining what the Court intended to sell and what the purchaser understood that he bought

We do not think that the Judges in straing in their judgment in Veera Soorappa Nayani v I rrappa Nailu(3), where it was held that the full proprietary interest passed by the sale, that

AND PHILLIPS J the sale in that case took place after the decision of the Privy Council in Multyanv Zamindar of Stragers [1], intended to imply that, if the sale under consideration had taken place before the decision of the Privy Coancil in that case, they would accessarily have held that something less than the full proprietary interest passed by the sale.

We think the Subordinate Judge applied the right test in determining whether the whole estate, or only a life estate, was sold and we certuilly not propared to say he was wrong in bolding that the whole estate presed

In determining the question of what the Court intended to sell and the purchaser understood he bought, evidence as to how the parties affected by the transaction themselves aloned it at the time as of much greater value than evidence which may be procurable some twerry years after the transaction took place

In an application made in November 1888 (Exhibit IX) the plantill's older brother asked that his interest in the estate should not be sold on the ground amongst others that the debt sued for was incurred for immoral purposes. It was not enggested that the whole of the zamadari was not hable to be sold. In fact the application was made upon the feeting that the whole estate was hable to be sold. The other avidence is fully dealt with by the learned Judge and we need not decease it.

Then we have the jadgment of the Privy Council in the suit brought by the plantiff's elder brother in 1882. Their Lordships abserve that an the document before them "they must come to the conclusion that the thing professed and intended to be sold and actually sold was not the father's share but the while interest in the zumindari itself." Except certain oral ovidence which the Suberdinate Judge did not believe the materials for determining this question are the same as were before the Privy Council in 1888. We express no opinion as to whell or this judgment of the Privy Council openies as resignated at, but the fact that, on this mixed question of his among the armed at necessarily carries great weight. Mr. Simivasa

Ayvangar has urged that the Privy Council had no occasion to ALAGARAYA consider and did not consider how the law was then understood with regard to the power of the holder of an impartible zamindars to encumber the cerpus of the estate. We are not called upon to assume that the Pray Council did not take this into Water C.J. consideration. Assuming they did not, we are certainly not Phillips J. prepared to say that, if they had, their decision would have been that only a life estate was sold

JUDGMERT—This appeal arises ont of a dispute as to fishery rights in two channels in the Laajore district, claimed by the first defendant, the head of the Terupparandal Mutt. The plaintiff was a man who had taken a lease of the fishery rights in these and other channels from Government, and being obstructed in the exercise of his rights in respect of these channels by the first defendant, he filed this suit, impleading not only the first defendant but also the Secretary of State as the second defendant. In his plant he prayed for an injunction restraining the first defendant from interfering with the fishery in the plaint channels and for damages caused to him (the plaintiff) by such laterference and he added an alternative prayer that in case it was found that the first defendant should he directed to pay them

The Munsif disassed his suit in toto and ordered him to pay the costs of both the defendants. He appealed to the Subordiante Judgo who after calling for finding on three issues left undeeded by the District Muneif dismissed the appeal with costs of both the respondents

The present second appeal is preferred by the Secretary of State (the second defendant in the Musit's Court and the second respondent in the Subordinate Judge's Court) and the first defendant who now figures as the second respondent ruises the proluminary objection that as the decrees of both the Lower Courts are entirely in the procent appellant's favour, he is not entitled to appeal against them

The cose is a somewhat curious one and the point is by no morns free from doubt, but on the whole we think the objection must be allowed. Undoubtedly, as it stands, the decree of the Salordinate Judgo as also that of the District Munisf is entirely in the appellants (second defendants) favour. Not only in the sait for relief against him dismissed but he is given his costs in both Courts.

The learned Advocate General has argued at considerable length that any party to a suit aggreed by a dicross ontitled to appeal against it although the decree, on the face of it, may be entirely in his favour. He roles intuity on the raining of

WOODROFFE, J IN Krishna Chandra Goldar v Mobesh Chandra Sychetably Saha(1) which is quoted with approval in Yusuf Sahib v Durgi(2) and followed in Nagalla Kotayya v Nagalla Mallayya(3)

A perusal of Woodporge, J.'s jndgment shows that he considered it an essential condition of the right of appeal that the SPENCER JJ appellant should be adversely affected in some way or other by the decree steelf. This point is emphasized by ABDUR RAHIM and KRISHNASWAMI AYVAR, JJ, in the latest of the three cases wherein they say that the appeal "hes only against the decree, and not against a mere finding " Certainly hoth in Krishna Chandra Goldar v Mobesh Chandra Saha(1) and Nagalla Kotayya v Nagalla Maltayya(3) the learned Judges are at pains to explain most clearly in what way the more existence of the decree apart from any finding in the judgment prejudiced the appellant. It may be admitted that this point is not so clear in Yusuf Salub v Durgs (2) hat on the other hand the opinion there expressed is a mere obiter dictum and the decision of the case proceeded on other grounds altogether. The only case which has been quoted to us in which the right to appeal can be said to have been based on the findings helind the decree rather than on the decree itself is Jamna Das v Udev Ram(4) and it is to be noted that the decision proceeded on the basis that the finding was accessarily implied in the decree

Now, in the present case, the only way in which it is suggested that the second defendant is adversely affected by the decree is that if the finding on the second issue operates as ies judicuta against him it prevents him from setting up in future any proprietary rights to the fishery in the soit channels I o said " Whether the second defendant has the right of fishery in the two plaint taskais "

It may be pointed out at once that the decree certainly ile a not necessarily imply this finding-to quote the wording of the Allahabad case The Munsif recorded no finding on P 22 6 and 7, but based his dismissal of the suit on other pr 2, The Subordinate Judge called for findings in all the tl my area above named The Munsif returned finnings adv. plaintiff on all three and the Subordinate Judge art 74/1. as well as the findings originally recorded on the said

SECRETARY OF STAIL BARINATHA Kowney

The plaintiff's claim for damages 1 od already been decided against him under is ue No 4 and the Subordinate Judge finds in addition (paragraph No 8 of his judgment) that "the loss sustained by reason of his non enjoyment of the fishery is not separately ascertained and must be very slight" Under issues SPENCER JJ Nos 6 and 7 the Subordinate Judge agreeing with the Munsif found (a) that plaintiff was out of possession and had no right to sue for an injunction. (6) that us a lessee of one year he had no right to ask for a permanent injunction. The decision of these issues affords a perfectly independant havis for the dismissal of the sort apart from the question involved in issue No 2 This circumstance at ooce distinguishes the case from Yusuf Sahib v Durgi(1) above quoted Again the prejudice to the second defendant is solely dependent on the assumption that the decision of issue No 2 will operate as res judicata against him in future litigations. The respondent's vakil has quoted more than one case to show that no appeal would lio even if the matter were res judicata-a view which seems to obtain a certain amount of support even from Yusut Salth v Duraill), but as a matter of fact we do not think that the decision in this casa would operate on res judicata and we may note for what it is worth, that the searned vakil for the respondents himself argues that it would not and even expressed himself as willing to undertake to raise no soch contention in future litigations

We have already given reasons for bolding that the determination of isoue No 2 was not necessary to the decision of the suit and the examination of the pleadings and of the judgments of the Lower Courts shows that it cannot be said that the question raised therein was directly and substitutially at issue between the first defendant and the second defendant Poragraph No 8 of the plaint in putting forward the alternative claim against the second defendant (that he should be hable to p is the said damages Rs 530) says " For this reason the second defendant is made party" The second defend int while admitting the allegations in the plaint to the effect that the ownership of the fishery lies with bim puts the plaintiff to proof of damages, and simply prays that the relief claimed agrinst him be dismissed with costs to far as can be uscertained the second defendant adduced no evidence in the case. And as the Munsif remarks in parigraph 11 of his judgment. "The suit is not one by or on behulf of Government, and it is in fact one rigainst Government."

Secretary of State of Saninatha Kownd*n

We must therefore hold that the scored defendant is not ATERGAND adver-ely affected in any way by the derree in this suit or by Services JJ any finding necessivily implied therein, and that he has no right of appeal.

The appeal is dismissed with costs

SUNDARA AYYAR AND PHILITES JJ JUDGMENT—This is an appeal against the order of the District Jadge of South Giarra, dated the 19th January 1910, in an application for execution of the decree in Original Suit No 43 of 1906. The decree was the result of a compromise between the parties. The material portion of it was in these torms the Court doth order and decree "that plaintiffs do pay the assessment on the entire property as per plaint harar, dated Lakenni 16th November 1905, that first defendant shall enjoy land MARY DEFT yielding 126 muras of rice, and house, out of the land referred to in the Larar, that first defendant shall not alienate the sud ATTAR INC land of 126 muras of rice, that if alienated, the shenation shall be noll and void, that after the death of the first defendant the said land and house shall be enjoyed by the second defendant paying thereabout 63 muras of rico to plaintiff annually by the end of June of each year through Court, etc " In 1909 the plaintiff applied for execution and asked for an order ' directing that from out of the lands mentioned in the decree, land yielding 126 muras of rice which is already in the possession of the first defendant and which is to be retained with her as per compromise decree, be caused to be separated towards the said first defendant and that the remaining properties be given in possession to the plaintiffs by a Commissioner"

The first defendant objected on the ground that the decree was declaratory in its terms and that therefore no execution could issue The District Judge held that "the decree can be executed by setting aside lands that yield 126 muras of rice income," and directed that this should be done, and ordered the appointment of a Commissioner to prepare lists of the lands The first defendant has presented the appeal to this Court on the ground that the Judgo was wrong to construing the decree as one that was oot purely declaraters

On the merits there can be no doubt that the order of the Judge cannot be upheld. The decree did not direct possession of any lands to be given to the platotiffs but merely declared the right of the first defendant to remain in possession of land vielding 126 muras of rice of which sho already had possession

It does not even declare the plantiff's title to any lands but merely decrees that plaintiffs do pay the assessment on the entire property of the family Wo are unable to see how on the terms of the decree an order directing that the plaintiffs be pot in possession of all the lands except that yielding 126 muras of rice, could be justified

Mr Naruna Rao, the learned valid for the respondent. has lowever raised a prehminary objection which we are bound to deal with The objection is that before the appeal was presented on the 18th July 1910 the Judge had passed another LAKSHMI order on the 18th March 1910, directing delivery to the plaintiffs in accordance with his former order after hearing the objections to the lists prepared by the Commissioner, that the defendant did not appeal against the final order of the 18th March which has in consequence become final, and that he was not entitled, after the passing of the second or final order, to appeal against the first order of the 29th Junuary

To this objection Mr Narama Rao in the course of his argument added another, that no appeal could be preferred at nill against the order of the 29th January, as it really did not decide any question of right between the parties

We may dispose of the second objection at once in a few words According to section 2 of the Civil Procedure Codo, "the determination of any questions within section 47" is a decree The question whether a decree is executable or not is certainly one that comes within this definition. No doubt the determination of a mero issue by the execution Court made nitor to the passing of the final order would not be regarded as an idjudicution between the parties against which an appeal would lie Sec Venkataguri Iyer v Badagopachariar(1) But in this case the Judge did not merely record a finding on an issue. He held that execution should issue in favour of the plaintiffs, and ordered the appointment of a Commissioner as required by the denee In Narayana Pattar v Gopalal rishna Pattar(2), the Jearnod Chief Jessice and Subrahania Ayyar, J. held that when the executing Court finally decided that the decree holder was entitled to interest an appeal lay ugainst such an order. The searned Judges there point out the distinction between that case and one where the Court merely records a finding on an assue, ns in Venkatagiri Iver v Sadagopuchariar(1) It has also been decided that, where the executing Court decides that the plaint if is entitled to mesne profits, an appeal will be against that order though the amount of the profits may not have been uscertained by it See Ram Kirpal v Rup Kuari (3), Bhun Indar Bal a lur Singh . Bijar Bal adur Singh (4) and Maharasah of Bar lie in . Turasundari Debi() Our judgment is also in accordanco with Deol : Nanlan Singh v Bans: Singh (6), which lays down the test for deciding whether an appeal would be against LAKSHIII any particular order in execution or not We overrule this MABE DEVI contention The first contention is certainly hetter supported by authority, but we are of opinion that it is not entitled to prevail The defendant being entitled to appeal against the PHILLIPS JJ order of the 29th January, we are unable to hold that he was not entitled to do so within the period allowed to him by law The second order merely carried out the first order in this case, it did not, in any way, supersede that order, as indeed it could not do We cannot see how that order could affect the defendant s right of appeal He might have had no objection to it provided the first order was right

This indeed is the position taken up by the appellant before To use the language of the decision of a Full Bench of this Coart in another case "where a right and jurisdiction are conferred expressly by statute" they cannot be taken away or cot down except by express words or necess ry implication It is argued that the later order, not brying been appealed against, would remain in force, even if we reverse the earlier one, and that therefore it is not open to us to take the fatile step of setting aside the first order. We cannot agree that the reversal of the earlier order will leave the later one intact. The second order depends for its validity upon the first one allowing execution in favour of the plaintiffs, and with the quashing of the first the second must cease to have any force. The appellant has not been able to draw our attention to eny decision of this Court in support of his position. But he relics on the decision of the Calcutta High Court in-Mackengie v Narsingh Sahar(1), and upon Valhu Sudan Sen v Kamini Kanta Sen(2), which was followed in that case. It is perhaps desirable to examine briefly the decisions of the Calcutta High Court bearing on this question Madhu Sudan Sen v Kamini Kanta Sen(2) was a case of an appoil against an older of romand. It was presented after the Munsif had passed his final judgment subsequent to the remand MACLEAN, CJ, and MITIA, J held that the appeal was incompetent. The reason given is that section 588 of the old Civil Procedure Code provides for appeals against various interlocutory orders, several of which do not affect the decision of a suit on the ments, though some do . that a party failing to appeal against any of the orders could object to it on an appeal against the final decree, and that, therefore, if he desire to avail himself of the privilege conferred by section 588 in relation to an order of remand, he ought to do so before PHILLIPS IT the final disposal of the cuit With all respect for the learned Indges we must say the argument does not commend itself to as When the law gives a person two remedies he is entitled to avail himself of either of them unless they are inconsistent See Mussammat Gulab Koer v Badshah Bahaduril) learned Judges distinguished an earlier case, Jolinga Valley Tea Company v Chera Tea Company(2), on the ground that the noneal there had been pracented before the final judgment was passod But the ratio of that decision is consily applicable whether the appeal against the remand is presented before or after the second judgment in the case Field, J. observes "Tha Code does not say that there shall be an appeal only if the case has not been finally determined in the Court of first instance. hefora that appeal is praferred or comes on for hearing cannot, therefore, import into the Code a provision which does not there exist the Munsif's paradiction to hear the case upon remand depended upon the remand order. If the remand order were badly mada, the decrea and, indeed all the proceedings taken under that remand order, are null and void" In Machenzie v Narsingh Sahai(3), there was a preliminary decree in a suit for partition and a subsequent final decree The appeal was against the former only and was presented after the final decree had been passed. The learned Judges who decided the case, Mukerize and Caryburr, JJ, followed Madhu Sudan Sen v Kamını Kanla Sen(4), they say that the final decree wanld still stand even if the preliminary decree were reversed. No reason is given for this proposition. The learned Judges dissent from the indigment of the Allahabad High Court in Uman Kunnars v Jarbandl an(5) and point out that the view taken in that case, that an appeal might be preferred against an arder of remand even after the Court of first instance had pased its final jud ment after remand, was based on the opinion of the Allababad Court that the party aggrieved by an order of remand could not object to it on an appeal presented against the final decree, and that the Calcutta High Court had adopted a contrary view on the point Now, the ATTAR AND Legislature has laid down in the present Code of Civil Proced. PHILLIP, JJ. ure, section 105 (2), that an order of remand cannot be impeached except by an appoal against that order. It is similarly provided in section 97 that "where any party aggrieved by a preliminary decree passed after the commencement of this Code does not appeal from such decree, he shall be precluded from disputing its correctness in any appeal which may be preferred from the final decree," The result of the opinion of the Calcutta High Court in the case cited by the appellant would be that, if a party, without any fault of his own, is unable to appeal against a preluminally decree or an order of remand before the final decree on remand is passed, he would lose all opportunity of objecting to that order or decree and be deprived or the right of appeal expressly conferred on him by the Legislature The incorrectness of the position would be manitest from another inconvenience which may be pointed out here Suppose a District Court passes an order of remnud nud before it is appealed against the Munsif's Court passes a decision on the merits in pursuance of the remand order Suppose the Muusif's decision on the merits is unimpeachable. If the defendant'e appeal could be only against the final judgment he would be bound to appeal to the District Court though necessarily he would not be entitled in that appeal to attach that Court's order of remand. And yet, according to the view of the Calcutta Court, he would be bound to get the order of the Munsif contirmed in order to get a right of appealing to the High Court against the order of romand. MOONZEII. J., has attempted in a later case to support Machenzie v.

order of remand, however, must make his election. He may, if he chooses, prefer an appeal against the order of remand, (1) (1909) LLR., 36 Calc., 702 (2) (1907) 12 C W.A., 590 at p. 597.

Narsingh Shahi(1) on another ground. In Baikuntha Nath Dey v. Nawab Salsmulla Bahadur(2) the learned Judge says " When an order of remand has been made, its validity may be challenged directly and immediately by an appeal under sec 588, cl. (28), or indirectly under sec. 591, when an appeal is preferred against the final decree in the suit. . . . The party affected by the

obtain a stay of proceedings during the pendency of the appeal, he may, on the other hand, carry out the order of remand, take the chance of a successful termination of the suit in his favour and in the event of defeat, prefer an appeal against the final decree in which the validity of the order of remand may be questioned He cannot, hewever, if he has carried out the order of remand and taken the full benefit of it, turn round and prefer an uppeal against the order of remand ' But surely, a party appealing against un order of remand is not ontitled, as of right, to a stay of proceedings in the Court of first instance, nor does it he in the power of a defendant objecting to a remand to decide whether he should appear at the further proceedings before the Court of first instance or net He is bound to do so at the risk of those proceedings being completed in his absence in case of default. This theory of alternative reliefs is pointed out by MOOKERJI, J. hunself to be wrong in Mussammat Gulab Koer v Badshah Bahadur(1), where the learned Judge observes "That n litigant is entitled to take advantage of each and every one of the romedies open to him, except when they are moonsistent with each other" The Allahahad High Court in Auriva Mal v Bishambl ar Das(2) followed Machenine v Narsingh Sahai(3) distinguishing ite own earlier caso, Uman Kunwari v Jarbandhar(4) [which had been dissented from Mackenzis v Narsingh Sahai(3) on the ground that "a right of appeal from an order of remand was expressly given by section 588 of the old Code, and this Court proceeded upon the ground that such right of appenl could not be taken away in the absence of some direct provision to the contrary " We may point out that a right of appeal against n preliminary decree or against an order in execution is also expressly granted by the statute. The learned Judges of the Allahabad High Court ge on to observe "Moreover, in considering what the effect of the reversal of an order of remind, under section 562 aforesaid, would be, this Court was careful to point ont that mything dene in pursuance of such an order would become spec facto of no affect on the roversal of the said order, because the Court concerned would have no jurisdiction to pass any further order in the case (except by way of roview), noless

the learned Munsif after passing his preliminary decree had MARU DEVI jurisdiction, and indeed was bound to proceed in due course to pass a final decree in the case It seems to us that a serious ATTER AND anomaly would be created by the modification of the prelimi- PRILLIPS JJ nary decree of June 25, 1908, while the final decree of June 30, 1908, remained in force and had not been appealed against" The whole argument, it will be noted, is based on the assumption that the final decree which is the result of proceedings dependent for their validity on the preliminary decree would survive the reversal of the latter decree This assumption, we have already pointed out, is unsupportable Kuriya Mal v Bishambhar Das(1), has been re-affirmed by the Allahabad Court in Narain Das v Balgobind(2) The Madras High Court has held that an order of remand as appealable even after the passing of the final decree subsequent to the remand See Subba Sastrs v Balachandra Sastri(3), and Mullikarjuna v Patl aneni(4)

For the reasons shove mouttoned we overrule the first preliminary objection also

Exhibit L was executed by the first defendant a mother Pakku Nathar along purporting to act as grandian of the first defendant and his sister | Exhibit A was executed both by the first defendant and his mother but she does not describe herself therein as his guardian. A companson of dates easily shows that both documents were executed during the continuance of the gnardianship of the guardian of property appointed by Court The Subordinate Judge has found that the first defendant was below 18 years when the guardian was appointed Air Smurasa Arvanear has asked as to come to a different conclusion on the evidence, but on this point we may briefly remark that no evidence sufficient to rebut the legal presumption that the first defendant was a minor when guardians of his person and property were appointed by the Court having parisdiction under Act VIII of 1890, has been laid pefore us

As regards Exhibit L, it has been contended that it is valid on the ground that it was executed by the first defendant's mother who was guardian of his person and de facto guardian of his property, if the debt was incurred for necessary purposes. But in the first place there is no proof that she was de facto guardian beyond the vegue statement of the plaintiff's eighth and ninth witnesses that her men managed the first defendant's villages, and there was no suggestion of the kind in Exhibit DD when a motion was made to the Court to remove Krishnaswami Iyer and appoint Rakka Nachiar In the second place the authorities cried on the appellant's behalf fall for short of establishing the proposition that when a guardian of a minor's property is appointed under the Guardians and Wards Act, persons other than such guardians can legally bind the minor's estate. It would be exceedingly mean ement for the minor's interests if there were such conflict of authority between guardians. The legislature has in fact provided for such an eventuality so for as guardians as pointed by Court ero concerned. Section 7 (2) of the Guardiane and Wards Act takes away the power of any guardian not so appointed Duraterion hy declaring that the Court's order appointing a guardian under the Act will have the off ct of romoving any other guardian. Sections 29 and 30 provide against the lawfully appointed gnardian encumbering or alienating portions of the minor's estate without the Court's permission In Nathu v Balwantrao(1) it was held that an adver e act of mother while acting as de facto gnardin of her son in disposing of the minor's property as if it was her own and purporting to pay her own debts although the purchase-money was in fact applied in payment of dehts for which the minor was liable would not bind the minor for whom a cuardian had been appointed by Court The effect of appointments under the Act of extinguishing the powers of a natural guardian is discussed in Ram Clunder , Chaeda Lal(2). No doubt these cases me not on all fours with the present, hut they show how other Courts have treated the powers of certificated quardians as exclusive and the language of the Act is clear onough In Abdul Khader v Chidambaram Chettinar(8) where the parties were Muhammedans, this Court held that persons purporting to act as de facto guardians and to meur debte in good futh for the henofit of a minor could not bind the minor's property by their acts, if in fact they had no legal status as quardians. The position of a mother after the appointment of a guardian by Court oppears to be no better, even though she may be quardian of the minor's person, as in this case. The want of authority of a de facto guardian is a good defence to a suit brought by a mortgugeo to enforce his mortgage against a minor. though if the positions were reversed and the minor were suing to set aside the mortgage, as was held in Nizam-ud-din Shah v Ananda Prasa 1/4), a Court might equitably decline to grant relief until the plaintiff compensated the mortgages to the extent to which he had henefited by the money advanced on the mortgage. Turning to the decisions cited on the other side, they do not help us much Honapa v Mhalpar(5) and Manishankar Prantican v Bat Muli(6) deal with the powers of natural guardians when no certificated guardian has been appointed. So also

In Ghard ullah v hhalah Singh(s) certain mortgages were contracted by the manager of an undivided Hinda family and the mother who obtained a centificate of guardianship did not get the Court s sanction under section 29 It is thus not a tast in joint Next it is contended that apart from Rakku Nachiar's Act being valid, the first defendant and those who claim under him are procladed from disputing the validity of Exhibit L, because in 1903 after attaining majority the first defendant undertook in a letter filed as Lighbit L (1), to see that this debt and that secured by Exhibit A were paid at an early date if the plaintiff arranged to take an assignment of Exhibit L from the original mortgages Mabomed Ibrahim

It is sought to make Lxbibit h (1) do duty as an estoppel, as a ratification of the suit honds (Lxhibits A and L), or as a foundation for a new contract between the first defendant and the plaintiff after the attainment of majority. The plaintiff's position is said to have been made worse by his acting on the first defendant's offer to pay promptly on condition of his taking the assignment (Exhibit M), but the plaintiff a statements at page 167 of the printed documents that the first defindant's mother represented her son to be 17 or 18 in 1596 or 1897 (the year when a guardian was appointed), that he got no record to show his age. and that he was aware of the guardianship petition being presented show that he was not willully kept in ignorance of the first defendant's minority, and there can be no estoppel if the person concerned knows the trath about the facts asserted Moreover estoppel cannot be invoked to defeat a plain provision of law , vide Madras Hindu Mutual Benefit Permanent Fund v Ragava Chetis(1) A mortgage can only be effected by a registered document and there is no registered document validly executed by the first defendant in existence. There is only an alienation made by his mother without authority Sarat Chunder Dey v Gopal Chunder Laha(2) can be distinguished by the circumstance that the District Jodge found that Ahmed, whose acquiescence in his mother's condoct was held to amount to estoppel, had reached majority at the date of mortgage Purmessur Otha v Mussamut Goolbee(S) relied on by Mr Srinivasa Ayvangar was muother case of a major permitting his mother to represent him as a minor and to mortgage ancestral property If in that case be had been in fact a minor his permis sion would have gone for nothing. Then too there can be no ratification of n void transaction, void owing to the piomisor possessing no cootractaal capacity at the time fuide Ramasuams Pandia Thalaiar v Anthappa Chettiar(4) and Pollock and Mulla's Cootract Act, page 56]

Nor can a void deed form a good consideration for n fresh contract made on attaining majority. In this case we are told that the first defendant was benefited by not being put into Court at once and by a change of creditors, and the promisee was benefited by the promise of the first defendant to pay the dept of Rs 3,000 These advantages may serve as consideration for the assignment, but this suit was brought on the mortgage, the cause of action is described in the plaint as starting from them. and no case of a new contract appears to have been pot forward till now Even in the prayer for additional issues at page 180 of the printed documents, this case is not clearly set out. A cause of action cannot be founded on an estoppel, nor does an estoppel arise from a representation of a mere intention such as the first defendant's intention to pay promptly-vide Halsbury's Laws of England, volume XIII, page 377, section 534

As regards Exhibit A it was executed both by the first defendant and his mother Decisions have been cited to show that it is not necessary for a guardina, to describe himself as a guardian, if he actually is one, but when a minor purports to act and execute for himself as in this case it would be a violent presumption to treat his mother as acting for him

Assuming however that her act was the act of a guardian, it is bid for the same reason as her execution of Exhibit L 112, because there was a guardian appointed by the Court at the The first defendant's execution of Exhibit A was had as being the act of a minor Again it is argued that the plaintiff is entitled to be reimbursed for necessaries supplied to the minor and to get a charge on his estate independently of the suit bonds Section 68 of the Indian Contract Act and the decision of Bhawal Sahu v Bay math Pertab Narain Singh(1) are quoted in support of this position and some of the items and oral evidence have been referred to in order to show what the cost of the minors maintenance was and how the money borrowed from the plaintiff was expended. On this point it will he sufficient to note that the Suburdinate Judge in paragraph 19 of his judgment found no evidence that the debts which Exhibit A discharged and those which the account (Libibit N), evidenced were all borrowed for the real necessity of the first defendant or Rakku Nachiar. In our opinion also the plaintiff failed to establish satisfactorily that the debts were incurred for the first defendant's henefit several of the dobts mentioned in Exhibit A. being incurred by his mother. The plaintiff evidently knew that he was dealing with a limited on ner as he states at page 170 of the printed documents in his evidence that he knew when Exhibit B was tiken, that Krishnaswami was appointed guardian, and that the first defendant and his mother told him that he (the guarding appointed by the Court) was giving Rs 20 for their maintenance every month. Exhibit B in date is after Exhibit L and before Exhibit A From Exhibit DD it appears that Rakku Nachar was given monthly Ra 50 and 41 halams of paddy, and although the cash parments were delayed for a time there is no such allegation as to the grain first defendant and his mother were not without necessaries for thour support, and we are not satisfied that they could not have lived within their income if they had tried Even if some of

Lastly, a question has been raised whether the lower Court should have given the plaintiff a decree on the admission of liability under both Lxhibits A and L contained in the first defendant's statement presented on February 27th 1900 and printed at pages 8 and 9 of the printed plendings. The plaint contains a prayer for a personal decree against the first defend-The first defendant is now dead and the 12th respondent 16 his legal representative. In the first defendant's first written statement, dated Sontenher 6th 1904, upon which issues were framed on November 30th 1904, he completely denied his liability Iu his deposition on July 18th 1905, he stated that his first written etniement was put in at the instance of the 5th defendant and his eccoud written statement at the instance of the plaintiff He added that the facts mentioned in the written statement put in through Mr Nagaontha Ayyar (2 c, the first) were true Exhibit IV is a notice given by the first defendant to the plaintift in August 1904 in which he alleged that the plaintiff had held out talse hopes to him hefore suit and had practised fraud in respect of the documents for one thousand and three thousand by which Exhibits L and A are evidently intended, and that they were unsupported by consideration and invalid Section 152 of the Code of Civil Procedure in force when the suit was tried declares that if at the first hearing of a suit it appears that the parties are not at issue on any question of law or of fact, the Court may at once pronounce judgment Section 153 centains a similar provision for suits in which there are, as here, several defendants No doubt admissions may be made by parties at any time, but seeing that the Court of First Instance did not treat the first defendant's second statement as a confession of judgment and pass a decree against him on the strength of it, we are of opinion that it can only be treated as a piece of evidence, and that not conclusive looking to the ercumstances under which it was made. These are it at its maker contradicted it before and retracted at atterwards, alleging that he had been induced to make it, that it was put into Court on a day when there was no hearing of the suit and after the framing of issues, and that at the time it was made the first defendant appears to have parted with most, if not all, of his rights over his property.

We think that the appellunt is not cutified to any rolled in this suit and we would dismiss his appeal with costs of fifth and sixth (one set) and the fourth and twelfth respondents (one separate set)

Order -The petitioner has been convicted of an offence under section 423, Indian Penal Code This little used section of the Penal Code makes punishable the net of a person who dishonestly or frandulently executes an instrument which purports to transfer any property and which contains any false statement relating to the consideration for such transfer, or relating to the person or persons for whose use or henefit it is really intended to operate What the accused did in the present case is stated in the Snh Magistrate's judgment. Knowing that the proseoution second witness was in undisturbed enjoyment of half the nortice of the land in question, that the prosecution second witness had sold that portion to the prosecution first witness for Rs 75, and that the prosecution first witness was in the enjoyment of that portion, the accused in order to cause loss to the prosecution first witness and gain to himself sold the whole land for Ra 120 only, while the half of it was sold for Rs 75 The Magistrate also finds the statement in the document that the whole land at the time of the execution of it was in the accused's enforment and possession to he falso. It is clear that the law does not make pnuishable every false statement contained in an instrument of transfer It must be a statement relating to the consideration or to the person to be benefited thereby In this case it is the first prosecution witness, not the purchaser who complained Tho first-class Magistrate who heard the appeal found three false statements contained in Exhibit C, viz., (1) an assertion that the whole plot belonged to the appellant, (2) the mention of the sale price as Rs 120 whereas a moiety had been sold for Rs 75 and (3) a statement that the veadee purchased the whole land whereas the vendor was only logally entitled to sell a moiety. The last of these is obviously not a statement of the character made punishable under the section It is not, as the Magistrafe suggests, a falso statement as to the person for whose benefit the sale is to operate, for the identity of the vendor or vendee is not disguised The Public Prosecutor is nuable to support the conviction on the second head and the attempt has been rightly Re Mania abandoned, for the fallacy lies in confusing consideration with value It is hardly necessary to point out that the different Spencer, J portions of the same field may differ in value. The first state ment does not relate to the consideration for the transfer Public Prosecutor argues that the property itself is the consideration from one point of view, but this is not the ordinary meaning of the term, nor is it the meaning of the term where it is employed in Emperor v Mahabir Singh(1) which is the only reported case on this section of the Code so far as I am aware Tho property is the subject of the sale the price is the consideration. I consider that no offence has been made out under section 428 by the facts of this case as found. The conviction is therefore set aside and the fine, if paid, must be refunded It may be pointed out that the alteration sentence ordered by the first class Alagis trate was illegal as it amounted to an enhancement under . ruling in Queen Empress v Ishri(2)

JUDGMENT—This is a smit brought by the plantiff, Mr. A. M. Ross, to recover damages from the Secretary of State for India in Council in respect of two orders made by the Collector of Ganjam, by one of which a local agent working under the Assam Labour and Emigration Act, 1901, was suspended and the depost maintained by him closed to recruiting, while by the other the local agent was dismissed, and also for alleged defamation of the plaintiff by the Governor of Madres in Council in a Government Order passed on the appeal of the plaintiff and other interested parties against the Collector's orders above referred to

Under part IV of the aforestid Act of 1901, is amended in 1908, recruiters known as graden stridars are sent by employers in Assam to rectinit labourers in Ganjam and other places under a license i sued by the authorities in Assam and counter-signed by the authorities of the district in which the recruiting is to be carried on. They are under a statutory duty to provide a proper place of acc immediation, or depot, for the recruited coolies, and to get each cooly's labour contract executed before an appointed officer. Employers may also appoint local agents to ampervise them

In the exercise of powers conferred by section 91 of the Act, as aminded, the Government of Madras is add the Notification of 6th October 1909, relaxing or dispensing with the requirements of 6th October 1909, relaxing or dispensing with the requirements of certain sections of the Act in the case of garden sirdars working noder the control of the Assam Labour Supply Association and other bedies on certain specified conditions. One of these conditions required the Association to employ a local agent in each district where recruiting was carried on, for the purpose of representing the Association in all matters connected with the supervision of the sirdars. Under condition 8 the local agent was to provide suitable accommodation (a depth for the labourers engaged Under condition 9 he was responsible for proventing to the best of his ability all acts of missonidate on the part of the sirdars, and inder condition 10 the license of any local agent, who might be found not to have evere sed due care in preventing misconduct on the part of the sirdars, was lable to be cancelled by the District Magistrate

On the 19th February 1910, the District Magistrate of Ganjam issued notice to T S Rama Sastri, local agent of the Association in the district, calling on him to show cause why his license should not be suspended for habitually allowing illegal recruitment in the Agency tracts where recruitment was prohibite 1 and on the 21st Fibruary he passed the first of the orders complained of suspending this agent's license pending the passing of orders us to its cancellation. A copy was sont to the Sub Collector and Police Inspector, Berhampore, who were request d to see that the depot wis closed to recruiting until further orders issue? By a subsequent order of the 2oth July 1910 mide up n the report of the Special Assistant Agent as the result of an enquiry held by lum, the District Magistrate cancelled the local agent's hooses.

It was admitted before me that, if condition 10 giving it e District Magistrate power to cancel the local agent's license for fulture to exercise due supervision was valid, the legality of the dismissal could not be questioned in the present case, but it was contended that the condition was ultra vires as section 67 specified the cases in which the District Magistrate could dismiss local agents, and was exhaustive. I had no hesitation in overruling this contention, as it seemed to me that the condition was a nocessary an I proper one to be made under section 91 of the Act as amende! So much is left to the local agent under the Autification, that it would not may opinion be safe to make these relaxations without reserving to the District Vagistrate power to dismiss a local agent who proves untrastiverthy. I hold the order of dismissal was not open to objection

It is otherwise with the order of the 21st February closing the depôt to recruiting. That depot was available not only to the local agent as the place he was bound to provide under coodition 8, but also to garden surfairs as the place they were bound to provide under section 62 of the Act when recruiting under the provisions of the Act without the henefit of the concessions. As correctly pointed out in the Government Order containing the alleged defamiation of the plunisfit, the concessions had not the effect of limiting the right of working under the Act, or preventing employers from so doing, if they preferred to conform to the more ardions and exacting requirements of the regular procedure. It is I think clear that the District Magistrate's order of the 21st February closing the Berhampore depôt to recruiting by gardeo sirdars working under the Act was ultra tires.

The legality of the other part of the order suspending the local agent pending enquiry was questioned at a late stage of the case, on the ground that the power to dismiss under coordition 10 did not include a power to suspend. The decision in Barton v. Taylor (1) that a Colonial Legislative Assembly has no power to suspeed membere as well as to expel, proceeded on the ground that suspeasion would deprive the constituency of its representation and does not appear to cover the present case. The plaintiff has also referred to an American decision—Gregory v. New York (2) Seshadri. Anyangar v. Naturqu. Ayyan (3) in support of his contention. I am inchoed to think that a statutory power of dismissal does not include a power of suspension but the plaintiff has failed to show that he incurred any additional damages by reason of the suspension, and in the view I take of the case it is innecessary to decide the point.

Assuming the Collector's orders closing the depot to recruiting and suspending the local agent to be suffer wires, the next question is, bas the present plaintiff any cause of action ugainst any one? The local agent and the gardee sindais were in the service of the Assum' employers constituting the Assum Libour Supply Association, and it was their business which was interrupted by the closing of the depote. The plaintiff who is the agent of the

BEORRETARY OF STATE

Association in the districts of Gunjan, Godaveri and Vizagapriam held agreements and powers of attorney from several persons and companies woo king in the Association, and, though not filling any statutory capacity under the Act, represented the Association in these Districts, exercised a general supervision over their local agents and garden eirdars, and corresponded on behalf of the Association with the local authorities in all matters relating to recroiting. For his services he was entitled under his agreements to be paid Re 7 a head for each labourer recruited, and the plaint alleges that the closing of the depôt which put astop to all work of emigration interfered seriously with the plaintiffs busicoss, privooted him from earning his commission during the period of the closure of the depôt, and caused heavy loss to bim personally

The question then at once arises whether the plaintiff s claim for damages is not too remote. The general rule is stated in Mayne on Damages "If A breake his contract with B or inflicts some harm on B, the result may be most hurtful to C Bot C cannot in general soe A," citing as to that the judgment of Lord Penzance in Simpson v Thomson(1), and the same rule is laid down in Dicey's Parties to an Action, ruls 83. page 383 For the plaintiff reliance has been placed on National Phonograph Compiny v Edison-Bell Consolidated Phonograph Company(2), in which it was held that, if A by fraud induces B to break his contract with C and C austains damage thereby, he may sue A In the present case it is not alleged that there has been my breach of contract with the plaintiff, and it does not appear to me that the present point trose or was considered in that case That case therefore is no authority for the plaintiff but it is unnecessary to consider the point further as in my opinion the cost fails on another ground

Assuming that the action of the Collector was tortious, the next question is, is the plaintiff entitled to recover unliquidated damages for such tout from the Secretary of State in Conneil under the provisious of the Government of India Act, 1858? For the plaintiff reliance was placed on The Secretary of State for In his v Hirs Bhinji(3), Vijaya Ragaia v. The Secretary of State for India(1) and Jehangir M Cursetzi v Secretary of State(2) [and on appeal Jehangir v Secretary of State(3)] was also referred to The Advocate-General for the defendant relied mainly on the decision in Shuabhajan v The Secretary of State for India(4), following Rogers v Razendro Dutt(1), Tobin v The Queen(6), McInerny v The Secretary of State for India(7) and the Secretary of State for India in Council v Kasturi Reddi(8). The important decision of the Prevy Council in Secretary of State for India v Moment(9), which has only just been reported, was also referred to by the planniff at the close of the argument

The fundamental position, se etated by their Lordships in that case following the judgment of Sir Barnes Placock in Pennsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company v The Secretary of State 10), is that, as logards hability to be sued, the Secretary of State is to be in no position different from that of the old East India Company before the passing of the Government of India Act. 1058 The plaintiff his therefore to prove that he would have had a cause of action against the Last India Company if the case had arisen before 1808 In Pennsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Compania The Secretary of State 10). the plaintiff had been injured by the negligence in the course of their employment of workmen employed by Government at the Government dockyard at Kidderpole Stress was laid on the fact that Government in India was obliged to engage in transactione partaking more of the character of private business than of affairs of State, such as this dockyard the Bengal Marine Bullock Fram, river steamers, etc "There is a great and clear distinction," it was said, " between acts done in the exercise of what are usually termed sovereign powers. and acts done in the conduct of undertakings which might be carried on without having such powers delegated to them." and at the close of the judgment, it was held, that the workmen having been employed by Government, and the act complained of being of a private nature and not done in the everyse of

That was all that was decided, but certain dicta in the judgment were subsequently interpreted by the Calcutta High Court in Nobin Chunder Day v The Secretary of State for In lig(1) as asserting the immunity of the Company from suit in respect of all acts done in the exercise of sovereign powers whether the suit was based on contract or on tort, thus conferring on the Company a larger immunity thin is ei joyed by the Crown in England In Harr Bhann v The Secretary of State for India(2), a suit to recover money alleged to have been illegally levied. INES J refused to follow the Calcutta case but dismissed the suit on the merits, leaving each party to bear his own costs Even so an appeal was proferred by the successful defendant on the ground that the Court ought to have declined unrisdiction as the act complained of was done in the exercise of sovereign powers This contention was over ruled in a loarned indigment distinguishing between acts of State over which the Conet has no jurisdiction—as regards which the agent is protected as wall as the principal-and acts, such as those in that case and in this, done under colour of Mnnicipal law as to which the agent at any rate is always responsible. The Secretary of State for India v. Hari Bhanpi(3) The only question before the Appellate Court was one of jurisdiction, and they decided nothing as to the grounds on which hability could be brought home to the Company with success for acts done by public servants in India in cases within the jurisdiction of the Courts This question was however discussed by Inves, J, at the trial Hart Bhangs v The Secretary of State for India(2) In the first place the learned Judge drew the inference from the preamble to Bengal Regulation III of 1793 (which he set out) that the Company had submitted questions such as arose in that case (the alleged illegal levy of silt daty) to the arbitrament of the Courts In the second place, he came to the conclusion that a Petition of Right would be against the Crown in England in a similar case, and decided that the liability of the Company for an act of this kind done in the filleged exercise of sovereign powers could not be less. The indigment therefore did not cover the present case, in which no money of the plaintiff has come into the builds of Government and in which the plaintiff would have no remedy against the Crown on a Petition of Right Indeed, referring to the case of Rogers v Rajendro Dutt(1), the learned Indge remarked that it might be authority for the position that the l'ast Iodia Company or the Secretary of State would not be hable to be sued for the recovery of anliquidated damages for a wrong, which is the present case

It certainly seems a reasonable position that (as held by the learned Judge) the liabilities of the East India Company cannot have been any less than those of the Crown in England on a Petition of Right, which extend, not only to detection of the land, chattels or money of the subject, but also as now settled, to breach of contract-Thomas v Reg (2) Whether the Company enjoyed the same ammunity as the Crown with regard to torts is of course a very different matter Peningular and Oriental Steam Natigation Company v The Secretary of State(3) is antbority for the proposition that it did not do so with regard to transactions which might have been carried on by a private individual Whether it did so with regard to acts done in the exercise of sovereign powers but under colour of municipal law cannot porhaps be considered settled conclusively until their Lordships have bad an opportunity of coasidering the case of Rogers v Rajendro Dutt(1), in which "the irresponsi bility of the supreme power" for a certain tortions act committed under the orders of the Government of India by an officer in its service was assumed, and justified on the ground that the officer who does the act is himself hable, and it is nanecessary to recognise an immunity so extensive for the purposes of the present case Two decisions of the Irish Courts as to the Lord Licutenant of Ireland may be cited on one side, and namerous English decisions as to Colonial Governors on the other cases where the act had neither been ordered nor ratified by the Crown, have been careful to point out that there were less technical grounds on which such immunity could be justified, grounds which appear to be equally applieable to the East India Company Thus in Canterbury v Reg (1), where an ex-speaker of the House of Commous sought to recover damages for the loss of his furniture in the fire which destroyed the Houses of Parlinment and was occasioned by the negligence of the servants of the Commissioners of Woods and Forests who were in charge of the building, Lord LYNDHURST, LC. pointed out that the Commissioners were public officers appointed to perform certain duties entrusted to them by the Legislature, and that though they were appointed by the Crown that would not make the Crown responsible for their neglect or misconduct any more than high officers of State such as the Lord Chancellor or Post master-General were responsible for the neglect or misconduct of subordinate officials appointed by them, and that, if the Crown would not be responsible for the neglect or misconduct of the Commissioners themselves, it must be equally irresponsible in the case of their subordinates And in John v The Queen (2), in which it was sought to recover damages from the Crown for the action of the Captain of a ship of war in destroying a vessel supposed to be engaged in the slave trade, the second ground on which the immunity of the Crown was based was that the rule which makes masters or principals responsible for torts committed by their servants or agents in the course of their employment was inapplicable between the Crown and the Captain of a ship of war, Story on Agoncy has quite recently been treated as of the highest authority and followed by the flouse of Lords in settling the vexed question whether the principal is responsible for wrongs committed by the agent in the course of his employment for his own benefit as well as for wrongs committed by him for the benefit of his princ pal, Lloyd v Grace, Smith, and Co (3), and in Story it is broadly laid down that Governments do not " Section 319 -It is plain, that Govern come within the rule mont itself is not responsible for the misfeasinces, or wrongs, or negligonces, or omissions of duty of the subordinate officer, or agents engined in the public service, for it does not undertake to guarantee to any persons the fidelity of any of the officers or agents, whom it employs, since that would involve it, in all its operations, in endless embarrassmonts, and difficulties, and losses, which would be subversive of the public interests. In Dhaljee Dadajee v East India Company(3), the Supreme Court of Bombay held that an action of trespass for alleged trespass in breaking and entering the plaintiff's house and taking away books under a warrant from the Governor of Bombay in Council would not lie against the Last India Company, unless it was shown to have ordered or ratified the act complained of-thus negativing the position that the Company could be made responsible like an ordinary principal merely on the ground that the act was done by the agent in the course of employment The decision in Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company v The Secretary of State(4, which has been plready examined, only makes an exception in the case of undertakings of a private nature carried on by the Company, and in no way affects the application of the principle to acts done by the servants of the Company in the exercise of the sovereign powers delegated to it

The plantiff however relies on the decision of Kerman, Muthuswam Attar and Hurchins, JJ in Vijaja Ragata v Ihs Secretary of State for Indua(9), that the Secretary of State for Indua(9), that the Secretary of State in Council was liable in damages for the illegal action of the Governor of Madras in removing the plantiff from the Office of Minnerpal Councillor under the Iowns Improvement Act (III of 1878) Phat docusion does not proceed expressly on the ground that the Company would have been liable like an ordinary employer for acts done by its servants in the course of its employments, and indeed this part of the case appears to have received very little consideration Keenan, J merely refers to Forester v Secretary of State for India in Council(1), in which WALLIE J the defendant was held hable to pay the plaintiff the value of certain arms illegally seized by Government in India with interest at the rate of 12 per cent. The point argued in that ease was whether a seizuro was an act of State, if not, it was a s izure in respect of which a Petition of Right would be a minst the Crown in England, and the liability of the Secretary of State in Council does not seem to have been disputed. That case does not seem to be any authority for holding the defendent hable in damages for the act of the Government of Madras in wrongly dismissing a Municipal Councillor from his office other learned Judges forming the inspority appear from their statements to have proceeded on an admission made by the Advocate General who appeared for the defendant that "if the Government would have been answerable otherwise. Section 416 (now section 79) of the Code of Civil Procedure would make the Secretary of State hable Section 416 is as follows " buits by or against the Government shall be instituted by or against [as the case may he] the Secretary of State for India in Conneil It has since been decided in Ralsigh v Goschen(2), that if a body such as the Governor in Council committed a tort assuming of course that they were amenable to the jurisdiction of the Court, a suit would not be against them in their official capacity but only as individuals. Such a suit could not be said to be a suit against Government Further it could scarcely have been intended in an enactment as to procedure to effect a change in the substantive law and make the Secretary of State in Council hable where he was not hable before However, it the Legislature had such an intention, it is now settled by the decision of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in Secretary of State v Moment(3), that an enactment adding to or tiking away from the liability of the Secretary of State in Conneil to he sued as settled by the Government of India Act, 1858, is ultra rives of the India Legislature, as opposed to the provisions of the Indian Council's Act, 1861. It appears to me therefore that the decision in Vijaya Rāgata v The Secretary of State for India(1) is no longer of authority, and in any case does not preclude me from holding on the authorities already ofted that the Company could not have been mude hable for the tortious acts done by their servants in India, in the exercise of sovereign powers, which it had not ordered or ratified, merely on the ground that they were done in the course of employment.

If the Company could not have been held hable for acts such as these on the ground that they were done by its servants in the course of their omployment, the only other ground of liability I can think of as applicable to the present case is that the acts were ordered or ratified by it. In the present case the plaintiff relies on an alleged ratification of the orders complained of by the Governor in Council of Madras in GO. No. 48 of 12th October 1910 Only part of the order was communicated to the plaintiff, but the whole must be looked at to ascertain whether Government ritified the orders or not, as this question in no way turns on whether the ratification was communicated or not . Buron v Denman(2) It may, I think, be surmised that Government had been indvised that the closing of the depot to recruiting under the Act no distinct from recruiting under the notification was illegal, and they point out this mistake, though in an earlier part of the order they "consider the present necessities of the case have been met by the District Magistrate's action."

On the whole I think the order is not expressed in sufficiently clear and unambiguous terms to amount to a ratification, but the point is immuteral, as it seems to me the Government of Madias had no authority from the Company, and have no authority from the Secretary of State now, either to commit tortious acts themselves or to ratify them when committed by others. The authority of the Government of Madras is derived from the Last-India Company Act, 1793, and the Government of India Act, 1833, under which the whole Civil Government of the Presidency was vested and continues vested in the Governor and Councillors. In Dhalgee Dadajee

v East-India Company(1), Sir Erskine Perry held that the only ratification which would bind the Company in such a matter was a ratification by the Court of Proprietors itself

For the foregoing reasons at seems to me that, as this is not a case in which a Potition of Right would be against the Crown at the instance of the plaintiff, and as the Company would not have been hable for the acts of its servants merely on the ground that they were done in the course of employment, and, as the acts complained of in this case have not been shown to have been ratified by the Scattery of State, who has succeeded under section 3 of the Government of India Act, 1859, to the powers of the Directors and the Court of Proprietors, this part of the plaintiff's case must ful

The decision mey, however, be rested on nerrower grounds The orders of the District Megistrate suspending the local agent and closing the depot to recruiting would appear to have been nassed by him as incidental to the statutory power, conferred upon him by the Act of 1901 as amended and the notification made thereunder, to dismiss the local agent, and, if this be so, it is well settled that in exercising such authority or in exceeding it he cannot be considered to have been the agent of the authority eppointing him se as to lender the letter hable. This was the first ground of decision in Tobin v The Queen(2), already referred to, in which it was held that, independently of the doctrino that the King can do no wrong, the Crown could not be made liable for the action of a Naval Captern purporting to act under the Slave Trade Acts in soizing and destroying the plaintiff's vessel, es he was not acting in obedience to the command of Hor Mniesty but in the supposed performance of a duty imposed upon him by Act of Parliament. In that case ERLE CJ, observes -"Then es Captun Douglis would not have been an agent of the Crown of he had lawfully serzed and kept the vessel under the statete, still less ought he to be held such agent in seizing and destroying it illegally " Applying this principle it has been hold in Sluabhajan v. the India Legislature, as opposed to the provisions of the Indian Council's Act, 1861 It appears to me therefore that the decision in Vilaua Ragava v The Secretary of State for India(1) is no longer of authority, and in any case does not preclude me from holding on the anthorities already cited that the Company could not have been made hable for the tertious acts done by their servants in India, in the exercise of sovereign powers, which it had not ordered or ratified, merely on the ground that they were done in the course of employment

If the Company could not have been held hable for acts such as these on the ground that they were done by its servants in the course of their employment, the only other ground of liability I can think of as applicable to the present case is that the acts were ordered or ratified by it In the present case the plaintiff relies on an alleged ratification of the orders complained of by the Governor in Council of Madras in GO. No 48 of 12th October 1910 Only part of the order was communicated to the plaintiff, but the whole must be looked at to ascertain whether Government rutified the orders or not, as this question in no way turns on whether the ratification was communicated or not Buron v Denman(2) It may, I think, he surmised that Government had been advised that the closing of the depot to recruiting under the Act as distinct from recruiting under the notification was illegal, and they point out this mistake, though in an earlier part of the order they "consider the present necessities of the case have been met by the District Magis trate s action "

Ou the whole I think the order is not expressed in sufficiently clear and unambiguous terms to amount to a ratifica tion, but the point is immaterial, as it seems to me the Government of Madius bad no anthority from the Company, and have no authority from the Secretary of State now, either to commit tortious acts themselves or to ratify them when committed by others The authority of the Government of Madras is derived from the East India Company Act, 1793, and the Government of Indra Act, 1838, under which the whole Civil Government of the Presidency was vested and continues vested in the Governor and Connaillors In Dhakee Dadagee

v East-India Company(1), Sir Erskine Perry held that the only ratification which would bind the Company in such a matter was a ratification by the Court of Prophotors itself

For the foregoing reasons it seems to mo that, as this is not a case in which a Petition of Right would be against the Crown at the instance of the plaintiff, and as the Company would not have been hable for the acts of its servoots merely on the ground that they were done in the course of employment, and, as the acts complained of in this case have not been shown to have been ratified by the Secretary of State, who has succeeded under section 3 of the Government of India Act, 1859, to the powers of the Directors and the Court of Proprietors, this part of the plaintiff a case loss of ful

The decision may, however, be rested on nerrower grounds The orders of the District Magistrato suspending the local agent and closing the depot to recruiting would appear to have been passed by him as incidentel to the statutory power, conferred npon bim by the Act of 1901 as amended and the notification mede thereunder, to dismiss the local agent, and, if this be so, it is well settled that in exercising such anthority or in exceeding it he cennot be considered to have been the agent of the enthority appointing him so as to sendor the latter hable. This wes the first ground of decision in Tobin v The Queen (2), elready referred to, in which it was beld that, independently of the doctrine that the King can do no wrong, the Crown could not be made hable for the action of a Naval Captein purporting to act under the Slave Trade Acts in seizing and destroying the plaintiff's vessel, es ho was not octing in obedience to the command of Her Mojesty but in the supposed performance of a duty imposed upon him by Act of Parliament. In that case Estr CJ, observes -"Then os Captum Douglas would not have been an agent of the Crown of he had lawfully seized and kept the vessel under the statute, stall less ooght he to be held such agent in seizing and destroying it illegally " Applying this priociple it has been hold in Stuabhajan . in regard to the custody of hay soized by him under statutory authority conferred by the Code of Criminal Procedure. In such cases even ratification would make no difference, because there can be no ratification unless the not is done on behalf of the principal in the first instance. Buron v. Denman(1), and notes to Armory v. Delamirie(2). In 4 Inst., 317, Lord Coke says—"By the common law he that receive ha trespass and agreeth to a trespass after it is done, is no trespasser, unless the trespass was done for his nee or for his benefit and then his agreement subsequent amount of to a commandment, for in that case Omnis rathabitio retrotrahhitur et mandato acquiparatur"

The plaintiff also sicks to recover damages in this auit for an alleged libel in the opening sentence of G O No 948, Public, dated 12th October 1910, which was passed by Government on complaints made by the plaintiff bimself and by two of the firms from whom he held powers of attorney, namely Mossrs Williamson Magor & Co Culentta and Messis Balmer Laurie & Co., British India Tea Company, Calcutta, of the orders of the District Magistrate which are the subject of this suit. The illeged libel is contained in the first sentence of the order - Government see no reason to doubt that there had been illegal recruitment in the agency tracts of the Ganjam District by sirdars working under the Assam Labour Supply Association and ire of opinion that the conduct of Mr Ross (the plaintiff) in that matter has not been whelly above suspicion" The order directs copies to be sent to the District Magistrate of Gantain and the District Magistrates of Vizaga patam and Godavari in whose districts Mr Ross was working on the same lines, to Mr Ross hunself, and to the two firms already mentioned This is the only publication relied on The defendant has not thought proper to plead justification, but has elected to rely on his other defences

As to this, I am in the first place of opinion for reasons already stated that no suit lies against the defendant for a lifel published by the Madras Government, at all events unless it be shown that publication was made under the orders of the Secretary of State, or on his behalf and afterwards ratified by him. A sumlar conclusion was arrived at by Chandaraelah, J.

Even if the suit had been brought against the members of the Madras Gove 1 m at at the date of the order and this Court had jurisdiction to entertain such a suit it must still in my opinion have failed in the ground that the publication having been made by such Government in the execution of its duty. and without exceed ng it is absolutely privileged. In Oliver v. of the decision in Original Suit No 430 of 1906 In that case the present plaintiff, who held a five years' lease of the village from the registered landholder, ened the present defendant to recover rent for fashs 1314 and 1315 in the shape of raisbagam, or landholder's share of the produce, of certain perovati lands in the village in the occupation of the defendant. To enable the plaintiff to succeed it was necessary for him to show under section 7 of the Rent Recovery Act 1865, that he had tendered a proper patts to the defendant for each fash, or that it had been agreed to dispense with the tender Under section 4 the patts had to contain the local description and extent of the land. The plaintiff pleaded that he had tendered s proper patta for each fash. The defendant denied the tenders, and pleaded further that the pattas alleged to have been tendered were not proper metancing certain payments claimed Ho pleaded further that "the extent of the defendant's perovati land (that is, of the land in respect of which the plaintiff claimed rent) has been very much overrated " I think that must be taken as referring to the extent in the patta as well as to the extent in the plaint, which would merely reproduce it . and I thick the Dietrict Munsif who tried the case so under stood it, as in his careful summary of the written statement he makes no express mention of the plea as to the extent of the land and evidently treats it as part of the plea that the pattas tendered were improper, and I think it was also covered by the issue "wnether the pattas so tendered are proper" and by the terms of the judgement on that issue, which is as followe "The terms of the pattas, Exhibit F, do not contain any objectionable matter" If this view of the pleadings is correct, there is an end of the case, because the question of the extent of the defendant's peroyati holding was directly and substantially in issue in the previous suit and must be taken to have been heard and finally decided in the plaintiff's favour, as such a decision is necessarily involved in the decree passed in the plaintiff's favour, seeing that, if the decision had been the other way, it would under the Rent Recovery Act have been fatal to his suit which must have been dismissed on the ground that the patta was not a proper one

In his judgment Sankaran Nair, J, observes that a decree for ront does not necessarily involve the decision that a proper patta has been tendored, as the parties may dispense with them, hut where as here tender of a proper patta is alleged on the one side and denied in the other and there is no singestion that tender has been dispensed with, it seems to me that the decree for rent does involve the decision that a proper patta has been tendered

BAYYAN NAIDU U. SURYA-NARAYANA WALLIS, J

Apart from any question as to the terms of the patta, it seems to me that the extent of the defendant's holding of terovati land in the village was a matter directly and substantially in issue in the cuit, as it was in respect of this extent that the plaintiff was claiming raphagam, or landholder's share of the produce, from the defendant, and that it was necessary for him to prove this extent to enable a decree to he given in his favour, even if there had been no plea in the written statement, as there was, that the exteat had heen over-estimated In these curcumstances I think the decision on the sixth issue that the plaintiff was entitled to the rajabagam claimed in the pleint necessarily involved a decision that the extent of the defendant's peroyati land in the village was as alleged in the plaint, beceuse what he claimed was the rajahagam of this extent, and that this point must be taken to have heen decided in the plaintiff's favour

In either view the question of the extent of the defendant's holding of jeroyati land in the village having been directly and substantially in issue and having been, as we must take it, heard and determined because essential to the decision of the snit, cannot be raised ngain in the present suit for the rent of fash 1316 by the defendant's setting up that he was all along in occupation of only 5 acres in jeroyati land in the village and not of the extent all along claimed by the plaintiff

But even assuming that the propriety of the patta was not questioned in the former suit in the ground that the extent of the lands was wrongly shown and that the extent was not otherwise questioned by the defendant, I think that these being good grounds of defence to the suit might and night to have been raised, and must be deemed to have been matters expressly and substantially in issue in the furmer suit by ruttue of explanation IV to section 11 inf the Civil Procedure Code It seems to me that any ground of attack or defence which hy ritue of the explanation is deemed in have been directly and substantially in issue in a sait must also be deemed to have

RATTAN NAIDU SIRYA VARATANA heen heard and finally decided adversely to the party who failed to raise it. The proposition that failure to laise grounds of attack or defence which might and ought to have been raised does not make each grounds res judicata unless there is an express decision by the Court upon them appears to me to be wholly untenable. Courte of justice are not in the habit of deciding points not raised before them, and to say that the explanation only takes effect when they happen to do so appears to me to defeat the policy of the section and to render the explanation senseless as, held by the Allahabad High Court in Srs Gopal v. binding on the defendant" The eighth issue was "whether the whole of the 14 acres of land montioned in the plaint is defendints' jeroyati as alleged by the plaintiff, or only 5 acres perovati and the rest mum and cash rent paying land as alleged by the defendants" At the hearing a further question was raised whether the question of the propriety of the patta tendered was restudicata in consequence of the decision of the Court in Original Suit No 430 of 1906 which related to a suit for rent instituted by the plantiff against the defendants for fash 1314 The Dis trict Munsif held that the matter was not res julicala because the points in dispute were not raised in the provious suit, these points being the inclusion of mams and of money rent paying lands is warm paying lands, and the erronoous description of the lands for which the plaintiff is entitled to claim rout the merits he held that the patta tendered was not a proper one He was of opinion that part of the lands included in the patta was mam and was wrongly claimed by the plaietiff as jeroyati dir not decide the question wb-thei cash rent and not rent in kind was payable for part of the land. Ho apparently thought that the patta must be held to be incorrect in stating that war am was payable while cash ront was received till the end of fash 1818 The mistake complained of with regard to the description of the land was that the castern boundary was described as tho service mam of the defendant, while in the patta for fashing 1313 and 1311, it was described merely as defendants' mam I his was held by the Munsif to be improper although he did not decide the question whether the description of the boundary of the defendants' land as service mam was in fact correct or not He dismissed the plaintiff's suit. His judgment was confirmed on appeal by the District Judge who upheld the Munsil's view on the question of res judicata The Judge observed on the question of the correctness of the patta as follows -" Appellant does not seriously argue that the patta was a proper one ' The plaintiff preferred a Second Appeal to this Court | The question argued in Second Appeal was that the propriety of the patta was res judicata by the judgment in Original Suit No 430 of 1900 The appeal came on for hearing before Muyao and SANKALAN NAIR, JJ. The learned Judges differed in their views, Mi No. J. being of opinion that the plea of res judicita must be unheld.

BAYYAN NAIDU SURVA VIRATINA SUNDABA AYYAR, J

while SANKARAN NAIR, J. agreed with the opinion of the lower Courts that it should not be maintained. In the result, the Second Appeal was dismissed in accordance with the provisions of section 98 (2) of the Civil Procedure Code. The present appeal is therefore substantially against the judgment of SANKARAN NAIR, J. In the previous suit, Original Suit No 430 of 1906, the first issue was " whether the plaintiff tendered pattas to the first defendant for fashs 1314 and 1315 and whether the pattas tendered are proper" The tender of patta was held to he proved. The finding on the question of its propriety was in these terms -"The terms of the pattas. Exhibits E and F. do not contain any objectionable matter. I accordingly find the first issue in the affirmative" In the written statement in that suit marked as Exhibit C, in the present cuit, paragraphs 8 and 9 took objections to the correctness of the patta Paragraph 8 stated -"The pattas filed alleging having been tendered are not propor The terms in paragraph 3 of the plaint are not mamool terms." The terms referred to related apparently to the giving of firewood, the payment of interest and the amount of road cess payable by the ryot Paragraph 9 stated "The extent of defendants' perovati land has been very much over-estimated by the plaintiff" So far as the written statement was concerned the details of the overstatoment of the extent of the icrovati land were not stated and no specific objection was taken to the statement that some portion of the lands was wrongly mentioned as hable to pay waram instead of cash rent. The objection in the present suit with regard to the description of the eastern houndary may be left ont of account as it cannot be held to nffect the plaintiff's right to the land in question terial whether the defendants' land which forms the eastern houndary was his service mam or an mam of a different character so far as the relations between the plaintiff and the defendnnts with regard to the plaint land are concerned. The District Munsif did not find that the description of it as service man was incorrect. If does not appear to what points the evidence let in by the parties in the previous suit related with respect to the correctness of the patta, and the Mnnsif's finding throws no further light as it is expressed in general words "The terms do not contain any objectionable matter " The appellant's contention is that the defendants who set up that a proper patta had could to the propriety of the patta and that the judgment in the previous suit must be taken to be an adjudication that the terms of the patta were correct in every respect and that therefore they cannot raise any objection to the propriety of the patta in this suit which they might have failed to urge in the previous suit Except in the matter of the difference in the description of the eastern houndary which, in my opiuton, may he neglected it is not stated that the terms of the patta tendered for fusli 1316 were not similar to the patta for fash 1314 which was held to be a proper one in the previous suit. The District Munsif observes that the patta in question was virtually the same as that which was tendered for fash 1814 The correctness of this statement is not seriously disputed Mungo, J. observes - 'Had the issue in the provious suit relating to the correctness of the patta heen found in the negative, the plaintiff's suit must have been dismissed The finding in the previous suit that the pattas were proper, te, that they were such es the defendants were hound to accept, was a finding that the relationship of landlord and tenant subsisted between the plaintiff and the defendants in respect of the land entered in the pattas and I do not think that the defendants cen egain bo allowed to put the plaintiff to proof of his title" SANKARAN NAIR. J. held having regard to the general lenguage of the District Munsif's finding in the provious suit that there was no explicit adjudication there of the questions now raised, viz. whether a portion of the lands was man or ierovati and whether another portion was bulble to pay cush rent or waram learned Judge was further of opinion that as the suit related ouly to the rent for a particular year [P 1316], it did not necessarily require a decision as to the terms of the patta or the extent of the land for which rent was payable und that these questions are therefore not res sudicata The decision of the question depends on the interpretation to he placed on section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code which embodies the rule of res judicata. According to the section, the Court is forbidden to try "any suit or issue in which the matter directly and substantially in issue has been directly and substantielly in issue in a former suit between the same parties" The rule upplies subject to the other provisions of the section not BATTAN NAIDU U SUBTĂ NARAYANA SLNDARA AYTAB, J only to a cut tried before, but to an usue decided in a previous suit provided the matter directly and substantially in issue in the later snit was raised in the provious suit or in a substantial and direct issue in the previous snit. Explanation III lays down—

"The matter above referred to must in the former suit have been alleged by one party and either denied or admitted, expressly or impliedly, by the other." An implied denial is as effective as an express one. Explanation IV says, "Any matter which might and ought to have been made ground of defence or ittack in such former suit shall be deemed to have been a matter directly and substantially in issue in such suit."

The appellant contends that with respect to any issue in the former suit the parties were bound to put forward all grounds of attack or defence material for the decision of the issue and will be deemed to have done so even if they fulled to do so in fact, that the propriety of the patta was directly and substantially in issue in the provious suit, and that both the plaintiff and the defendants were bound to put forward every matter involved in the question of the correctness of the natta and that the decision that the patta was a proper one must be taken to bo a decision that there was no valid objection of any sort to it. and that the defendants cannot now he permitted to raise may matter relating to the propriety of the patta which he might have failed to raise before I am of opinion that these contentions must be unheld the learned counsel for the respondent rested himself on the arguments contained in the judgment of SANEABAN NAIR, J , and did not elucidate the poiots any further It becomes therefore necessary to examine the arguments contained in the judgment of that learned Judge He lays down the following propositions as I understand his judgment -

(1) The scope of the rule of res judicata as limited by the words 'directly and sabstantially in issuo' is not confined to the relief granted by the former east or to the property which was the subject matter therein

(2) The decision on a matter not essential for the relief finally granted in the former case, or which did not form one of the grounds for the decision itself, cannot be said to have been directly and substantially in issue, but, where the decision on a question was essential to the relief granted or the decise passed, or where it formed the groundwork of the decision, then the matter must be deemed to have been directly and substantially in resue in the suit

The difference between issues 'collateral' and 'direct' depends upon whether it was possible to pass the decree without any finding upon the particular issue

BAYYAY NALDU SURYA NANAYANA SUNDARA

- (3) With regard to the relief granted in a suit, the decroo may render it necessary to imply a decision on a question not expressly decided but with regard to issues no implication is necessary but we ought to have a clear decision to create a bar. The application of the latter part of the rule would of course be to cross where the subject matter of the two suits is different?
- (4) Explanation (4) does not dispense with the necessity of a finding upon a matter which might and ought to have been made a ground of defence or attack in the former suit unless that matter must be taken to have been involved in the actual decice passed in the case.
- (5) It is not enough to make the matter of an issue respidied that the decision of it in a different manner would be inconsistent with the decree in the previous case as such determination would not affect the actual decree passed in that case for the rent for fash 1314
- (6) A decree for rent does not accessarily involve the decision that a proper patta has been tendered

If therefore as a fact that question was not decided in the previous suit, we are not bound to imply that it was so decided

Now section 11 of the Civil Procedure Codo requires that the matter or issue should have been heard and finally decided by such Court. It does not say that it should have been decided in explicit terms. It cannot be doubted that if an adjudication on a matter is necessarily norobsed in the decision in a prior suit, the section must be understood to by down that it must be taken to have been heard and finally decided. Sankaran Nail, J, admits that the principle of an implied decision must be adopted so for as whatever is required by decree in the previous suit is concerned. But he lays down that it is not applicable with regard to issues. He does not say how then the judgment in suit is to be understeed. No such distinction is warranted by the language of the section. The suit and an issue put forward for train in the second sint arm treated on exactly the same footing in the section, and the test of respudicate with regard to each is whether the matter directly and anbstantially in issue in the later suit was the matter directly and substantially in issue in the suit ur in an issue in the earlier suit. The word "issue" in the expression "suit ur issue" must be distinguished from the use of the words 'in issue' in the expression "the metter directly and substantielly in issue" The latter expression as already stated is made applicable to both the later suit and an issue raised in it " Directly and substantially in issue" obviously meens ' directly and substantially in question, which would include everything necessarily involved" whether that expression is applied to the suit itself or an issue in it. This has to be horne in mind in interpretiue explanation IV also It speeks of "any matter which might and night to have been made ground of defence or attack in the former suit" The phrase "matter directly and substantially in issue" in the principal clause of the section is spoken of with reference to both the suit and issue Clearly therefore what ought to have been made ground of defence or attack with respect tu any assuo in the earlier suit must be taken to have been a matter directly and substantially in issue therein when the question is whether an issue in the earlier suit can be tried again in the later suit Again in deciding whether any matter is rea sudicata, the question is, what is necessarily involved in the actual judgment of the Court in the earlier suit, not what relief was granted by the decree, because it is the matter decided (expressly or by necessary implication) that becomes res sudicata is desirable to illustrate by a concrete example. Suppose a suit is instituted for one of the instalments psyable according to the terms of n bond. The defendant denies its genuineness and plends also absence of consideration, and issues are framed on both points The Court passes a decree for the instalment but records no explicit finding on either of the issues A suit is anhaequently instituted in the same Court for a second instalment und the defendant raises the same pleas as in the earlier suit The subject matter of the two suits is not the same and the dismissal of the second suit would not affect the actual decree passed in the earlier suit Con it be contended that the issues may be tried ugain in the secund suit? According to the learned Judge apparently they should be tried again. The executant of the bond, according to bim, though be cannot seek to recover back the amount decreed against him in the earlier suit, may between issues 'collateral' and 'direct.' according to the learned Judge, depends upon "whether it was possible to pass the decree without any finding upon the particular issue" I am unable to accept his position that though a finding might he necessary to pass the judgment in the previous suit, the issue should not be taken to have been decided (unless explicitly decided) if the result of the second suit would not be to reopen the estual decree in the previous suit. The result of such a position would be that the same issues may be reopened again and again in the same Court though such reopening would be inconsistent with the decree and judgment in every one of the previous suits. According to the learned Judge such inconsistency is immaterial. The decision of the Privy Conneil in Amanat Bibs v Imdad Husain(1) is referred to in support of this position. There were two earlier proceedings, one, a suit to esteblish a sub propriotery right as against a tslukdar, the other, a proceeding to recover the same property from the talukdar under the terms of a certain revenue circular on repaying to the talukder the arrears of revenue which he had peid to the Government The third proceeding in which the plea, of res judicate was raised was a smit to redeem a mortgage granted by the person who was plaintiff in the earlier proceeding Privy Council held that the third suit was not barred as res judicata because the cause of ection was different Their Lordships held that the canso of action to establish a sub proprietary right was obviously different from that in a suit for redemption though the property sought to be recovered was the same in issue, said their Lordships, was unite different in the two smits, and they interpreted the provisions in section 7 of Act VIII of 1859 which enacted that "every suit shall include the whole of the claim arising out of the cause of action" as not requiring that ' every suit shall include every cause of action or every claim which the party has, but only that every suit should include the whole of the claim arising out of the action, on which the suit is brought' It is now a well established proposition that though the subject natter of the higation and the rebef plaimed may he the same, different suits may be maintained by a plaintiff if the cause of action in each suit ba different were two stages in the second of the earlier proceedings. The first originated in an application by the plaintiff under a Revonue circular to recover the property The Settlement Officer who made the inquiry four d that the plaintiff had convey ed the property to the talakdar by a conditional sale which had become absolute in 1853 and that the plaintiff was further not entitled to recover the property as he had not repaid to the talakdar cortain arrears of revenue paid by the latter which he was bound to repay before chaming to recover the property Their Lordships held that this order under the special circular could not be treated as audicial proceedings at all. The plaintiff then had recourse to frosh proceedings on the ground that the payment of arrears by the talukdar must be treated as having heen made on his account The Settlement Officer then again decided that the property had been transforred to the talukdar by a conditional sale of the year 1303 which had become abso late Their Lordships held that the question in those fresh proceedings must be taken to have been morely "whother the plaintiff was entitled to recover the property which had been transferred by the Government to the talukdar on repaying to the talukdar the arrears of revenue which he had maid to Government," that being according to their Lordships the ciuse of action on which the plaintiff then claimed to recover. The marter in issue in the suit before their Lordships, they said, was "the respondent's right to redomption under the mortgage deed of 1824" Their Lordships thon observed, "It may be difficult to reconcile the position of the tunkdar as mortgages in 1851 with his position as absolute owner in 1853 under purchase from the mortgagor But if it he established that the respondent was a mortgagor in 1854 with the right of redomption, why should he he barred meroly because at an earlier date he may have had no right to the property at all?" This is the passage relied on by the loarned Judge for the proposition that the decision of an assie in the oarlier enit inconsistent with an assie in the later suit will not make the suit or issue in the later suit res judicata. I can find no such proposition laid down by the Privy Council. They did not regard the later suit as inconsistent with the decision in the former suit that there was a conditional mortgage of 1853 which, if it was in operation, had become absolute in 1853. Proceeding on the basis that the conditional mortgage had been established to be true, if the talukdar chose to take o mertgage in 1854 from the plaintiff and his subsequent helding was under that mortgage, their Lordships held that the mortgage of 1854 would farmed the plaintiff with a fresh cause of action, and a plaintiff need not combine in the same snit all his cause of action, though both smis might be for the recovery of the same property They did not say that in the later snit the execution of the conditional sale of 1853 or its having become absolute could be denied. The observation that it may be difficult to reconcile the position of the talukdar as mortgageo in 1854 with his position as absolute owner in 1858 under a purchase from the mortgagor meant no more than that it might appear to be improbable that a person who was absolute owner in 1853 would take a mortgage to 1854, but a mortgagee cunnot deny the title of his mortgagor, and if the talukdar chose to take a mortgage from the plaintiff in 1854 be could not say that the plaintiff did not obtain a fresh cause of action for redemption of that mortgage Oo the other hand, in Pahalwan Singh v. Maharaja Muheslur Buksh Singh Bahadoor(1), the Privy Cooocil applied the rule of an implied decision of an issue by a former adjudication although the property to the two sorts was different The lorged Judge seems to have been under the impression that in that case the decree in the later soit would re-open the decree in the ourher suit, but that was not the case, as the property in dispute in the two suits was different. It is of course necessary that in order that an issue may be res judicata the decision in the former suit must necessarily involve an adjudication in a particular way on the issue raised in the later suit and its adjudication in a contrary way in the later suit must be inconsistent with the adjudication which must be implied in the earlier suit. In one part of his indement the levined Judge observes that where the decision on a question was essential to the rehef granted or where it formed the groundwork of the decision, then the matter nust be deemed to have been directly and substantialty in issue in the suit, but he after wards restricts the scope of the second test to cases where the question was explicitly decided For this restriction I can find no warrant either in principle or in the language of the section

The statement that a decision on a matter not essential for the relief finally granted cannot be eard to have been directly and enbstantially in issue is unworkable in practice, where a snit is dismissed without any relief heing granted should really he whether the matter was essential for the decision in the earlier snit, not for the relief granted The decision of a Court proceeds on the matters put in contest by the parties ond its adjudication cannot be understood without regard to the actual contest. It is impossible to understand it merely with regard to the decree Soppose a suit for an instalment on a hand is dismissed, the defendant's plea heing that the hand is not genuine and that it is not supported by any consideration The Court does not record any explicit findings on these points, other of which would lead to the dismissal of the suit the plaintiff afterwards institutes a suit for another inslalment and the defendant raises the came pleas Can the plaintiff he permitted to say that the points should he tried agein and he should be given a decree if both points are found in his favour SANKARAN MAIR, J., conceeds that the granting of the relief may he taken to involve the decision of whatever point is necessary to support the decree But what points are to he taken os involved in the decree in the instance just put? How is it possible to decide a question of res judicata by a consideration of the relief alone which is granted and without a consideration of the jodgment in the case, and how is it possible to understand whot the Court decides in the judgment with out seeing what the contest between the parties was. The result of doing so would be to confine the doctrine of res judicata to the scope of the rule transit in rem judicatum forcopt where a matter directly and substantially in issue has been explicitly decided by the indement in a former sait). Suppose in the illustration already put of a defendant denving both the genuineness and consideration of an instal ment bond, the defendant in the second case admits the genuineness of the hend but denies only the passing of consideration for it If it is opon to the Court in the later suit to proceed on the footing of the genuineness of the bond, the question would arise whether the matter as to consideration is res judicata by the former indement. As no explicit findings on the points in contest were recorded in the judgment, the decision might have proceeded either on the ground that the hond was not gennine or that it was not supported by consideration, or on both grounds It might be proper in such a case to hold that the previous judgment did not necessarily imply a decision on the question of consideration Certainty is essential for the application of the rule of respudicata and the Court would not prevent the reagitation of a matter where it is not certain that the previous decision proceeded on a particular ground See Vythilinga Mudaliar v Ramachendra Naicker(1) If a suit for an instalment is dismissed for default no matter would be res sudscata in a claim for another instalment. If it is decreed ex parte, the genumeness of the hand and all questions as to its enforceability, so far as to justify a decree for the instalment would be res sudicata in a suit for another instalment The learned Judge apparently proceeds on the view that for some reason the scope of the rule of res judicata with regard to issues should be restricted as far as possible, and refers to the opinion of Stuart, CJ in Babu Lal v Ishri Prasad Narain Singh(2), and Muhammad Ismail v Chattar Singh(3), who regretted the application in this country of the principle of res sudicata to the trial of issues, and not morely to the subjectmatter in previous suits. It is unnecessary to consider whother there are good grounds for such regret. The rule was well established by the decisions of the Privy Council See Krivhna Behart Roy v Brojeswart Chowdranes(4) Pahalwan Singh v. BAYYAN NAIDU URYA ARAYANA SUNDAHA Bardial v Sheo Baksh Sing(1) In that case the plaintiff had previously instituted a suit for Rs 1.665 the balance of interest due on a bond for Rs 12.000 in a Court not competent to try suits exceeding Rs 5.000 in value The defendant hed pleaded that the bond was supported by consideration only to the extent of Rs 4.790, and that the amount already paid by him for interest exceeded the interest due on the actual consideration that had passed. The defendant's plea was upheld The plaintiff subse quently instituted a snit for the principal end interest due on the bond in a court competent to try a suit of that value The question was whether the decision in the previous suit as to the amount of consideration that bad passed for the bond was res sudicata in the subsequent suit Their lordships held that it was not The point was decided on the ground that the Court that decided the previous suit was incompetent to try the later suit for principal end interest The rule as to the necessity for the Court trying the previous suit having concurrent jurisdiction to try the later suit had also been laid down by the decisions of the Privy Council under Act VIII of 1859, although the language of section 2 of that Act did not in terms refer to that requisite Sir Richard Couch in pointing out that the rule already applied by the Privy Council while Act VIII of 1800 was in force was embodied in explicit terms in Act X of 1877 went on to observe that the issue as to consideration "was a 'collateral' rather than a 'direct' issue in the suit" He said ' the plantiff might have sneceeded without having a finding upon it if he had proved an admission by the defendant that the sum claimed was due for interest, or had shown that the Rs 2.475 (the sum alleged to have been paid for interest) had heen expre sly paid on account of the larger sum which he said the defendant owed for interest " This is immediately followed hy the sentence "If the decision of the Assistant Commissioner is conclusive he will, although he could not have tried the question in a snit on the lond, have bound the plaintiff as effectually as if he had jurisdiction to try that suit Their Lordships think that this was not intended and that by Court of competent sursdiction Act A of 1877 means a Court which has jurisdiction over the matter in the subsequent smit in which the decision is used as conclusive, or in other words, a Court of concurrent

the observation contained in the previous sentence was only dealing with the question of the necessity of concurrent jurisdiction in the court which tried the earlier suit, and he used the expression ' collateral in the sense of "not referring to the subject matter of the previous suit and that he did not mean that it was not necessary for the decision of the sait on the issues raised between the puties on the pleadings in the case. The observation was made with reference to the principle that the judgment of a court not having jurisdiction to try the later suit would not be res judicata on any issue in the earlier suit but only with respect to the actual subject matter of the previous suit. In Kun Bahadur Singh v Lucho Koer, 1), the decision in Mistr Ragha Bardial v Sheo Baksh Singh, 2) was treated as an authority only on the question that the adjudication of a court not having concurrent parisdiction with that trying the later suit would not make the decision of an issue res judicata Beth Misir Ragho Bardial v Sheo Baksh Singh(2) and Run Bahadur Singh v Lucho Koer (1). on the other hand proceed on the assumption that if there had been concurrence of jurisdiction in the two courts the finding on an assue in the earlier suit would have given rise to a successful plea of res judicata It would appear that in the Duchess of Aingston's case(3) which was reforred to by hir Richard Couch in the judgment in Missi Rugho Bardial v Sheo Baksh Sinjh(2) the expression ' direct issue" as opposed to a "collateral" one was used in the scuse of an issue directly determining the subject matter of the previous proceedings and not in the sense in which it is obviously used in the Indian statute There is in my opinion no foundation at all for making a distinction between an explicit decision and an implied decision of an issue in the application of the doctrine of res julicata. provided the matter rused in the issue was directly and substantially in issue in the earlier suit. If the decision was not sufficiently expucit that would no doubt furnish the party affected by it in the earlier suit a good ground for appeal against the decision just as any other error or imperfection would do. but the defect in the finding is not one that can be collaterally

The same observation would apply even if an issue regarding a matter directly and substantially in issue in the former suit was not clearly raised or not raised at all provided the matter is such that it must be taken to have been decided in the earlier suit, that is, provided the judgment would not be sustainable unless the matter be taken to have been decided Sankaran Nair, J. holds that explanation IV which states that "any matter which might and ought to have heen made ground of defence or attack in such former suit shall he deemed to have been a matter directly and substantially in issue in such suit" does not qualify the statement in the principal clause that the matter in issue should have been "heard and finally decided by such court" It is of course true that the matter should have been decided in contemplation of law hat if, as the learned Judge concedes, it is sufficient if the matter must be taken to have been decided by necessary implication so far as the subject matter of the suit and anything involved in the decree itself are concerned, what reason is there for patting a different coestruction on the same words as applied to the decision of an issue? And if so far as what is involved in the decree is concerned any matter which might and onght to have heen made ground of defence or attack must be taken to have been decided, there is in my opinion equally no reason for not applying the same principle with respect to a matter directly and substantially in issue in an issue in the previous snit. As I have already observed the language of explanation IV is equally applicable both to the previous suit itself and to an issue in the snit. What use is there in enacting that what ought to have been made ground of defence or attack in the former suit shall be deemed to hove been a matter directly and substantially in issue in that suit if the matter is not also to be taken to have been decided in the previous suit? What was not made ground of defence or attack could not heve been expressly decided The explination would therefore be objectless if o decision also is not to be implied and made the ground of estoppel with respect to what is impliedly to be regarded as having been directly and substantially in issue At ony rate the logical result of the respondent's position must be to make on explicit decision equally necessary with respect to a ground of attock or defence not having been urged with regard to o matter involved in the decree itself in the previous suit. The learned Judge's position is no doubt supported by several decisions in the Calcutta High Court [Kaslash Mondal v. Buroda Sundari Dasi(1) and Woomesh Chandra Mastra v Burada Dus Mastra(2)], but in my opinion these decisions are absolutely unsupportable and quite inconsistent with the decision of the Privy Council to Pahalwan Singh v Maharaja Muheshur Buksh Singh Bahadorr(3) and Vahomed Ibrahim Hossain Khan v. BATTAN MAII U E SI RYA MARAYANA SUNDARA ATTAR J not be res sudicate in a later suit if the decision on it is only by may of nuplication, yet it would be res julicata if it expressly decided it That an express decision would constitute an ostoppel WHE regarded by SANKALAN MAIR, J as concluded by the decision of the Privy Conneil in Pittarur Raia v Buchi Sittana(1) to which might be added several other rulings See Gol in I Chunder Koon lo v Taruck Chunker Bose(2), Soorgomonce Dayce v Sullan in l Mohapatter (3) and Krishna B hari Roy v Brigesugri Chowdrance(1) But the test land down in these cases was not whether the decision was explicit but whether the issue was one on which the judgment in the provious suit was based, quite apart from the question whether the decree itself would be affected by the matter hem, re opened in the later suit. If the judgment was not based on the issue then the decision of the issue whether express or implied cannot constitute the matter res sudicata in the later suit

These are the general principles which in my opinion must guide the court in determining whether the question of the correctness of the patta is res judicala by the decision in the previous suit for the reat of fash 1314 The point is, was the question of the propriety of the parts directly in issue in the previous suit and was it decided expressly or by implication In my opinion the question whether a decree for rent involves a decision that a proper patta had been tendered is one which must be decided with reference to the facts of each case. It is perfectly true as pointed out by SANKARAN NAIR, J that the tender of a patta is not essential to a landlord to recover reat and that the parties may dispense with it. It may be right to go farther and say that a root may, if he choose, not insist on the tender of a proper putta before he pays rent for any particular year and that this will not affect his right to require a proper patta in any subsequent year and resisting a suit for rent on the ground that a proper patt; has not been tendered. It may be open therefore to a defendant to raise no plea at all about the correctness of a pattn in a suit instituted for the rent of a parti cular year, this may not estop him from resisting a subsequent suit for rent for another year on the ground that the patta even in cases where the plaintiff alleged in the earlier suit that he tendered a patta containing proper terms. But the effect of a decision depends in large measure on the actual contest between the parties A party may not he bound to raise a particular plea, but if he does raise a plea which would be an effective answer to the suit then the same plea cannot be raised again in a later suit hetween him and his opponent. It may be that the actual decree alone in the previous suit with respect to its subject matter would not lead to an implication of the decision of a particular matter but if the matter is put in contest and the result of the contest would be that the judgment in the case must depend on the decision of the matter then it is clear to my mind that the decision would constitute it res judicata in a subsequent snit and it is absolutely immaterial whether the decision he express or implied Of course it is open to the parties to show that the contest on any matter was subsequently waived or that the Court refused to decide the matter, but if neither of these events took place a decision by the Court on the matter must necese wily be implied if it was not expressly decided. In the case before us we have a decree for rent. It is said this did not necessarily require a decision as to the terms of the patta or the extent of the land for which the rent was decreed. Is this correct when the terms of the patta or the specification of the extent of the land were impugned? Whon these questions were raised by the defendant could the Court pass a judgment for rent in the plaintiff a favour without determining them? The learned Judge seems to proceed on the footing that the question what is necessary to be decided in a suit is to be settled without reference to the pleas raised by the defendant. With all deference this seems to be an altogether indefensible position In Palaluan Singh v Maharam Muheshur Buksh Singh Bahadoor(1), a suit was instituted in the Shahahad Court for recovering certain land as an accretion to the estate of the plaintiff in that suit in the District of Shababad The defendant in the suit claimed the land as an accretion to his own estate m the District of Ghazipur The Courte decided that the land was an accretion to the plaintiff's estato in Shahahad and not to the defendant's estate in Ghazipur. The defendant subsequently instituted a suit in the Ghazipur Court for the land to which the subject of the former shit was found to be an accre-The Privy Council hold that the holding in the carlier suit necessarily decided that the land clumed by the plaintiff in the letter suit was in the District of Shahahad and that the Court of Ghazinur had no surreduction. It will be noted that the proporty in the two suits was different. Any plea as to the district in which the property in the later suit was situated was not a necessary one, the immediate question in the curlier suit heing merely whether the land was an accretion to the property of the pluntiff or of the defendant in the suit, but the porties went to trial on the question whether the land was an accretion to the plaintiff's estate in Shahabad or the defendant's estate in Ghazipur and the issue which arose on their contest wee regarded as determining the question in which district the property in dispute in the later suit was situate. Their Lordships observed "Now, no doubt it might be possible to suppose cases in which the docusion as to the accretion might not necessorily be a decision that the land to which it was accreted was within the local jurisdiction of the Court which had dealt with it But all these questions must be tried with respect to the subject matter in the portionly enit. and it seems to thoir Lordships impossible, in constrning the section with reference to what was in issue to the former suit, to come to any other conclusion than that the decision did, by necessary implication, find that the green land was within the settled estate of the Muhoraja in Shahabad as plaintiff into Court, he claimed the whole of the land us un acception to his settled estate in Shahuhad. From the map and the evidence, it is obvious that, if an accretion to his lond, it could he on accretion to nothing hut the green land accretion was found to be an accretion to his land in the settled estote of Shahahad, and that proposition necessarily implied that the green land was a part of the settled estate of Shahabad property embraced by the ground on which the contest is hased, and that the pleading must be referred to to decide what matter was contested between the parties Then Lordships observe "In their Lordships' opinion, the effect of the pleading is that the plaintiff sought, enter aled, to set asido the will on the ground that the testator had not the power to make any of the devises of reality that it continued, masmuch as he could not devise ancestral real property, and all his real property was in point of law ancestral consisting of such us he had inherited from his father, and such as he had bought out of the If both parties invoked the opinion of the court upon this question if it was raised by the pleadings and argued, their Lordships are unable to come to the conclusion that, merely because un issue was not framed which strictly construed, embraced the whole of it, therefore the judgment upon it was ultra wires. To so hold would appear scarcely consistent with Mussumat Meina v Synd Fu l Rub(1). wherein it was held that in a case where there had been no issues at all, but where nevertheless it plainly appeared what the question was which was raised by the parties in their pleadmps, and was actually submitted by them to the court, the andgment upon it was valid' This was a decision under Act VIII of 1809 which did not expressly luy down the rule of res sudicuta with regard to nu 19300 in u enit. In Tirbhuwan Bahadur Singh v Rameshar Balhsh Singh(2) it was laid down by the Privy Council that the conduct of the parties must be considered in deciding whether un issue was material for the decision in the earlier suit In Aghore Nath Muleriee v Srivati Kamun Debr(3) Mookerjee und Teunon, JJ held that if a person who has no present interest in the hoquests contained in a will is made a party to a suit which usked for the construction of the will and the determination of ull rights created by it and he takes an nctive part in the centest relating to the construction, the decision of the court on the construction would be res judicata against him. often framed by courts not only on points which are essential for the determination of the netual unition in controversy between the porties but also on subsiding, questions having more or less bearing on the ossential points A decision on such subsidiary quostions need not necessarily make the matter raised by them res judicala in a sabsoquent suit where they became material for the decision of the matter then brought under contest a decision on one of two questions may be enough to determine n contest but both the questions might be adjudicated on and made the basis of the indement. In such a case the matter raised in both the questions would be res judicata elthough if the judgment had been based on one of them alone the other would not be res judicata Again, suppose a suit is instituted for the recovery of certain properties the defendant might merely deny the plaintiff s title to those proporties and the issues might relate only to the particular properties claimed. In such a cose n prononneement on points involving both the properties under litigation and other properties might not lead to estuppel by res sudicata But suppose the defendant rests his defence on a ground which admittedly covers both the properties claimed by the plaintiff in the suit and other properties as for instance by claiming them all under n will and the issue as to the will is decided egainst him, then in that coso if the plaintiff subse quently claims other proporties under the will, the question as to the will would chriously be res judicata Suppose egain a plaintiff claims on the basic of his right under n will some of the properties comprised in it and the defondant contests the gonumeness of the will The decision of the court that the will is or is not renuine will certainly hind both the plaintiff and the defendant in any litigation between the parties with reference to other properties in the will In a suit for rept for a particular year it may often not he easy to determine whether any particular question raised relates only to the claim made for the year or is one which would affect the right to rent for other years also The court has in each case to decide whether the issue covers the plaintiff's right to rent except for the year for which it is claimed In Vythilinga Mudaliar v Ramachendra Naiker(1), cited by Dr Swaminathan for the respondent the question raised possession of all the lands for which rent was claused. This court held that any finding on the question would not he res judicata in a smit for rent for a subsequent year as the land of which the defendant was in possession might not have been the same in both the years Subramania Ayyar, J whose judgment was concorred in hy SANKARAN NAIE, J observed however that a decision on a point which would affect the right to rent for both the years could not be disputed in the later suit. He observed "no doubt had the decision in the previous suit been to the effect that certain specific parcels constituted part of the mam, the choultry in the present suit could not, it it admitted the possession during the period in question here of those parcels seek to make out that the parcels were not mam" Nel Madhub Sarkar v. Brojo Nnth Singhn(1) is probably supportable on similar grounds, although some of the observations in the judgment seem to be open to exception. In a very recent case Kalı Kumar v Bidhu Bhusan(2), MOORETJEE and TEUNON, JJ beld that nn issue raised on the disputed point in a suit for rent and decided by a court would operate as res sudicata in a subsequent suit for rent Mookerjer, J considers the point as settled beyond all controversy and refers to Ekabbar Sheikh v Hara Benah (3) and Hara Chundra Barragev Benen Behart Das (4) in support of his statement. The same view was taken by another hench of the Calcutta High Court in Maharam Bens Pershal v. Ray Kumar(5) Sometimes in a snit for ront hy a landlord against his tenant, a third party intervenes and claims the land as his own and it becomes difficult to decide whether a decision in the suit as to the plaintiff's right to jent would he res judicain in a subsequent smit regarding the title between the plaintiff in the previous suit and the intervenor. The questions material for deciding a right to rent as against a particular tenant me or course your different from the considerations that will are in a suit for title between rival landlords. If the sait was in fact expressly or impliedly allowed to be expanded in character and was regarded also as one for the declaration of the landlord's title as against the intervenor and a decision as to title was arrived at, the finding might he res judicala in any subsequent proceedings between the two rival landlords But a more decree for ront against a tonant need not amount to any decision in a contest about title. This was the ground on which thin decision of the Privy Council in Run Bahadur Singh v Lucho Koer(1) proceeded, though estongol by res tu licala was avoided in that case on the ground also of the absence of concurrent joursdiction in the court that decided the previous enit. In the present case the question raised in the previous suit, Original Suit No 430 of 1906 was whether the patta tendered was proper The terms in question did not relate to any incidents special for the year fash 1314 but to the relationship between the plaintiff and the defendants generally as the ewners of melwaram and the kndivaram interest in the lind respectively Section 4 of the Rent Recovery Act VIII of 1865 required that the rent payable and all other material incidents of the tonnucy should be stated in the natta to be tendered to the tenant and according to section 7 of the Act no and was maintainable nulses the landlord and previously tendered to the tenant such a pattu as he was hound to accept defendants were not honad to accept a patta which was recorrect in any particular. If the extent was wrongly stated or the rent was stated to be payable in kied while any pertion of it was not, they could rafuse to accept the patta. The plea raised by them in substance was that there were defects in the patta which entitled them not to accept it and that the suit should therefore he dismissed The question therefore was whether there were my such defects in the patta. The trial would of course proceed on the defects which the defendants musted on With regard to the issue whether the patta was proper or not the defendants were bound to raise all objections that they could to the contents of the putta and if they failed to do so they must be taken to have raised them and all points that they could have raised must be taken to have heen impliedly decided against them Suppose the defence in this case was that the plaintiff was not the holder at all of the plaint lands Suppose that, though the defendants raised that defence in the previous suit, the matter was not explicitly decided on suppose they did not ruse the defence at all the question being one which related not merely to the

claim rent for any year the matter must be regarded as res judicata. It has been astablished by the cases in this court that a decision with regard to the proper terms of a patta to be tendered by a landholder to his right for mny one year is res judicata with regard to subsequent years, unlass the terms related specially to the particular year or there was a change in the terms of the tenancy, Srco Venkatachalapati v Krishna(1) and Sellappa Chettuar v. Velayutha Teran(2). In the latter case the tenant did not object in the earlier suit to some of the stipulations in the patta It was held by BENSON and WALLIS, JJ , that estoppol by res judicata was nevertheless applicable to the case, SANKARAN NAIR, J distinguishes it from the present case on tha ground that on both the suits were to enterce acceptance of pattas and not for rent and that the decision that the patta is proper would necessarily involve a finding that the lands referred to in the patta belong to the plaintiff. But the question raised related to some of the terms of the patta only and not to the ownership of the land The trial of the question as to the ownership of the land in the later suit would not affect the decree in the earlier suit-the cause of action was different. The objections taken in the later suit were not axpressly decided in the enrier suit. According to the tests adopted by the learned Judge Sellappa Chettyar v Velayutha Teran(2), must be regarded as "wrongly decided I am of opinion that the principle of that decision is clearly applicable to the present case In both, the question rused boro on the relationship of the parties, not for the particular year in question in the earlier suit but subsisting between them during future years also. The defendant rused questions relating to the permanent relationship between the parties He was entitled to raise them and his pleas, if successful, would be an effective answor to the plaintiff's suit. These are the tests for deciding whether the rule of res judicata is applicable. See Autesa Gramans v Venkatarama Re I It (3) Assuming therefore that the specific objections to the patta rused in this suit were not expressly decided in the provious sait, that point is immaterial It is hy no means clear however that one at least of the points was not decided. The finding was that the terms of the patta

The question es to the extent was cortainly raised in the provious suit nothing to show that the court did not decide everything that was comprised in the written statement of the defendants. The gaestion as to whether the ront was not payable in kind for a portion of the lands was not raised in the written statement. Whother evidence was led with regard to it, it is impossible to eey, but the coart was ontitled to try the issue as to the correctness of the patta on the pleadings in the case; and if any matter of attack with reference to the patta was not reised by the defendant he must be taken to have raised it, for any successful attack of the terms would be a complete defence to the suit for rent. I am of opinion therefore that the psage on the question of res judicata must he decided in the plaintiff's favour. I cannot agree with the respondent's contention that as the suit for rent related only to the year 1314, the defendant who resisted the suit on the ground that the terms of the tenancy were not properly embodied in the patta tendered by the plaintiff was entitled to keep back any objections on the ground that it would he profitable to him to do so with respect to that particular year. As the eppellate court has not disposed of all the questions in the case, the case cannot be finally disposed of here. The decree of this court in Bayya Naidu v. Paradesi Naidu(1) and the decree of the lower appellate Coart mast he reversed and the appeal remanded for fresh disposal according to law. All costs in this coart must shide the result

Sadasiya Ayyar, J Saasiva Ayyar, J —The question for decision in this appeal is whether the defendants who are tenants ander plaintiff (a landholder) are barred by res judicats owing to the decision in a previous suit brought by the plaintiff against them to recover rent for two previous fashs (1814 and 1815) from setting up the contonuon that the paths tendered for the plaint fash (1816) contained improper torms as to the extent of the lands in defeadants' holding end as to defendants' liability to pay waram rent for a portion's of their holding and that hence they (the defendants) are not liable for the rent of fash 1816, the present suit having been brought to recover each sent.

The former suit brought for the rent of fashs 1314 and 1315 is Original Suit No 430 of 1906. The pattas tendered for those fashs contained practically the same entries as are found in the disputed patts for fash 1316 The defendants contended then (see Exhibit C), among other defences, that (a) " the patts alloged to have been tendered are not proper" and (b) "the extent of defendants' peroyati land has been very much overstated by plaintiff"

BATYAN NAIDU SURYA ABAYANA SADASIYA

In the present suit also, they put forward the same defences, though they gave more details, viz, (a1) that 3 ac es are "cash rent paying lands" and (b1) that the extent of lands liable to pay rent is 5 acres plus 3 acres (and not about 14 acres entered in the patta)

In that former suit, the very first issue raised the question "whether the pattas tendered are proper and the finding of the court was as follows —

"The terms of the pattas Exhibits E and F do not contain any objectionable matter I accordingly find the first issue in the affirmative" According to section 4 of the Rent Recovery Act VIII of 1885, "the patta shall contain the local description and extent of the land, the amount and nature of the rent according as the same is payable in money or in hind or by a share of the produce, etc" Thus, whea the court in the former suit found no objectionable matter in the pattas for fashs 1814 and 1815 and when it found the first issue in that care (first whether the pattas tendered were proper in the affirmative, it clearly found (a2) that the nature of the rent payble for the entire lands is waram share of the produce as entered in the pattas, and (b2) that the extent of the lands hable to pay rent is 14 acres as found in the pattas

The court undoubtedly overruled defendants contention that the extent was not 14 acres and that the pattas were also otherwise improper. It is not clear whether defendants at the trial of that suit prominently put forward the contention that 3 acres of the lands were liable to pay only eash rout and not warm produce but it cannot, in my opinion be denied that when they introduced the pattas as continuing improper forms, they were bound to put forward all the grounds on which they attacked the pattas as improper and could not be illowed to put forward some grounds of attack alone for one fash and other grounds for other fashs. As has been decided in Fythilinga Mulatar v. Ramachenira Naucker(1), Sellappa Chettyar v. Frayutha

"did not contain any objectionable matter" The question as to the extent was cortainly raised in the previous suit. There is nothing to show that the court did not decide everything that was comprised in the written statement of the defendants. The quastion as to whether the rent was not payable in kind for a portion of the lands was not raised in the written statement Whether evidence was led with regard to it, it is impossible to say, but the court was entitled to try the issue as to the correctness of the patta on the pleadings in the case , and if any matter of attack with reference to the patta was not raised by the defendant he must be taken to have raised it for any successful attack of the terms would be a complete defence to the suit for I am of opini is therefore that the issue on the question of res sudicain must be decided in the plaintiff's favour. I cannot agree with the respondent's contention that no the suit for rent related only to the year 1814 the defendant who resisted the suit on the ground that the terms of the tenancy were not proporly embodied in the patta tendered by the plaintiff was entitled to keep back any objections on the ground that it weald he profitable to him to do so with respect to that particular year As the appellate court has not disposed of all the questions in the case, the case cannot be finally disposed of here. Sadasiya Ayyar J Sadesiva Ayrar, J—The question for decision in this appeal is whether the defondants who are tenants inder plaintiff (a landholder) are harred by res judicata owing to the decision in a previous suit brought by the plaintiff against them to receiver rent for two previous fashs (1314 and 1315) from setting up the contention that the patta tendered for the plaint fash (1316) contained improper terms as to the extent of the lands in defend ants' helding and an to defendants' liability to pay warrain rent for a portion' of their belding and that bance they (the defendants) are not liable for the rent of fash 1316, the present sint having been brought to recover such jest.

The former suit brought for the rent of fashs 1314 and 1315 is Original Suit No. 430 of 1906. The pattas tendered for those fashs contained practically the same entries as are found in the disputed patta for fash 1316 The defendants contended then (see Exhibit C), among other defences, that (a) " the pattas alleged to have been tendered are not proper" and (b) "the extent of defendants' jeroyatı land has been very much overstated by plantiff"

BAYYAN NAIDU SUBYA-NARAYANA SADASIYA AYYAR, J

Is the present suit also, they put forward the same defences, though they gave more details, viz, (a1) that 3 acres are "cash rent paying lands" and (b1) that the extent of lands liable to pay rent is 5 acres plus 3 acres (and not about 14 acres entered in the pattal).

In that former suit, the very first issue raised the question "whether the pattas teodered are proper and the finding of the court was as follows —

"The terms of the pattas Exhibits E and F do not contain noy objectionable matter—I accordingly find the first issue in the affirmative" According to section 4 of the Rent Recovery Act—VIII of 1865, "the patta shell contain the local description and extent of the land, the amount and nature of the rent according as the same is payable in since on in kind or by a share of the produce, etc." Thus, when the court in the former suit found no objectionable matter in the pattas for fashs 1314 and 1315 and when it found the first issue in that cave (six whether the pattas teodered were proper in the affirmative, it clearly found (a2) that the nature of the rent payble for the entire lands is waram share of the produce as outered in the pattas, and (b2) that the extent of the lands liable to pay rect is 14 acres as found in the pattas.

The court undoubtedly overriled defendants contention that the extent was not 14 acres and that the pattas were also otherwise improper. It is not clear whether defendants at the trial of that suit prominently put forward the contention that 3 acres of the lauds were hable to pay only cash rent and not waram produce but it cannot, in my opinion, be denied that when they attacked the pattas as containing improper torms, they were bound to put forward all the grounds on which they attacked the pattas is improper and could not be allowed to put forward some grounds of attack alone for one fash and other grounds for other fashs. As has been decided in Fythilinga Mudaliar v Ramachendra Anicher(1), Sellappa Chettyar v Velayutha

Tetan(1), and Natesa Gramani v. Venkatarama Reddi(2), a decision as to the standing torms of a patta between a landlord and a tenant for one fast is res judicata in respect of such terms for all subsequent fasts, though of course, the tenant might prove in a subsequent fast that by the act of God or anything which has subsequently happened (i.e., by proper relinquishment of a potton of his holding, etc.) and which gives him a legal right to have the terms modified, the conditions and terms of the tenancy have been ultered

The pattas for fashs 1314 and 1315 having been expressly found to be preper pattas (that is, to contain the proper extent of land in defendants' holding and proper lates and kinds of rent) in the former suit, the defendants are, in my opinion, clearly barred by res sudicata from contending that a similar patta tendered for plaint fash (1916) was not a proper patta The learned Judgo whose underment is under appeal before this Full Bench held (if I understand rightly his observations in pages 5 to 8 of his judgment) (a) that the question as to the extent of the lands to be entered in the annual patta and the kind of rent leviable on 3 acres of the helding was not "directly and substantially in issue" in the former out because a decision on the above question was "not essential for the decree that was passed in Original Suit No 430 of 1906" and was "not essential for the relief finally granted in the fermer" case as "a decree for rent does not necessarily involve" or "required a decision as to the terms of the patta or the extent of the land for which the rent has to be paid," (b) that assuming that a decision on that question was essential in the former suit, and assuming therefore that "the question must be deemed to have been directly and substantially in issue under explanation IV to section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code, even though the parties did not raise that question as they were bound to raise it," it did not follow that the question must be deemed to have been " as a matter of fact" "heard and decided." (c) that in the former suit, the question in the present suit was not "heard and decided " expressly and "we are not bound to imply ' that it was so decided, (d) that the "causes of action" and the "subject matters" of the two suits are different,

BAYDU NA)DU

SADARIY AYYAR, J

(e) that it "is not enough" that a determination in the present suit (about the extent of lands and rate of rent) " would be inconsistent with the decision in the previous case that the patta then tendered was proper" to prevent such determination in the present suit by the har of res judicata, and, (f) that on all the above grounds, the question in the present suit whether the patta for fash 1316 is a proper one is not concluded by the decision in the former suit.

A decree for rent hetween an ordinary landlord and an ordinary tenant may not necessarily involve a decision as to the terms of the lease or as to the extent of land comprised in the lease. But a decision under the Rent Recovery Act VIII of 1865 where the landlord sued for rent on the allegation that the standing terms of the tenancy were contained in the patta tendered hy him mentioning particular terms and the particular extent of the holding does, in my opinion, involve and require a decision as to whether the terms of the lease are proper and the extent of land oovered by the holding is as alleged in the natta tendered by the landlord and hence the reason (a) given by the learned Judge seems to me to fail. Nil Madhub Sarkar v. Brojo Nath Singha(1) quoted by the learned Judge is therefore not applicable and the earlier case-Gobind Chunder Koondoo v. Taruck Chunder Bose(2) and Venkatachalapathi v. Krishna(s), Natesa Gramani v Venhatarama Reddi(4), Pittapur Raja v Buchi Sitayya(5), and Sellappa Chettyar v Velayutha Tevan(6) also quoted by the learned Judge and-referred to by him with approval, seem to me to clearly govern this case

I shall next deal with the argument that even though the question was directly and substantially in issue hecause the decision involved the finding on that issue, it must also have been heard and decided before it can be deemed res sudicata nre no doubt observations in Kailash Mondul v Baroda Sundari Dasi (7), Woomesh Chandra Mailia v. Barada Das Muitra(8) and Razen lra Nath Ghose v Tarangini Dasi (9) to the above effect hut as pointed out by Subramania Ayrai J in Arunachalam Chetty . was not directly and substantially in issue, in the former out (a dictum preconcileable with the Privy Conneil decision in Puhalwan Singh v Maharasa Muheshur Bulsh Singh Bahadoor(1) each dictum must be held to have been overraled by their later decisions already set out including Sri Gonal v Pirthi Singh(2) The latest Privy Council case Mahomed Ibraham Hossam Khan v Ambika Pershad Singh(3) seems to me to be conclusive on the matter, for their Lordships decide that section 13, explanation II, would har a defendant who omits to raise a material issue in a former enit when he was a party thereto even though that issue was not as a matter of fact heard and decided -in the former suit Vasilamania Pillas v Thrusengadam Pillas(4) scems also to me to be conclusive on this question of res judicata It 18, no doubt, not enough to constitute res judicata that a determination contra in a later suit would be inconsistent with the determination in the former smit, for there is also a forther requisite that the court which decided the former suit should have been competent to decide the later smit In this case, this latter requisite also is complied with and I am therefore clear that the findings of fact in the former suit are res judicata, one of those findings heing that the defendants held the extent of lands mentioned in the natta tendered to them and are bound to pay rent according to the terms of the said patta

I may now refer shortly to one important question which was aightly touched noor during the arguments, namely, whether, where the subject matter of the former highlighton and the relief claimed therein were the same as those claimed in the subsequent litigation, the plaintiff can bring two suits on what is put forward by him as two different causes of action. The question does not really arise in this case, but I wish to state that I agree with Subbanania Atxar, J in Armachalam Chetty v Meyyappa Chetty(5) that courts should try their hest to hold that the causes of action in such cases are embatantially the same I shall here quote West, J'a observations (quoted also by Subramania Atxar, J) "Under systems such as the Roman Law or the English Common Law, in which the development of legal rights

The cause of action is regarded as identical, though the form of action differs on the second occasion, and the test applied is whether the evidence to support both actions is substantially the same (Bitchen v Campbell(1), Marten v Kennedy(2) Under a freer system of procedure, such as that of the Equity Courts in Fugland or of the Civil Courts in India, second suits are to be admitted more sparingly than when the plaintiff has to proceed hy set forms of action. As he can being forward his whole case unfettered by artificial restraints, and seek all remedies that the Court can justly any ard upon the facts proved, there is no reason why he should be permitted to harriss his opponent and occupy the ture of the Courts by repeated investigations of a set of facts which ought all to have been submitted for adjudication at once. I disapproval and Serramania Ayyar, J., himself in was not directly tv. Muthukumara Asary(2) said that "anything in dictum irreconcised" by him in Arunachalam Chetty v. Meyyappa Pahaluan Singh consistent with the view of the law as expounded" such dictum mui Ayyar v. Vuthinatha Ayyar (3), "can no longer be decisions alread authority." I am, however, inclined to hold, with The latest Jico to the contrary opinions, that all the observations Khan v. machalam Chetty v Meyvappa Chetty(1) as to the scope of on thedoctrine of res judicata are sound law and those observations in Romaswami Ayyar v. Vythinatha Ayyar(3) which conflict with the views in Arunachalam Chetty v. Meyvanva Chetty(1) seem to me to draw rather fine distinctions and ia my humble judgment would lead to unnecessary and andesirable multiplicity of hightion. However, in so far as any principle in Arunachalam Chetty v Menuanna Chettu(1) is directly inconsistent with the later Full Bench decision of the Madras High Court in Thrikaikat Madathil Raman v. Thiruthiyil Krishnen Nair(4) [which approves of the decision in Ramaswami Ayyar v. Vythinatha Ayyar(8)] but which does not refer to and does not expressly overrnle Arunachalam Chetty v. Meyappa Chetty(1), though it expressly overruled only Rangasami Pillai v. Krishna Pillai(5), I am not anxious that such directly overruled principle should be again reconsidered As at present advised, I do not see anything in Thrikaikat Madathil Raman v. Thiruthivil Krishnen Nair(4), irreconcilably inconsistent with any observation in Arunachalam Chetty v. Meyyappa Chetty(1), as two separate mertgages can be separately redeemed, especially if there is an express understanding to that effect between the parties and all that Thrikaikat Madathil Raman v Thiruthiyil Krishnen Nair (4) decided was that the failure of a suit to redeem one mortgage is not a bar to a snit to rodeem another.

I would for the reasons mentioned in puragraphs 5 and 6 of this opinion reverse the judgment of the lower Courts and remand the case to the lower appellate Courts for a fresh disposal of the appeal before it, the District Mansif not having decided the questions involved in issues 4 and 5 and the lower appellate Court also not baving considered all the issues The costs hitherto will abide the result.

—Insolvency Proceedings

Where elleged forged documents were filed in the Jacobsency Court, Much that the sunction of the Insolvency Court to prosecute for offence relating to the making and using of the said documents is recessive filled the offence of forgery was complete before the communicament of the Insolvency Proceedures.

Where the documents were produced before the Official Assignce, Iteld — the search of the Court and not of fac Official Assignce is necessity. The Official Assignce does not become a civil court merely because he has a wide discretion in deciding on claims of persons alleging themselves to be creditors of the insolvent, or because persons aggressed by discussions of his can appeal to the Court from those decisions.

PETITIONS under sections 185 and 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898), praying the High Court to revise the order of Khan Bahadur S. M. V. Oosman Sahiri, Presidency Magistrate, Georgetonn, Madras, in Calendar Case No 27000 of 1911

In this case a complaint was filed against the accessed in the Presidency Magnitrato's Court, Georgetown, Madras, charging the first accused with the offence of forger) under section 465, Indian Penal Code, and with forging documents purporting to be valuable as curring under section 467, Indian Penal Code, and the second accessed with abetiment of the sud offences is well as under section 471 Indian Penal Code, with fraudulently und dishonestly using the forged discuments as genuine. It appeared from the complaint that the first accessed was a partner of P. M. Inausthulla Salub & Co, and the constitution is firm had obtained a decree against the accessed a firm for Rs 20, 61-11-2

Crammal Revision Case No. 752 of 1911,

BEARDSTLL A Co Apprt. GLASI SAUTE

On the 21st November 1910, upon the petition of the comr unt's firm the accused's firm was adjudicated insolvent.

complainant further stated that about the date of or sahsed to the adjudication petition (27th October 1910), the acc had forged a promissory-note bearing date 5th March 190 favour of the second accessed, who was the eister's son of first accused, for Rs. 8,000 and a letter of the same date by w the first accused purported to mortgage all the immov properties in favour of the second accessed During the co of the insolvency proceedings, shout 20th February 1911. second occused filed an affidavit before the Official Assigne Madras in which he asserted the genuineness of the execu of the promissory-note and the deposit of the title deeds on 5th March 1908. In August 1911, the promissory-note letter were produced in the Insolvency Court before SANKA NAIR, J.

The preliminary objection was taken by the accused bef the Magistrace that the alleged forged documents having h produced before Sankaran Nair, J., in the insolvency proceeding by a party to the misolvency proceedings, the sanction of Insolvency Court to prosecute the accused was necessary not section 195 (1), (c), Criminal Procedure Codo. The Magistra holding that the alleged forged documents were produced in t Insolvency Court and that the offences complained of were relation to the proceedings in that Court, discharged the accusfor want of the said exection.

The complainant petitioned the High Court.

Dr. Swammathan for the petitioners argued that the offend complained of were complete before the documents were pr duced in the Insolvency Court and the mere fact that subseque to the completion of the offences the same documents were al produced and marked as exhibits in certain proceedings won not render necessary a sanction without which a complaint cou have been instituted before they were produced in the Insolvene Court.

Ouner .- I think the Magistrate was right in holding that th sunction of the Insolvency Commissioner is necessary. Takin it that all the offences charged were complete when the clair was made before the Official Assignee still at the time both fire and second accused wore parties to the Insolvency Proceedings Branches in the High Court initiated by a petition of the complainant's The order of adjudication does not transfer the proceeding from the Court to the Official Assignee

So that even if it is necessary under section 195 (1), (c), of the MILLER, 1 Code of Criminal Procedure that the proceeding should have commenced before the offence is complete, that requirement is fulfilled in this case The offence of forgery is complete, it may be said, as soon as the false document is made, and in that view it cannot be right to restrict the scope of section 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to cases in which the commencement of the 'proceeding' procedes the completion of the offence for the section in that case would not apply to a great many cases to which it was obviously intended to apply and which are covered by its language.

As I undorstand the case the view suggested on behalf of the petitioners is that in order that section 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure may apply the proceeding must have com menced before any action has been taken on, or use has been made of, the false document, but even accepting that view, which receives some support from Noor Mahomel v Kanhho ru(1) tho Insolvency proceedings had been commenced before any action was taken on the documents alleged to be forged

It was suggested by Dr Swammathan that if the production of the document before the Official Assignce is taken to be their production in the 'proceeding' then the Official Assignoe init t be considered to be the Court and his sanction, and not that of the Insolvency Court, is what is required I do not think so The Official Assignee does not become a Civil Court merely because he has a wide discretion in deciding on claims of persons alleging themselves to be creditors of the Insolvent or because persons aggreeved by decisions of his, can appeal to the Court from those decisions, and the provisions of the live livency Act do not suggest that he ought to be considered a C art subor hante to "the Court" which by sections 3 and 6 of the Inschercy Act is the High Court or some officer appoint d under section 6 of the Insolvency Act.

The Insolvency proceeding, from the date of the potition which initiates it, is before the Court, and the Court controls and directs the actions of the Official Assignee and I think in these circumstances that it is the Court whose sanction is required and not the Official Assignee

I do not say that the Magistrato is wrong in his view that the production of it o document before the Insolvency Commissioner is sufficient to attract to the case the provisions of section 195 (1), (c), of the Codo of Criminal Procedure But in my view it is unnecessary to decade that point regarded as absolutely privileged. The learned Chief Justice refers in the coorse of his judgment to the decision in Golap Jan Bholanath Kheitry(2), where it was held that statements made in a complaint to a magistrate were protected by absolute privilege The same view was held by the Queen's Beach Division in Lilley v Roney(3) The defamation in that case was contained in a letter of complaint addressed to the Registral of the Incorporated Law Society against a solicitor the society being a body having power to enquire into the conduct of soncitors In Bank of British North America v Strong(4), the Privy Council no doubt expressed the opinion that a statement in a notice of action would not be entitled to more than a gorlified privilege. But this is apparently because the notice is not a part of the proceedings before the Court We do not think that a statement in a complant which initiates a proceeding should be held to be entitled to less privilege than other statements made by parties in the subsequent stages of the proceedings If the compluint is fal e, then the defendant would be entitled to prosecute the complainant for prefering a false charge. We think the proper rule to lay down is that a statement contained in a complaint should be held to be absolutely privileged. We therefore set uside the conviction of the accused line fine, if already paid must be refunded.

ORDER —The question raised in this petition is whether it is competent to a Magistrate under section 94 Criminal Procedure Code to issue a summons to an accused person to produce a document or other thing, the production of which might tend to incriminate him

The words of the section are general No exception is made in favour of an accused person though several exceptions are specified in clause (3) of the section

The question was considered at length in Malomed Jackariah § Co v Ahived Mahomed(1) and it was held that it was clearly the intention of the Legislature to make section 94 applicable to an accused person, notwithstanding that this involved a departure from the general principle of the English law A similar view was apparently taken in Nizam of Hyderabad v Jacob(2)

^{*} Crim nal Revis on Case No 10 of 1912 (1) (1889) ILR 15 Calc 109 (2) (1882) ILR 19 Calc 52

A contrary view was taken in Ishuar Chandra Gloslal v The Fmperor(1), in which the learned Judges referred to sections Kondarradi 342 and 343. Criminal Procedure Code, which were not referred Brason J to in the two Calcutta cases noted above

In Ishwar Clandra Ghoshal v The Emperor(1), however, no one appeared to support the Magistrate's action and the learned Judges did not refer to the previous Calcutta cases

The Magistrate always has the power to issue a search warrant to obtain the production of a document or other thing in possession of the accused

The issue of a summons is a milder meins of attaining the same and I am of opinion that the ruling in Mahomed Jackariah & Co v Ahmed Mahomed(2) should be followed

I therefore dismiss the petition presented against the decree of M Deva Rao, the District Munsif of Penukonda, in Original Suit No 69 of 1906

The facts appear in the judgment of Sundaba Ayyan, J. C F Namer, the Government Pleader, for the appellant A. Krishnaswami Ayyar for the respondents

SUNDARA AYYAR, J -This second appeal must be disposed of on the Jojection taken by the defendant, the Secretary of State for India in Conneil, that the suit is not maintainable as no notice of it was given as required by section 424 of the old Code corresponding to section 80 of Act V of 1908 The plaint states that the Board of Revenue passed an illegal order that a certain sum of money not due by the plaintiff to Government should be collected from him and that "on account of the said order the plaintiffs have lost peace of mind and are much troubled" The plaintiffs ask for a degree granting an injunction restraining the first defendant, that is, the Secretary of State for India in Council or any of his servants, from collecting any amount from the plaintiff The Subordinate Judge held that no notice was required under section 424, Civil Procedure Code, in such a case The view he took was that the section applied only to suits for damages. This position is in our opinion entirely untenable Section 424 enacted "no suit shall be instituted against the Secretary of State for India in Council, or against a public officer in respect of an act purporting to be done by him in his official capacity, until the expiration of two months next after notice in writing has been given, in the case of the Secretary of State in Council. delivered to, or left at the office of, a Secretary to the Local Government or the Collector of the District" The contention before us is that the section applies only when the suit is in respect of an act "purporting to be done" and this, it is said, does not include a suit for an injunction but only one for damages arising from the act done The case for the respondent has been argued with great fullness and ability by the learned vakil who has appeared for him but he has been unable to persuade us that the view adopted in the decided cases, which is against him, is wrong Two arguments have been urged on the meaning of the language of the section It is contended that the words ' in respect of any act purporting to be done by him" justify both "the Secretary of State for India in Council and is a comma after the word "Council" The object of the comma evidently was to show that the phrase "purporting to be done" did not apply to "Secretary of State for India in Council" It is argued that punctuation cannot be taken note of in considering a statute There is no doubt authority in Fuglish cases for this position but no Indian case bas been cited to us, and it may be permissible to express a doubt whether the consideration which induced Judges in England to lay down such a rule would be equally applicable in the construction of statules in this country The question, however, does not depend on the junctionation alone Now the expression 'Secretary of Stale for India it Council' is. as urged by Mr Krishn iswami Ayyar himself for his own purposes, merely a name under which the Government is to be sued and does not denote either an individual or a Corpo ation Kinlock v Secretary of State for Inaia in Council(1) If that be so, to speak of an act being done by the " Secretary of Slate for India in Conneil" understood in that sense seems to involve some straining of language although it is pointed out that in Secretary of State for Indea in Council . Railucks Debi(2) MACLEAN, C J. was of opinion that an act done by a public officer who is subject to the sutl only of the Secretary of State for India in Council could be imputed to the latter. We may also note that the Secretary of State for India in C uncil has no other than an official capacity assuming that be has any capacity it all and that the expression is not a mere name. This makes it unlikely that any dislinction was intended to be made between the acls of the Secretary of State for India in Conneil in his official capacity and other acts of his On all these grounds we entertain no doubt that the phrase ' purporting to be done" was intended to apply only to a public officer Another argument of the respondent is that the section applies only to suit, arising out of acts done by public officers whether they be against tho Secretary of State for India in Council or against a public officer, in other words, he contends that the section should be read thus "No suit shall be instituted in respect of any act purporting to be done by a pubho officer in his official capacity either ugainst the Secretary of State for India in Council or against the public officer" But if this were the meaning we think more appropriate language would be used to indicate it. The respondent's construction requires in effect the omission of the comma after the word 'Council' and the insertion of one after the word 'officer' Besides there is mason to believe that the object of the statute was to give the Government time for reflection whenever a suit is threatened against it and this would apply whatever he the nature of the suit. No anthority has been cited in annuart of this contention. Secretary of State for India in Council v Raylucki Debi(1), Bachchu Singh v The Secretary of State for India in Council (2), Secretary of State v. Gajanan Krishnarao(3) and Sakharam Bhagwan Patil v The Secretary of State(4) are all in favour of the construction contended for by the appellant that notice is necessary in all suits of whatever description against the Secretary of State for India in Council and we agree with the opinion expressed in those sudements

SENDARA ATTAR. J

CRETARY F STATE LEKHAN

It is then conteoded that the section should not be applicable to suits for injunction restraining the Secretary of State for India from doing a certain act. If the construction we have adopted of the language be correct, then there is no room for excepting any class of suits from the operation of the section and we doubt whether it would be within the province of a Court of Justice to introduce an exception where the inle enacted by the Legislature is universal in its terms. The observations of CHANDRAVARKAR, J., in Secretary of State v Gajanan Krishnarao(3) and Salharam Bhagwan Palsl v The Secretary of State(4) are no doubt calculated to show that the learned Judge was of onimon that, where in consequence of an immediate invity threatened by the Secretary of State for India in Council it would not be humanly possible for the plaintiff to give the prescribed two months' notice of action, the section should not be held to apply It is not necessary to say whether even this narrow exception can be made in accordance with the language of the section In the present case it is not alleged that nny very immediate injury of a serious character was threatened Revenue officers of Government would no doubt have power to arrest the plaintiff for the debt alleged to be due to the SECRETARY Government but it is not stated that any immediate arrest was OF STATE threatened On the other hand, the suit itself was not instituted KALEKHAN until after the expiration of more than two months from the date on which the cause of action is alleged to have arisen There is therefore no room for any contention that it was not possible to give two months' notice I cfore the suit was launched The result is that the suit must be held to be not maintainable on the ground that no notice was given of it as required by section 424 of the Civil Procedure Code The decree of the lower Appellate Court must be set aside and that of the District Munsif restored with costs both here and in the lower Appellate Court Sapasiva Ayran, J -- I do not think I could usefully add any observations of my own as regards the construction of section 424 of the Civil Procedure Code and I agree with what my learned brother has just now said and also with what CHANDRAVAREAR, J , has said in Secretary of State v. Gajanan Krishnarao(1) and Sakharam Bhaguan Patil v The Secretary of State(2) on this point So far as the word 'him' in the old section, 424 is concerred, the matter has been made very clear hy the amended Act in which section 80 has substituted the word "such public officer" for the word 'him' I do not think the Legislature intended to male now alteration in the law but only to approve of those cases decided under the old Code which confine the grammatical relation of the 'him' to 'public officer' and do not extend it to " The Secretary of State in Council "

RADARIVA ATTAR J

Then, as regards the question of hardship, if a suit against the public officer alone for an injunction could be brought without notice-a position on which I reserve inv opinion-the fact that the plaintiff is prohibited from bringing a suit against the Secretary of State for India in Connel without due notice cannot cause errepairable injury to plaintiff for he could sue the public officer aking for his threatened act and obtain a temporary injunction and the will effectively prevent the threatened injury As regards suits against the Secretary of State for India in Council large classes of such suits involve questions as to the legality of the acts done by subordinate public officers in respect of acquisitions of land under the Land Acquisition Act, accovery of arrears of all kinds of revenue, of prevention and removal of encroschments and of the performance of similar public duties and most of them do involve reliefs in the nature of an improcion. The Legislature must be deemed to have been aware of this prient consideration and if they had intended to exclude suits against the Secretary of State for India claiming the relief of injunction from the necessity of notice, they would have put in an exception under the section itself, stating that in cases of injunction or in cases where irrepairable injury is likely to be caused if an injunction is not at once granted, the notice required by the first part of the section was unnocessary I do not think that it is legitimate for the Courts to themselves graft on such exceptions to the As regards the English case-Flower v Local Board of Low Leyton(1), in which it was held that in a suit for an injunction against a threatened injury no notice need be given under the Public Health's Act of 1875 before the suit is brought agreest the local authority, I respectfully dissent from that give and also from the obiter dicts of CHANDRA VAREAR, J. in Secretary of State v Gazanan Krishnara: (2) and Sakharam Bhagawan Patel v The Secretary of State(3) that a similar though more restricted exception could be prafted on to section 42! by the decisions of Courts If I do not put it too strongly I would say that such a course would be a fraud on the part of the judiciary against the powers of the Legislature, which powers, as my learned brother remarked in the course of the arguments in this case are practically omnipotent It will also lead to this anomaly that whose a plaintiff pays up a demand due to Government loyally and out of respect to the revome authorities (but under protest) and then sues to recover the money so paid by him he ought to give two menths' notice. but if he rushes to Court for an injunction against the Secretary of State acting through the Revenue officer who is given statutory powers to recover the money, ho need not give such notice at all I do not think that that could have been the intention of the Legislature I might also add that if we give room for even a single exception of that kind, the ingenuity of litigants and of their legal advisers will be found to be quite equal to convert almost all suits against the Secretary of State into suits involving the relief for an injunction. I therefore agree that the lower Court's decree should be reversed and that the suit ought to be dismissed with costs

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1893) as 423 and 439-High Court power of to alter finding of acquittal into conviction and enhance sentences in Revision -Indian Penal Code (Act VLV of 1860) sec 300 explained

Section 413, clause (5), Criminal I rocedure Code 1898 gives power to the High Court when hearing an appeal against a conviction to alter the finding and section 439 gives power to enhance the sentence so as to make it approprints to the altered fin ling

Section 13?, sub-section (4) which enacts that nothing in this section shall be deemed to sutherns a High Court to convert a finding of acquittal into one of conviction ' must be construed as referring to cases whire the trial bas ended in a complete acquirtal any other construction would be inconsistent with the power to 'alter the finding given to the Court as a Court of Revision by virtue of its p wer to exercise the power conferred on a Court of Appeal by section 493 clause (b)

JUDGMENT —In this case the five necused wore charged with rooting armed with deadly weepons and with hiving murdered one Chinna Gangayya on the 10th May last, offences punishable under sections 148 and 302 of the Indian Penal Code The Sessions Judge found the accused not gailty of those offences, but guilty of simple rioting and of culpable homicide not amounting to murder (sections 147 and 304 of the Indian Penal Code) The accused appeal against thoir conviction and this Courf, as a Court of Revision, has given them notice to show cause why they should not be convicted of maider and be sentenced for that offences

There cannot, we think, be the slightest doubt that the accused are guilty of rioling and in the course of it killed Chinna Gaugayya, as found by the Sessions Judge

[Their Lordships here discussed the evidence and continued] We agree with the Sessions Judge that the five accused killed Chinna Gangayya. We are, however, quite unable to accept his view that the offence was not marder. He says that "they (the accused) had no intention to cause his death or to cause such bodily injuly as was likely to cause his death, but they only wanted to beat him with the knowledge that the heating was likely to cause detth. He was not an important member of the opposite party, whom they might be supposed to have intended to kill. They but him because he sided with the opposite party and throw stones against them for which I do not think the accused would have intended to kill him or would have intended to cause such hodily minry as would have killed him. If the accused really intended to kill the man, they would not have left him with his but would have beaten BERSON AND him to death then and there. Mnreover, the deceased also caused AYYAR JJ provocation to the accused by throwing atones at them "

BALI REDDI

We think that this is no altogether wrong view to take of the effect of the prosecution cyidence. The cyidence shows that the first four accused were armed with sickles and the fifth with a spear, and that the first and second accused struck the deceased on the back and neck respectively with their sickles. the deceased fell, and the other secused then fell on him and beat him, and one witness (third prosecution witness) says that the fifth accused pierced him with a spear The medical evidence is in accordance with this. It shows that there were no less than ten incised wounds on the neck and shoulders and head of the deceased One on the head was three inches long and cut asunder the outer table of the skull Another was 54 inches long and 2 inches deep, extending from the nape of the neck, round the side and to the front of the neck. Another was 5# inches long and 2 inches deep on the shoulder. There were three others, each an inch deep. There was another, 24 inches long, on the right side of the neck, and another 44 inches long on the back of the head extending to the check, and so forth When five men attack another with sickles and a spear and inflict such inturies as these on him, so that he dies within 15 or 20 minutes in consequence of the wounds, it is not reasonable to hold that they did not intend to kill him. In law a man is presumed to intend the ordinary and natural results of his acts The acts of the accused did, in fact, cause the death of the man and there is nothing to suggest that they were not sufficient to cause death as their ordinary and natural result. There is no suggestion that there was any special reason such as a diseased spleen, which made the muries more fatal than might naturally be expected. In these circumstances it is immaterial to say that he was not an important member of the opposite faction, or that if they had intended to kill him they would not have left him alive but would have finished him on the spot, or that the deceased gave some provocation by threwing stones at the opposite aide. If such provocation was given it was certainly not of so grave and sudden a character

RA SUNI ABA ATTAR JJ

as to have deprived the accused of the power of self-control BALL REDDI There is no avidence that any of the accused were etruck by the BENSON AND stones In fact any such provocation was not pleaded nor was it relied on in the argument before us We must therefore hold that the accused, Kambham Bali Reddy, Kambham Inna Reddy, Gujala Venkata Raddy, hambhan Saviri Reddy and Kothapu Pilla Gangayya ara guilty of the murder of Chinna Gangayya

> It is, bowever, contended for the appell into that we have no power to remedy the error into which the Sessions Judge has fallan except by ordering a now trial on the charge of murder. We do not necept this contention. Section 423, clause (b), ot the Criminal Procedure Code expressly empowers an Appellate Court hearing an appeal from a conviction iss in this case) to alter the finding, see Appanna v Pithans Mahalakshmi(1) and Hanumappa v Emperor(2). The appallants cannot rely upon section 403 of the Criminal Procedure Code and plend tha acquittal by the Sessions Court on the charge of murder as a bar to the jurisdiction of this Court, because, as pointed out in Queen-Empress v Jabanulla(3), the present appeal is not a second trial, but only a continuation of the trial in the Sessions Court The decision in Krishna Dhan Mandal v Queen-Empress(4), is to the same effect, where it is observed, "when an act or a series of acts is of such a nature that it is doubtful which of several offences the facts which can be proved will constitute, an appeal from a conviction for any one of such offences must lay the whole case open to the interference of the Appellate Court notwithstanding any order of acquittal by the first Court in regard to any of the other offences interference of the Appellate Court in such a case is directed primarily, not against the acquittal, but against the conviction which is called in question by the accused, though if the interference is to be rational and complete the Appellate Court must deal with the wlola case" Nor can thay rely on the last paragraph of section 439 That paragraph cannot be held to hunt the powers of a Court of Appeal It only limits the powers of the High Court when acting, not as a Court of Appeal, but as a Court of Revision It prevents the High Court when acting as a Court of Revision from converting a finding of acquittal into one of conviction But section 423, clause (b), has no such restriction. The only restriction under that clause is that the Court of Appeal cannot enhance the sentence

Re Bali Reddi

It may he observed that, under section 280 of the Criminal Arxal JJ Procedure Code of 1872, it was enacted that the Appellate Court "may alter and reverse the finding and sentence or order" of the Court below, "and may, if it see reason to do so, enhance any punishment that has been awarded". This power of enhancing the sentence was taken away from the Courts of Appeal by section 423 of the Code of 1882, which so far as this matter is concerned, is the same as section 423 of the present Code. The Courts of Appeal include not only the High Court but alls could be compared to the code of 1881 of the present Code The Courts of Appeal include not only the High Court but alls all Courts of Session and, in practice, all District
Magnistrates and first-class Sub divisional Magnistrates

It may well be that the Legislaturo thought that the power to enhance sentences ought not to be entrusted to so large a number of Courts, many of which would, in practice, be comparatively inexperienced. But that reason would not apply to the High Court, and so we find that in section 439 of the Oode of 1882 (which is the same as section 439 of the present Code) it was enacted that the "High Court may, in its discretion, exercise all the powers conferred on a Court of Appeal by sections 195, 423, 426, 127 and 428 or nin a Court by section 338" and it is expressly added, 'may enhance the sentence "The effect of the two sections read together is that the High Court when hearing an appeal aguisst a conviction may, under section 429, clause (b), ulter the finding and thon as a Court of Revision may, under section 439, enhance the sentence so as to make it appropriate to the altered finding

Sub-section (4) of section 439, which enacts that 'nothing in this section shall be deemed to anthorise a High Court to convert a finding of acquittal into one of conviction "15 not, if rightly construed inconsistent with this view. The probabilition in sub-section (4) refers to a case where the trial has ended in a complete acquittal, not to a case like the present, where the trial has ended in a conviction but where the Court has wrongly applied the law or has wrongly funnel same fact not proved and has, in consequence, held that the conviction should be under some section of the Code other than the section properly applicable as any other construction would be inconsistent with the power to "alter the finding" given to the Court as a Court of Revision by virtae of its power to exercise the power conferred on a Court of Appeal by section 428, clause (b), and the terms of a strutte should not be so construed as to navolvo an inconsistency between its different parts. This view is home out by the language of section 123 clause (n), which speaks of "an order of acquittal" in the sense of an order inding the accused not guilty on any of the charges framed against him, when contrasted with the language of clause (b) which provides for the Appellate Coart altering the finding where the necused has been convicted by the first Court on certain charges but not on other charges

We are not aware of any reported decision opposed to the view we have taken The observations of the Full Bench in Queen Empress v Balwant(1) are not applicable to the present case, once in that case there was a complete acquittal ead there was no appeal before the High Court against a conviction so est to make section 423 (b) read with section 489 applicable, and the effect of that provision was not considered

On the other hand this Coart has more than once acted in accordance with the view we have taken. In Re Goundan(2) the second accused was charged with marder (section 302, Indian The Sessions Judge acquitted him of that offence, Penal Code) bat found him guilty of culpible homicide not amounting to murder (section 304, Indian Penal Code), and sentenced him to transportation for life He appealed to this Court which also gave notice of revision, and this Court (Sir Subramadia Aryan, Office ating C J and Boddan, I) convicted him of ingreder and sentenced Again in Re Sathu Sarara(3), the accused was him to death charged in the Sessions Court with murder (section 302, Indian Penal Code), but was acquitted of that offence and convicted only of voluntarily causing grievous hurt (section 325) The accused appealed to this Churt, which also gave notice of revision, and the Court (Bensos and Waters JJ) held that he was culty at the least of culpable homicide not amounting to murder, and added "we accordingly, as a Coart of Revision, convict him of that offence," and it enhanced the aentence. It is true that in neither of these cases was the legality of altering the finding called in question or discussed, but for the reasons already stated we are of opinion that the procedure was legal though, no doubt, the power should in practice be exercised sparingly, as, in fact, it has been in the past

Magistrate, Bellary, binding him over in a eum of Rs 1,000 to keep the peace. It has not been in my experience the practice to admit such petitions and the petitioner's counsel anticipating this objection, though he does not refer to it in his petition, has himself raised the question when arguing the matter before me. He contends that under section 125, Criminal Procedure Code, a District Magistrate is empowered to revise any order passed under section 118, Criminal Procedure Code, by a Subordinate Magistrate and quotes the ruling in Nabu Sardar v. Emperor(1), in support of this view. He is unable, however, to point to any ruling of the Madras High Court in his favour

In the Calcutta ruling a Full Bench held, overruling the decision of a Divisional Bench, that it was open to the District Magistrate under section 125, Criminal Procedure Code, to set eside an order under section 118 on a petition presented by the party aggrieved. With great deference to the view of the learned Jedges in that case, there are, in my opinion, reasons which preclude me from following it In the first place, the decision was an ex parte one, as no one appeared for the Crown, and it might well be that, if the Crown had been represented, the decision would have been different. In the next place, the decision makes no reference to section 406. Criminal Precedure Code, which gives a person, bound over to be of good behaviour, the right to appeal against the order but omits all mention of a person ordered to keep the peace Seems that the Codo has been several times revised, this omission can hardly he accidental but must be intentional. This is clear from the decision in In the matter of the petition of Chet Ram(2), where it was Ind down that a person ordered to give security for keeping the peace has no right of appeal and no right to be heard at all such person has the right to petition the District Magistrate under section 125, Criminal Procedure Code, it was to be expected that the right would have been recognized in that decision

It is true that the petitioner admits that in this case he has no right of appeal though he does claim to petition this Court by way of revision. A reference to section 125 shows that under it the District Magistrate may cancel a bond either for keeping the peace or for good behaviour. If then the petitioner's present claim be conceded, it follows that, in the event of his sleeping over the right of appeal conferred by section 400, or of MARE Gown an appeal under that section being dismissed, it is still open to him to proceed by way of revision petition, under section 120 This can hardly have been intended by the Legislature

Nor is this all The terms of section 125, as observed by the Calcutta High Court, are very wide and give the District Magis trate discretion at any time to cancel a bond. To accept therefore the positioner's arguments would mean admitting his right to present not one but any number of applications under that section "

This case coming on for hearing, the Court (Berson and SUNDARA AYYAR, JJ) made the following

ORDER OF REFERENCE TO A FULL BEVOIL-BENSON, J.-The BENSON J. question before us in this case is as to the powers of a District Magistrate under section 125, Criminal Procedure Code

I he facts briefly are es follows -

The Deputy Megistrate acting under sections 107 and 118, Criminal Procedure Code, directed the petitioner to execute a bond to keep the peace. The petitioner did so and then petitioned the District Megistrate to act under section 125. Oriminal Procedure Code, and to set aside the order of the Deputy Magistrate and to cancol the bond The ground alleged by the petitioner was that the Deputy Magistrate had no sufficient reasons for requiring him to execute the bond. The District Magistrato refused to outertun the petition, stating "I bold that I have no power to ontertain this petition" We are now asked to revise this order of the District Magistrate

I am of opinion that the view takes by the District Magistrate as to his powers under section 125 is incorrect The section runs as follows -"The Chief Presidency or District Magistrate may at any time, for sofficient reasons to be recorded in writing, caucel any bond for keeping the peace or for good hehaviour executed under this Chapter by order of any Court in his district not superior to his Court '

It will be observed that the words of the section are very wide The District Magistrate ' may, at any time, for sufficient reasons," cancel such e hond, se, for reasons which appear to the District Magistrate, in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion, to be sufficient If the District Magistrate, in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion, is of opinion that the bond ought never to bave been required is not that a sufficient reason for cancelling the bond? I can find nothing in the section to qualify or restrict the ordinary and natural meaning of the language used, or to indicate that "sufficient reasons' means reasons in connection with comething which occurred after the execution of the bond

The words of the ecchon "at any time" (which are not found in the corresponding section 500 of the Code of 1872, but were introduced when the sections were recast in the Code of 1882) seem to point to the same conclusion. If the District Magnetrate may within a few minutes of a Subordinate Nagistrate exacting the execution of a bond, cancel it, it could haidly be in consequence of anything that occurred after the execution of the hond. The view that I take was unanimously taken by a Full Bench of five Judges of the Calcutta High Court in the recont case of Nabs Sarlar v Emperor(1), overruling a contrary decision of a Bench of the same Court in Barka Chandra Dey v Jammejoy Dutt(2). It is also the view taken by Khox, J, in two cases Emperor v Abdur Rahim(3) and Emperor v Someshar Das(4).

There has been much discussion as to the nature of the purisdiction vested in the Dietrict Magistrate under section 125. that is, whether it is an original, or an appellate or a revisional jurisdiction I do not, however, think that the existence of the jurisdiction should be doubted or that ite extent, according to the plan language of the eection, should be curtailed, because of apparent difficulties in classifying the nature of the juris diction with reference to other sections of the Code I say apparent difficulties because I think that on examination they will not be found to be insuperable. It is, I think, clear from sections 404 and 406, Criminal Procedure Code that no anneal is allowed in regard to an order to execute a bond to keep the peace, and consequently the jurisdiction given under section 125 cannot be regarded as an appellate jurisdiction. This is what was expressly held in In the matter of the petition of Chet Ram(5), and by Tunnall, J., in Banars: Das v Partab Singh(6), but the decisions did not go beyond that point, or state that the District Magistrato had not any revisional powers under section 125 The distinction is of importance, for if there is a right Ben on J of appeal, the appeal cannot be dismissed without giving the appellant an opportunity of being heard (section 421, Criminal Procedure Code), whereas there is no similar provision in regard to petitions for revision

Whether the inrisdiction given by section 125 is to be regarded as original or revisional, depends on the circumstances which evoke the exercise of the parisdiction If the petitioner alleges that in the events that have happened since the execution of the bond its continuance is no longer necessary and that it should, therefore, be cancelled the jurisdiction invoked is clearly of an original, not a revisional character But if the petitioner alleges that the order was made for insufficient reasons, and asks for the cincollation of the bond on this ground, the jurisdiction invoked is revisional in character No doubt section 125 doos not, in terms, provide for setting aside the order to execute the bond it only provides for the cincellation of the bond, but I take it that if the bond is cancelled by the superior Court on the ground that it ought never to have been required, the potitioner would be content with baying obtained the substance and would not be too curious in seekin, for the express cancellation of the order. The omission to provide expressly for the setting ands of the order was, perhaps due to a desire for our plicity of languige, and to the fact that the section covers both the classes of cases to which I have referred, in one of which the original order was rightly passed, though the continuouco of the bond is no longer necessary, and in the other of which the cancellation of the hond may be regarded as, in effect, depriving of any further importance, the original order which was wrongly nassed

It may also be observed that under section 124 the District Magistrate may order a person imprisoned for failure to give seenrity to be discharged but the section says nothing about cancelling the order of the Sabordinate Magistrate requiring the bond to be given It can hardly be contended that the absence of a provision in the section for curcelling the order, limits the power of the District Magistrate to discharge the MABE GOWD BENSON J prisoner to cases other than those in which the order of the Suh ordinate Magistrate was illegal or nanecessary at the time when it The interpretation which I have given to section 125 seems to me to be in accordance not only with its plain language, but with obvious convenience The District Magistrate is the Chief Magistrate responsible for the peace of the whole district . and it seems improbable that the Legislature would restrict his power of control over the urders of his Schordinate Magistrates when those orders ore, in his more experienced judgment, nn necessary for the peace of the district It is contended, however. that he could olweys report the case to the High Court under section 138, but that would seem to involve a lengthy and cumbrous procedure without any corresponding adventage. It may be pointed out also that the Chief Presidency Magistrate has power to act under section 125, but it is not clear that he has eny power under section 138 or otherwise to report a case to the High Court for revision If, therefore, the restricted scope of section 125 contended for by the Public Prosecutor is correct, a wrong or illegal order made by o Subordinate Presidency Magistrate under sections 107 and 118, could not be interfered with hy the Chief Presidency Magistrate himself, our could be report the case to the High Coort This could herdly have been the intention of the Legislatore

It is also suggested that if the Legislature intended to give the District Magistrate revisional powers, they would have been given in Chapter XXXII, as in the case of wrongfol discharges. but the answer is that there was no need to make any provision in that chapter os it had already been made in section 125 think that any argument can be drawn from the fact that the Sessions Court is a Court of Reference for certain purposes under section 123, for section 125 is careful to exclude from its purview all such cases In my npmm, than, the District Magistrate 10 the present case had power under section 125 to entertain the petition to cancel the bond, and it was open in him, in his discretion, to consider whither there were sufficient reasons for requiring the petitioner to execute the head, and to cencel it if he found sufficient reason for so doing The fact that there was a prayer to set aside the order in pursuance of which the bond was executed chuld not deprive the District Magistrate of the jurisdiction given by the section to cancel the bond

I would set uside his order and direct him to restore the petition to his file, and to deal with it in accordance with law is above stated

I do not think that this Court all ould go is to the merits is a case of this kind where the District Magistrate 1 as jurisdiction hut has dismissed the petition on the ground that he has no turisdiction In he Irddula Ross Reddi(1), I refused to entertain a petition similar to the present pesition on the ground that the matter was one within the cognizance of the District Magistrite and no application had leen made to him. It seems to me that he is in a better position tl in this Court to deal with this matter which relates to the peace of his district

The same view wis taken and the same rule followel, in two cases by Knox, J, already referred to [Emperor v Abdur Rahim(2) and Emperor v Someshar Das(3)]

As, however, my learned brother does not agree with me as to the interpretation of section 125 and as the question of law involved is one of import ince and likely often to arise in practice, I think it desirable to refer for the decision of the Full Bench tlo question whether, on the facts of this case as stated by mc, the District Magistrate was right in holding that " he had no power to entertain the petition '

ATYAR, J

SUNDARA AYYAR, J -In this case an order was passed by the Sub Divisional First class Magistrate of Bellary directing the petitioner in this Court, Mare Gowd under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code to execute a hond for Loepu g the peace. The petitioner moved the District Magistrate of Bellary under section 125. Criminal Procedure Code to set aside the order and to cancel the bond It is admitted that the application was bried entirely on the ground that it was passed by the Sub D visional Magistrate on insufficient grounds The District Magistrate held that he had no power to revise the order of the Sub Divisional Magistrate under section 125 as he was asked to do This Court is asked to hold in the exercise of its nowers of revision that the District Magistrate was wrong in declining jurisdiction

The question for decision is whether the District Magistrate was right in the view he took of his powers under section 125 The contention of Mr J C Adam, the learned counsel for the petitioner, is that section 125 confers plenary powers on the MARS GORD. District Magistrate to cancel the bond executed for keeping the peace or for good behaviour on any good ground, whether because the order was wrongly passed, or because there was no further necessity for keeping the bond alive in consequence of a change in the circumstances of the case, or because, on fresh facts not presented to the Magistrate who passed the order but brought to the notice of the District Magistrate, the order directing security to be given appears to be unnecessary It is admitted that before a bond has been actually executed the Dis trict Magistrate has no power under the section to set aside the order directing a person to execute a bond, Mr Adam relies on a decision of the Full Beach of the Calcutta High Court, Nabu Sardar v Empero (1) in support of his contention The learned Public Prosecutor contends, on the other hand, that the jurisdic tion conferred by eection 125 on the District Magistrate cannot molude the power to set aside the order of any inferior Magistrate as a Court of Appeal or Revision , and therefore, also the power to orncel the bond executed, in pursuance of the order, on the ground that it was wrongly passed This contention must, I think, be sustained The different kinds of jurisdiction possessed by a superior Court over the proceedings of an inferior Court are described in the Criminal Procedure Code as those of a Court of "Appeal," "Confirmation," 'Reference or Revision " See section 520 "Appeals" are dealt with in Chapter XXXI Reference and Revision are dealt with in Chapter XXXII Confirmation" is dealt with in special sections relating to proceedings of an inferior Court requiring confirmation Section 404 enacts that " No appeal shall be from any judgment or order of a Criminal Court except as provided for by the Code or by any other law for the time being to force" No appeal is provided for either in Chapter XXXI or in terms anywhere else in the Code against an order either under section 106 or section 107 directing security to be given to keep the peace, while an appeal is provided by section 406 against an order, passed by a Magis trate other than a District Magistrate or a Presidency Magistrate. for security for good behaviour onder section 118 of the Code. With respect to a District Magistrate's powers of revision section

435 entitles him to call for and examine the record of any proeeeding before any inferior Criminal Conri-Section 436 empowers him to pass final orders in revision in one class of cases . and section 438 authorizes him to report to the High Court the result of his examination of the record in other cases for the orders of the High Court There can be no doubt that both the Sessions Judge and the District Magistrate are empowered to report to the High Court an order directing security for keeping the peace under section 488 after examining the record under section 435 It is unlikely that, if the District Magistrate was intended to be Court of Appeal or Revision with respect to orders or security to keep the peace, provision would not have been made for it in Chapter AXAI or Chapter AXAII There is no apparent reason for not doing so and for providing an appeal or revision in another portion of the Code Besides, it is mulikely that the word "Appeal or Roysson" would not have been employed in section 120, if it was intended that the District Magistrate should be a Court of Appeal or Revision with respect to the order of an inferior Court for security to keep the peace Again section 125 refers to an order for security for good behaviour as well as to or e for accuraty to keep the peace. It is not likely that section 125 also was intended to confer the powers of an Appellate Court in the former class of cases when section 406 expressly movides an appeal in such cases An examination of some other sections in Chapter VII (C) dealing with "proceedings in all cases subsequent to order to furnish security" leads to the same conclusion Section 123, clause (2), makes the Sessions Judge a Court of Reference with respect to all orders for security passed by Magistrates for a period exceeding one year, and the High Court a Court of Reference for similar orders passed by a Presidency Magistrate Is it likely that the District Magistrate would be made a Court of Appeal or Revision in a case where the Sessions Judge is made a Court of Reference Section 124 gives the District Magistrate the power to release a Jerson imprisoned for failing to Live security ordered by any Magistrate of the district, including his own predecessor, where he is of opinion that the release may be made without hazard to the community or to any other per-on He may, on the same ground, reduce the amount of security or curtail the time for which security has been required. origin il jurisdiction not questioning the legality or validity of an order passed for giving security Where the order for security has been passed by the Court of Session or the High Court, the District Magistrate or the Chief Presidency Magistrate, as the case may be, may make a reference to the Sessions Court and the High Court, respectively, if he thinks that a person imprisoned for failing to give security may be discharged without any hazard Such a reference also does not question the validity of the original order for security It is unlikely that section 125 immediately following the above sections and not expressly providing that the District Magistrato is to be a Court of Appeal or Rousson intended to confer on him powers of an appellate or revisional character Morcover, if this were the intention there is no roison for not enabling the District Mug strate to set aside the order for security and for providing only that he may cancel the boad after it has been executed It does not seem to oo pormissible to interpret the power to cancel the bond as including the power to set uside the order for secarity A stronger reason for holding that the District Magustrate has 10 appellato powers under section 125 is that he is our owered to exercise the power conferred by the section of any time It is extremely improbable that Appellate Jarisdiction would be given to a Court without limiting the time within which each power might be exercised The Calcutta High Court in Barla Clandra Dey v Janmejoy Dutt(1), held that "the jurisdiction conferred by section 125 is not an appellate or revisional, but an original jarisdiction" This appears to be the only view consistent with the provisions of the Code already referred to It is time that no bond hid been actually executed in that case and the District Magistrate s order was therefore entirely wrong and the opinion expressed by the learned Judices who decided the case may be regarded as only an obster dictum In Nabu Sardar v Emperor(2), a bond for keeping the peace had been executed by the person ordered to do so Ho applied to the District Magistrate for the cancellation of the bond It does not appear on what ground he requested him to do so MACLEAN, CJ, 1eld that the District Magistrate may, under section 125, cancel a bond for may reason which he thinks snfficient He observed, "If he thinks that the bond ought never to have been required, is not that a anficient reason? I should Many Gown There is nothing in the section to qualify or restrict the natural meaning of the language used, or to indicate that sufficient reasons means reasons in connection with something which has occurred after the execution of the hond " Gnose, J. concurred in the observation. The questions referred to the Full Bench were -" (1) Has a District Magistrate power under section 125 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to direct the cancellation of a hand to keep the peace executed on an order by a Subordinate Magistrate on any other ground except that the bond is no longer necessary? (ii) Has the case of Barka Chandra Dey v Janmejoy Dutt(1), heen correctly decided ?' It must be observed that in Barka Chandra Deu v Janmejou Dutt(1) it was observed that a hond could be cancelled under section 125 only "if after a bond has been executed it is made to appear that hy reason of the circumstances as they existed at the date of the application, that is circumstances subsoquent to the date of the execution of the bond, the continuance of the latter is no longer necessary the District Magistrate may caucel it" The other learned Judges who took part in Nabu Sardar v Emperor(2), agreed in answering the first question in the affirmative and the second in the negative. That is, they held that the District Magistrate's power to cancel a bond was not confined to the case where the bond was no longer neces sary and that Barka Clandra Dey v Janmejoy Dutt(1) which held the contrary view was not correctly douded. It is not quite clear whether they intended to concur in the Chief Justice's observation that the cancellation make be hased merely on the ground that the order for security was wrongly passed Section 125 merely states that the District Magistrate may cancel the bond "for sufficient resson" What would consti tute a "sufficient reason" is not explained. Section 124 confines the power to discharge a person unprisoned for failing to give security to cases where there would be no hazard in releasing the accused. It is reasonable to infer that the " sufficient reason" referred to in section 125 was intended to be wider than the reason mentioned in section 124. At the same

District Magistrate was n power to cancel the bond and note Re

MARE GOWD power to upset an order to keep the peace. This was a mere matter of wording There was nothing in the Code limiting appeals to the phapter specially dealing with appeals (Chapter XXXII and indeed eects a 404 admitted the possibility of appellate jurisdiction being provided elsewhere in the Code for it said. "No appeal shall be except as provided for hy this Code" Further the words in section 125 "at any time" pre cluded the idea that the hond could only be cancelled become rushfacts had arisen since it was ordered. Suppose the order was passed by the Snhordmate Magistrate and the bond immediately entered into and that therenpon the person hound over, at once, say within 30 minutes of the passing of the order, asked the District Magistrate to cancel the bond, the latter might have to say that although desirous of cancelling the hond and although he had power to cancel it at any time, he could not exercise that power as there had been insufficient time for anything fresh to happen The effect would be to make the words "at nny time" meaningless and to read into the section limitations which would completely destroy its sense

The Public Prosecutor (C F Namer) contra

The arrangement of the sections in and the scheme of Chapter VIII showed that the appellate jurisdiction in the strict sense of the word was not contemplated [He then reviewed the sections of Chapter VIII in detail ? The jurisdiction conferred by section 125 was neither appellate nor revisional but an original jurisdiction and an original jurisdiction must be exercised upon original matter and not treated as an appellate jurisdiction

The language to " cancel the hond ' instead of " set aside the order" shows that there is no power to deal with the order

Therefore it cannot be appellate or revisional

The power is equally exercisable in cases of honds for good behaviour where there is an appeal under section 406 which indicates it ie not appealable

It is analogous to the power to "order to be released" given to the District Magistrate by the preceding section 124

The words "at any time" may have been inserted to enable the District Magistrate to cancel the bond however late, that is, the appellant was not to be preseduced by delay in applying for its cancellation Cur ad well

SAKABAN NAIP J — The question for consideration to whether a bond to keep the porce executed by a person in pursuance of an order of a First class Magnitrate under sections 107 and 118, Criminal Procedure Code, can be cancelled by the District Magnitrate under section 125, Criminal Procedure Code, on the sole ground that the evidence before the Magnitrate did not matify him to passing such an order

An order under sections 107 and 118 is passed to prevent any person from committing a breach of the peace or from disturbing public tranquillity It is based upon evidence recorded as in summons cases. The amount of the hond must be fixed with due regard to the circumstances of the case and should not he excessive The period for which security is required is to commence on the date of such order unless the Magistrate fixes a later date. Sureties also may be required by the Magistrate if he thinks it necessity, and in default of such security, the person against whom the order is passed may be committed to prison until ho gives it or till the period of one year expires Under section 124, the District Magistrate may release any person who has not given such security, if he is of opinion that it may be done ' without hazard to the community or to any other person" Thon comes the unportant section-section 125 -which runs in these words "The Chief Presidency or District Magistrate may at any time, for sufficient reasons to be recorded in writing, cincel any bond for keeping the peace or for good behaviour executed under this Chapter by order of any Court to his district not superior to his Court" BENSON, J., held that, if the District Vagistrate is of opinion that the order is not supported by the evidence on the record, it is open to him to cancel the bond SUNDARA AYVAR, J, on the other hand, held that such bond can be cancelled only on the ground of something occurring after the execution of the bond which makes it right that it should be cancelled or on some other grounds which would not impeach the correctness of the order passed by the inferior Magistrate, but that a District Magistrate has no power to cancel the bond on the ground that the order for its execution was made on insufficient grounds

If we give the worls "for sufficient reasons" in the above section their natural meaning then it would seem that the District Magistrate may set uside the order if he thinks that the evidence did not support the conclusion arrived at by the Subordinate Magistrate That the evidence adduced does not warrant the conclusion is surely a sufficient reason for interference If anything had happened after the date of the p ssing of the order which made the continuance of the bond unnecessary that also would be a sufficient reason. If again the District Magistrato considered f om any other information which was not placed before the Deputy Magnetrate that any hond was unnecessary then also the section gives him the power to cancel the hond Is there any reason then, to restrict or qualify the ordinary meaning of the words used? It was argued that section 125 refers to orders for security to Leep the peace as well as to orders for security for good behaviour that section 406 gives a right of appeal against the latter class of orders, no such right of appeal is given in the former class of cases by any section of the Code, nor is any right of the District Magistrate to revise in terms recognised, it is therefore unlikely that section 125 was intended to confer such powers Now the power of interference with orders for security for good behaviour was given by the Criminal Procedure Code, section 125, only recently inference can therefore be drawn from that provision and the right of appeal given by section 406 The fact that no right of appeal is given does not show that the District Magistrate may not exerci e the powers usually vested in an Appellate Court In Revision for instance such powers are often exercised, though the party has no right to be heard Sections 435 to 438 which refer to the revisional powers of the District Magistrate do not refer to the security cases, as they have been already dealt with under section 125 Moreover it has to be noticed that section

SAYKABAN NATE J

125 admittedly enables the District Vigistrate to interfere on grounds other thus those disclosed by the evidence before the Marz Gowp Magistrate who passed the order A Court in the oxercise of its appellate or revisional powers is coafined to the evidence recorded The section therefore conferred far larger powers than those of an appellate or revisional Court. The object of section 107 indicates probably why it was considered inexpedient to give a right of appeal to the party, while as the Chief Magistrate responsible for the peace of the district it may have been considered advisible to give him ample powers of interference The order under sections 107 and 118 may result in simple impresonment for one year. It is hardly likely that such an order would be astended to be final The High Court's power of Revision when the evidence is recorded only as in summons cases will seldom be invoked with success, and as no right of appeal is given, it is probable that section 125 was intended to give the District Magistrate the right to roview the evidence An argument was based on the fact that section 125 enables the District Magistrate only to cancel the bond, not to set aside the order The hand may be cancelled not only for the reason that the order is wrong, but, though the order is right on the evidence before the Sabordinute Magistrate, for other reasons the District Magistrate considers its continuance unnecessary The order in such cases cannot be set aside Again the order under sections 107 and 118 is not to keep the peace, but to execute a bond to keep the peace. With the execution of the bond the order may be said to have spent itself. It is the hond then that remains to be cancelled Section 124 also sapports this conclusion. It enables the District Magistrate to release any person imprisoned for failing to give security when he is satisfied that he u ight do so "w thout hazard to the community or to any other person," or, is other words, when there is no apprehension of any breach of peace or disturbance of public tranquillity as stated in section 107. It is obvious that the District Magistrate may arrive at this conclusion on the evidence taken by his Subordinate Magistrate If this nower can be exercised only in the nature of original parisdiction. it is probable it would have been conferred also not solely on the Magastrato who originally passed the order. If he could do so under section 124, he surely could do the same under section 125.

to cancel the hond Sundar Ayras, J, on the other hand, held that such bond can be cancelled only on the ground of something occurring after the execution of the bond which makes it right that it should be cancelled or on some other grounds which would not impeach the correctness of the order passed by the inferior Magistrate, but that a District Magistrate has no power to cancel the bond on the ground that the order for its execution was made on insufficient grounds.

If we give the words "for sufficient grounds" in the above

section their natural meaning then it would seem that the District Magistrate may set aside the order if he thinks that the evidence did not support the conclusion arrived at by the Subordinate Magistrate. That the evidence adduced does not warrant the conclusion is surely a sufficient reason for interference. If anything had happened after the date of the passing of the order which made the continuance of the bond unnecessary, that also would be a sufficient reason. If again the District Magistrate considered from any other information which was not placed before the Deputy Magnetrate that any bond was unnecessary, then also the section gives him the power to cancel Is there any reason, then, to restrict or qualify the the bond ordinary meaning of the words used? It was argued that section 125 refers to orders for security to keep the peace as well as to orders for security for good hehaviour, that section 406 gives a right of appeal against the latter class of orders, no such right of appeal is given in the former class of cases by any section of the Code, nor is any right of the District Magistrate to revise in terms recognised, it is therefore unlikely that section 125 was intended to confer such powers Now the power of interference with orders for security for good behaviour was given by the Criminal Procedure Code, section 125, only recently No inference can therefore he drawn from that provision and the right of appeal given by section 406. The fact that no right of appeal is given does not show that the District Magistrate may not exercise the powers usually vested in an Appellate Court In Revision for instance such powers are often exercised, though the party has no right to be heard Sections 435 to 488 which refer to the revisional powers of the District Magistrate do not refer to the security cases, as they have been already dealt with under section 125 Moreover it has to be noticed that section grounds other than those disclosed by the evidence before the MARE Gown, Magistrate who pas ed the order A Court in the exercise of its appellate or revisional powers is confined to the ovidence recorded The section therefore conferred far larger powers than those of an appellate or revisional Court The object of section 107 indicates probably why it was considered inexpedient to give a right of appeal to the party, while, as the Chief Magistrato responsible for the peace of the district it may have been considered advisible to give him ample powers of interference The order under sections 107 and 118 may result in simple imprisonment for one year. It is hardly likely that such an order would be intended to be final The High Court's power of Revision when the evidence is recorded only as in summons cases will seldom be invoked with success, and as no right of appeal is given, it is probable that section 125 was intended to give the District Magistrate the right to review the evidence An argument was based on the fact that section 125 enables the District Magistrate only to cancel the bond, not to set aside the order The bond may be cancelled not only for the reason that the order is wrong, but, though the order is right on the evidence before the Subordinate Megistrate, for other reasons the District Magistrate considers its continuance unnecessary The order in such cases cannot be set aside Again the order under sections 107 and 118 is not to keep the peace, but to execute a bond to keep the peace. With the execution of the bond the order may be said to have spent itself. It is the head then that remains to be cancelled

Section 124 also supports this conclusion. It enables the District Magistrate to release any person imprisoned for failing to give security when be is satisfied that he might do so "w thout bazard to the community or to any other person," or, in other words, when there is no epprehension of any breach of peace or disturbance of public tranquillity as stated in section 107 It is obvious that the District Magistrate may arrive at this conclusion on the evidence taken by his Subordinate Magistrate If this nower can be exercised only in the nature of original jurisdiction. it is prohible it would have been conferred allo not solely on the Magistrato who originally passed the order. If be could do so under section 124, he surely could do the same under section 125.

It is also argued that the District Magistrate can interfere only after the bond has been executed or the party has been committed to prison This is true But it has to be pointed out that the period for which the security is required commences at the date of the order unless the Magistrate for sufficient reasons fixes a later date-section 120 Therefore the party must execute his bond with or without surety at once, in which case the District Magnetrate can deal with the matter under section 125, or he is committed to prison in default, when the purisdiction of the District Magistrate conferred on him by section 124 may be invoked. The power to fix a leter date was only given recently I see no reason therefore to depart from the natural menning of the words, and agreeing with Benson, J and the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court, answer the question in the negative, se, that the District Magistrate is entitled to entertain a petition to set uside the order of the Deputy Magistrate as having been passed on insufficient grounds TYADJI. the District Magistrate was right in declining to assume jurisdiction under section 120 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The section is as follows. —"The Chief Presidency or District Magistrate may at any time, for sufficient reasons to he recorded in writing, cancel any bond for keeping the peace or for good behaviour executed under this Chapter by order of any Court in his district not superior to his Court."

According to the view of the section taken by the District

Magastrate, in cases where it is contended that hy the bearing the cancelled and such contontion is based on the same materials as those on which the order was originally made, there cannot be "sufficient reasons" within the meaning of the section for cancelling the bond

It is not suggested that there is mything in the section itself, or in any other part of the Codo, to give a restricted meaning to the words "sufficient reasons". But my learned brother, Sundaia Ayras, J., was of opinion that, when section 125 is read with the rest of the Codn, and when due consideration given to its context, it appears that the nature of the powers conferred by the section is different from that which would result, if this section were read in its more liberal, and, what seems to me to be its natural senso. without fresh material on the ground that the bond should never have been ordered to be executed, as the more liberal construc- MARE GOWD tion, and by the more restricted construction I mean the Tiable, J construction which has been put upon it by the District Magistrate and accepted by SUVIARA AYYAR, J, and supported before us by the learned Government Pleader

The first head of argument before us was that, if the section is read in its more liberal sense, it will have the effect of providing for an appeal from an order requiring a bond to be executed, and it is argued that it is indicated sufficiently by the Code that there is an intention on the part of the Legislature not to permit of an appeal from such an order This argument seems to me to assume, without sufficient grounds, that the jurisdiction that would arise if section 125 were read in its more liberal sense was considered by the Legislature to be exactly in the nature of a power to entertain an appeal It seems to mo that it could not have been so considered It is admitted that, whichever construction is placed on the section, the Chief Presidency or the District Magistrate may, if he chooses, cancel the hond on a consideration of fresh materials which were not before the Court ordering the execution of the hand This is not generally associated with appellate powers It is true that courts with appellate jurisdiction have, in exceptional cases, the power to take fresh evidence, hut they are, as a rule, required to give their decisions on the same materials as were present before the Court of First Instance. Hence, if the powers conferred by the section are liberally construed, they would not assume the form of appellate powers,

The argument above referred to seems to me equally to ho incapable of withstanding a careful examination from another point of view for, assuming that the section should be read in its more restricted sense, and if therefore, it is taken as providing for a review on fresh materials, then it would be more in conformity with the usual and recognised principles of the law of procedure to empower the Court that has made the order in the first instance to review that order, whereas in section 125 it is contemplated that the Court which is asked to cancel the bond is, in most cases, different from the Court initially innking the order. In other words even if the section is read in its more restricted sense (is contended for by the Government Plunder). the powers created by it do not coincide with powers of review The fact that, in the great majority of cases the powers under

RaMARR GOWD SANKARAN NATE J

It is also argued that the District Magistrate can interfere only after the hand has been executed or the party has been committed to prison This is true But it has to be pointed out that the period for which the security is required commences at the date of the order unless the Magistrate for sufficient reasons fixes a later date-section 120 Therefore the party must execute his bond with or without sarety at once, in which case the District Magistrate can deal with the matter under section 125, or he is committed to prison in default, when the jurisdiction of the District Magistrate conferred on him by section 124 may be invoked. The power to fix a later date was only given recently I see no reason therefore to depart from the natural meaning of the words, and agreeing with Benson, J and the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court, answer the question in the negative, se, that the District Magistrate is entitled to entertain a petition to set aside the order of the Deputy Magistrate as having been passed on insufficient grounds Trassi, J - The question we have to determine is whether in writing, cancel may bond for keeping the peace or for good behaviour executed under this Chapter by order of any Court in his district not superior to his Court" According to the view of the section taken by the District Magistrate, in cases where it is contended that the bond should be cancelled and such cootention is based on the same materials as those on which the order was originally made, there cannot the District Magistrate was right in declining to assume jurisdiction under section 125 of the Criminal Procedure Code section is as follows -" The Chief Presidency or District Magis trate may at any time, for sufficient reasons to be recorded

bo "sufficient reasons" within the meaning of the section for cancelling the bond

It is not suggested that there is anything in the section itself, or in any other part of the Code, to give a restricted meaning to the words ' sufficient reasons" But my learned brother, Sundaha Ayyan, J. was of omnion that, when section 125 is read with the rest of the Code, and when due consideration given to its context, it appears that the nature of the powers conferred by the section is different from that which would result, if the section were read in its more liberal, and, what seems to me to be, its natural sense I shall refer to the construction of the section which would permit the Magistrate to cancel the bond

In the second place, it seems to me that if I am right in the Make Gowd. conclusion that the powers are different, and perhaps, in some Trassi J respects, more extensive, and if I am right in assuming that the general nature of the functions exercised by the District Magistrate throwe light on the nature of the powers conferred by section 125, then it would be more in accordance with the scope of the section, as I interpret it, that the Legislature should save the Magistrate from the necessity of expressing any orinion as to the correctness or the incorrectness of the original order where he is of opinion that the houd which had already been executed should be cancelled. In other words, in the view I take of the true construction of the section, the Legislature intended the Magistrate to exercise the powers quite independently of the necessity to pronounce on the correctness or the incorrectness of the original order This view, it seems to me, is supported by the nature of the prisdiction created by section 107 of the Crim nal Procedure Code (under which the bond is orginally ordered to be executed) and by the mode in which the Legis lature deals with orders passed under the section. It will be observed that these orders are not subject to appeal in the ordinary way (see section 406 of the Code). The Legislature. apparently, desired that no person should complain of an order to execute a hond for the purpose of preventing a breach of the peace or disturbance of public tranquility, but what it does provide is that, if the exigencies of public peace and tranquillity have been sufficiently safeguarded the authorities responsible for seeing that there is no breach of the peace, or disturbance of public tranguillity may have the power of bringing about a cessation of the operation of the measures, which they find to be no more necessary. Both the learned counsel who argued the case before us sought to found an argument on the words "at any time" which form part of the section I accept the interpretation put on those words by each of the counsel and think that the words in question mean "however carly or however late" Mr Adam may make the application, as he suggested, half an hour after the order is passed, and the Government Pleader may make it when there is only one day left for the expiration of the period for which the bond has been executed, but neather can prevent the appli If I am right that this is the effect of the cation ,' it is plain that no argument can be words

section 125 would be exercised by the District Magnetiate coupled with the nature of the functions annoxed to the office he holds seems also to furnish an indication that, whatever interpretation is given to section 125, it cannot have reference to a jurisdiction exactly similar to that of a Court of appeal or of revision. Neither construction makes the powers created by the section conform exactly to the powers of a Court of appeal or of revision in either case, they are powers of a special and rather of an exceptional nature.

But assuming that the more liberal construction of section 125 converts the jurisdiction conferred by it into that of an Appellato Court, I fail to see that there is anything in the Code which would constrain us to hold that section 125 ought neces sarily to be so construed as to prevent ite giving rise to powers of entertaining appeals Section 404 of the Criminal Procedure Code which has been referred to in this connection lays down that "no appeal shall lie . except as provided for by this Code or by any other law . " It is not stated that "no appeal shall be except as provided by Chapter XXXI of the Code" (which deals with appeals), or even "by Part VII" (which deals generally with appeals, reference and revision). Hence, it would seem that the Legislature did not contemplate the rest of the (ode to be so interpreted that no appellate or revisional powers should arise under any portion of the Code except under Part VII thereof

The learned Government Pleader also argued that, if section 125 is read together with sectiona 124 and 126, it will appear that the power under each of these sections does not arise unless the original order to give security has been given effect to, either the obcdience of the person against whom the order is made, or by unpresonment as a punishment for disobedience Hence, at is argued that it follows that the Court acting under section 125 must proceed on the basis that the order requiring the bond to be executed was rightly made, and the section markedly omits to say that the Chief Presidency for the District Magistrate may set uside the order, and yet, if the said Mugistrate cancels the bond on the same material that was before the first Court, it 18 evident that he, in effect, sets aside the order. This argument fails to convince me for two ressons. In the first place, it seems to me that, for the reasons I have already indicated, the Legislature in section 12a cout implates a kind of jurisdiction which

JUDGMENT -This is a suit by the plaintiffs, n firm of Wallis, J merchants carrying on business in Madras, against the tbree defendants, who are brothers alleged to be carrying on business in partnership in the mofussil for the price of goods sold and delivered with interest according to agreement, and the plaint alleges that accounts were settled on 7th January 1909 when Rs 3,976-0-6 were found due to the plaintiffs and the first defendant signed for that amount in the books of the plaintiffs first and third defendants do not contest, the snit defendant has filed a written statement in which he denies carrying on business in partnership with the first and third defendants and says that the business belonged exclusively to the first de-He also denies that the business was a family trade fendant and says there was no meaning in calling the defendants members of an undivided Hindu family as there is no family property.

The transactions with the first defendant are proved and are not barred owing to the acknowledgment by the first defendant There must therefore be judgment against him in any event As regards the second defeadant, I find it proved against him that he was a partner with the first defendant. His denial that he had anything to do with the business is contradicted by the letters exhibited in his own writing. It is clear that the defendants were angivided and were working together for profit in the business and this it seems to me renders them partners within the definition of section 239 of the Indian Contract Act The business was no doubt carried on in the name of the first defendant as appears from the plaintiffs' ledger, but there is

He also pleads that the suit is barred by limitation

Re Mare Gowd Tyabji J founded on the basis that the meaning to be annexed to them can only be one of the two mentioned by the learned counsel to the exclusion of the other, and that, if they mean "however early," they imply that there is no time for fresh material heing brought if on the other hand, they mean "however late," then they imply, in the first place that the delay in obtaining fresh material is not to projudice the applicant, and secondly, that the section cannot have reference to an appeal, time for which would ordinarily be limited.

For these reasons, I am of opinion that under section 125 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the Clust Presidency or District Magistrate may cancel the bond therein referred to, if the ead. Magistrate is of opinion that the Court ordering the execution of the said bond oneth never to have so ordered

This case coming on for final hearing (on 15th April 1913), after the expression of the opinion of the Full Bench on the question referred to, upon perusing the petition and the orders of the Lower Courts and the material papers in the case and upon hearing the arguments of J C Adam, counsel for potitioner and of the Public Prosecutor for the Crown the Court (Benson and Sundaya Ayyar, JJ) made the following order —

As regards limitation it is contended that the written acknowledgment by the first defendant of January 1909 does not affect the other defendante and that the suit is barred as against them under two recent decisions of this Court-Valasubramania Pillas v Ramanathan Chettrar(1) and Shark Mohideen Sahib v. Official Assignce of Madras(2) This is a question of very great importance, because written acknowledgments such as this are a very ordinary not to say necessary incident of business at any rate in this part of India, and any decision affecting their validity must have a far reaching operation. As is well known the object of the legislation on the subject was the desire to restrict the rule last down by Lord Manssield and the Court of King's Bench in Whitcomb v Whiting(3), that any not nowledgment or payment by one co-debtor was safficient to take the case out of the statute of lumitation as regards the others. This was effected as to acknowledgments by Lord Tenderden's Act. 9 Gco IV. cap 14, and as to payments by the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856, 19 & 20, Vict, o 97, section 14. The Indian Act of 1859 dealing only with acknowledgments provided generally (section 4) that "if more than one person be liable none of them shall be chargeable by reason only of a written acknowledgment signed by another of them." The Act of 1871, section 20, contained the following explanation 2 "Nothing in this section renders one of several partners or executors chargeable by reason of a written promise or acknowledgment signed by another of them" Section 20 of Act \V of 1877 provided that "Nothing in sections 18 and 19 renders one of several joint contractors, executors or mortgagees chargeable by reason only of a written acknowledgment, etc" This is very near the language of Lord Tenderden's Act "No such joint contractor, executor or administrator shall lose the benefit of the said enactments so as to be chargeable in respect or by

SEETHARAMA- the Allababad High Conrt referred to this decision with approval and held that where an acknowledgment was effected in the ordinary course of business of the firm and was such a transaction as was contemplated in section 251 of the Indian Contract Act. it was sufficient to save limitation In Dalsukhram v Kalidas (2), Candy, J, referred to Scott, J's ruling with approval, and stated that it had been approved by SARGENT, C.J., in an unreported case but the Court eventually sent down an issue whether assuming the partnership to have been existing when the acknowledgment was made, such acknowledgment was or was not an act necessary for or usually done in carrying on the husiness of the partnership (section 291 of the Indian Contract Act), in which case they held it must be taken to have been done with the authority of the other partners. There it may be observed that section 251 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, which was subsequent to the Limitation Act, IX of 1871, section 20, in which partners are expressly mentioned, is quite general in its terms and makes no exception as to payments and acknowledgments made in the necessary or ordinary course of the partnership business. Now if, as here held, it he enough to show that the acknowledgment was on act necessary for or usually done in carrying on the business of the partnership that would seem to conclude the question so far as relates to triding partnerships in this part of India It is the olmost invariable practice of tradecreditors there to insist on a written acknowledgment in their books being made by the debtore as a condition of giving credit and engaging in further transactions no doubt as a safeguard nguinst idle and dishonest defences being set up if they should ultimately be obliged to sue Such acknowledgments are made as a matter of course by the trade debtors, whether carrying on business singly or in partnership, and are forthcoming in almost every suit for the price of goods sold and delivered This is a matter within the daily experience of Courts of First Instance and I think they are entitled to take judicial notice of it if relevant and need not require it to be proved by evidence in each case

In this state of the nuthorities we think it desirable to refer the question, as stated at the heginning of this order, for the decr ion of the Full Bench, as we are inclined to doubt the correct ness of the decision in Muthiah Chetts v Emperor (3) and tho cases which followed it, having regard to the reasons stated in Dorasamı Naidu v. this case then came on for hearing before the Full Bench who expressed the following

OPTAION -We are of opinion that the jurisdiction of an WHITE C.J. Appellate Court to order a person who has been convicted of one of the offences mentioned in sub section (1) of section 106 of the Tribit JJ Code of Criminal Procedure, is not restricted to cases where the conviction was by one of the Courts specified in the sub section The words "an Appellate Court" are quite general and the word "also" indicates that the powers given by the section may be exercised by the Courts mentioned in sub section (1) and by any Appellate Court

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1895) sec 514 (5)-Bail bend-Bail prisoner in committing suicide-Discharge of suretics

When a person who has been let out on ball comm ts suicide the suret es are discharged from their obligation to produce bim

Petition under sections 435 and 439, Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), praying the High Court to revise the order dated 27th March 1919, of F. D. Bipp, the Chief Presidency Magistrate, Egimore, Madrie, in the matter of the buil-bond entered into by the late Mr. Voukataswanii Nayudn (accused), and his surefuce, the petitioners herein and in the said court.

The following are the facts of this case as set out in the order of the Chief Presidency Magistrate —

"On the 7th February 1912 three persons entered into a bond (duly excented before no) in the sum of Re 2,500 each that the said M Venkatasami Naidu would appear at the Court of the Presidency Megistrate at Eginore at 11 a x on the 15th idem and continue so to attend until otherwise directed by the said Magistrate. The suid accused duly attended until the 1st March but on that date he was absent and his absence was not satisfactorily explained. As a matter of fact his dead body wis recovered that day from a tank situated on his proporty at Kodambakum and an inquest was held by the Police on it the same evenus.

"The first witness at the inquest was Mr. Phillips, who had been attending Venkatasumi Nardu for two months. He strict that Venkatasumi Nardu had told lumon several occasions that is was tired of life and sshamed of the disgrace (of the criminal proceedings against him) and intended to end his life. He repeated this statement on the 29th February. The witness was not at all surprised when he heard that Venkatasumi Nardu had drowned himself. The second witness was Narayanasumi Audu, a son of the deceased. He stated that he had often heard his father say that he would take his life as he could not stand the disgrace His opinion was that his father had taken his life. The third witness was M Krishnasam Naidn, another son of the deceased He had often heard his father say that he would take his life, he had not the clightest doubt that his father had taken his life unable to hear his disgrace and failure. Another witness was Mr James Short, the tamily solicitor of the deceased He stated that Venk itasami Naidu bid often expressed his intention to put an end to him elf He was therefore not at all surprised when he heard that he had done so Colonel Donovan, I M S, who was the family docto , said that he was not surprised to hear of it as the deceased lad often told him that he would prefor death to the shame and exposure of the criminal proceedings pending against him. The opinion of the assessors was that the death was due to drowning 'in all probability suicidal' It cannot for an instant he doubted that M. Venkatasami Naidu drowned himself

"Notices were issued to the two emeties to appear and show cause why payment of the amount of their bonds should not be enforced. The suicties duly appeared in person and were also represented by an attornoy Each put in a petition submitting that it was not by any malfeasance or misfeasance or due to neglect or default on his part that he was unable to produce the eard M. Venkatasami Norda and that he was not aware that he had committed suicide, also, that his bond could not be forfeited seeing that Venkatasami Naidu was duly produced in court as long as he was alive " In dealing with the point of law raised the Chief Presidency Magistrate referred to Larl of Leitrim v Stewart(1) and Taylor v Caldwell(2) and continued -" In the case now under consideration the death was not the act of God, it was suicidal and the contracting sureties did make default The death of Venkatasumi Naidu might and should have been prevented It appears extraordinary on the face of it that none of the persons already referred to who were told by Venkatasami Naidu that he ment to take his life, took in steps to guard against his carrying out his threat. That they believed he would do so is shown by their statements that they were not surprised when they heard that he had drowned himself. Sureties

Re Vijia Raghavalu Naidu always take risks and it behoves them to guard their own interests even if they noglect those of others. Presumably the sureties were close friends of the deceased and they should have kept in touch with him and taken precautions for the due fulfilment of their bonds. They were negligent in their own interests, for their bonds would have been concelled had they applied to the court and Venkatasami Naidu would then have been more carefully provided for. It is clear that the petitioners took no trouble to ensure that they carried out their contract. They undertook to produce the min and the reason why they cannot do so was a prevontible reason and one which they should have made themselves aware of and guarded against.

I am of opinion that these sureties have forfeited their bonds and I accordingly direct that they pay the full penalty thereof"

Dr S Swamnadhan (instructed by Messrs Short, Bewes & Co, attorneys) for the petitioners rolled on Nrsingha Deb Chatterjee v. The King Enperor(1), as clear authority for the proposition that when a person on bail commits sincide the sureties are discharged as a matter of course. It was not possible to comply with the terms of the bond and no man should he penolized for follare to perform impossibilities. I he accused had not failed to attend in any legal sonse and the Chief Presidency Mogratrate should have held that a man could not he said to fail to attend when he was in fact dead ond so could not attend

I C Adam for the Crown Prosecutor contra The Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), section 514 (5), gives to the criminal courts in India a power analogous to that given by 4 Geo III, cap 10, which give the Barons of the Exchequer power to relieve on petition any person whose recognizance was hable to be estreated Section 514 makes no limitation upon the power of the court to estreat, all that the section says is that the court must be satisfied that the bond has been forfeited. The quo tan therefore depends upon the terms of the bond and hero, following the generol rule, the bond must be construed strictly. The sureties bound themselves that Venkata sum Anada would appear on a certain day. If Venkatasam Naida himself unde it impossible to uppear, os in this case he did by committing suicide, the sareties were none the less hable.

If it were to be held that the suicide of the principal must of necessity absolve the sureties one safeguard would immediately disappear. The desire of a criminal to make away with himself was far from uncommon but is any would not do so if they knew that their act would cause heavy loss to those friends who had bailed them.

Re Vijia-Eaghavalu Naidu

The whole history of the Irw of bail in both civil and criminal cases showed how strictly bail-bonds were enforced. No doubt certain exceptions may be recognized. But these exceptions were well defined and did not cover the present case. Originally the principal was delivered to the custody of the sureties, see Hall's Pleas of the Crown, vol. I, page 325, and ibid vol. II, page 124, who might pursue and take bim. [Bond Inaact] and Capron Archer(3). It must be presumed therefore that the sureties should use due care to see that he did not commit suicide. This custody had now become more moial than physical, but it was doubtful whether an action for false imprisonment would be by a principal against his surety if the latter insisted on confining the former.

The exceptions above referred to, whereby the sureties might be discharged divided themselves into three classes —

(i) by act of God, (ii) by act of law and (iii) by act of parties As regards the first class the death of the principal had been recognized in Sparrou v Sougate(3), Parry v. Berry(4) and Rawlinson v Gunston(5) Hat in none of these cases did the quostion of felo de se arise Insanty was not recognized as being ground for discharge See Kernot v Norman(6), Nutt v Verney(7), Cock v Bell(8), Cavanagh v Callett(9) and Ibbotson v Galicay (Lord)(10)

As regards acts of law, various circumstances might evenerate the sureties, such as, the principal becoming a bankrupt, being made a peer or a member of parh ument, being sent abroad under the Alica Act [Metrick v Vincher[11] and Follers v Critico[12], being convicted of crime and sentenced to transportation, [Hallow v Dunn(1)], and being impressed [Robertson v Patterson(2)] On the other hand the act of a foreign state was no ground for exonerating the sureties [Grant v Fa an(3)] In all the cases attention was paid to the point as to whether the principal could have been brought up before the act took place which prevented surrender and where it was possible for this to have been done the court invariably refused to exonerate the surety. In the present case the evidence showed that it was well known that Venkatasami Naidu was thinking of taking his life. His two medical attendants, his family solioitor, and his two sons all gave evidence to the effect that he had frequently stated that he was tired of life and ashamed of the disgrace and intended taking his life It can hardly be that the sureties were unaware of this intention and they took the risk when they gave bail for him In Regina v Ridpath(4), it is stated that the person not appearing according to his recognizance his absence (be if e cause or reason what it will) was the cause of the forfeiture of the recor mzance In Hunt's case(5) it was held that the conture of the principal hy French soldiers would not he a good plea if done hy his own contrivance So in the present case, the death of the principal would not be a good plea if done by his own contrivince In Nrisingha Deb Chatteriee v The King Emperor(6) no reasons were given The court seemed to have made a presumption based upon no authority that suicide must of necessity di charge the principal decided that they were hable on the ground that the suicide of the accused was o preventible reison for his non appearance and one which they should lave made thomselves aware of and guarded against It was first argued on this petition that the Chief Presidency Magistr te approached the question from the wrong point of view and that he should have held that the accused had not 'failed to attend" and that death presented his attendance We intimated at the hearing that we were unable to accept this view and Dr. Swaminadhan was unable to show how a permanent incipacity to attend caused by the act of the accused could be distinguished from a temporary incapacity owing to the same causes In our opinion the Chief Presidency Magistrate considered the liability of the sureties from the right point of view But the question to be decided is whether he was right in the view he took of the su eties liability Mr J C Adam who appeared for the Crown Prosecutor contonded that sureties must he taken to guarantee the appearance of the accused subject to the act of God and the act of the state of which the accused is a subject. He has invited our attention to a large number of Eoglish authorities including very properly some which did not support his contection. The decisions in civil cases against the surety rest on the well established principle that where one of two persons must suffer it should be the person through whose instrumentality, however innocent, the loss can be said to have arisen , but we do not think that this principle applies in criminal cases We do not propose to deal with all the cases quoted but only those which are sufficient to establish the proposition required for one decision. Merrick v Vaucher(1) was an application by the hails for an exemeratur to he entered upon several bul pieces on the ground that the defendant had heen sent out of Lugland under the Aheu Bill, 33 Geo III, cap 4 Lord KENYAN CJ strited the law as follows "The bull only engaged for the principal in the then situation of the parties. but it is now become impossible for them to reader the principal, and this impossibility does not arise from any act which they could control, but from the operation of on Act of Parliament These bul, therefore, to whom no fault or neglect whatever is imputable, ought not to suffer in consequence of an Act which was passed for the bonefit of the public. This is exactly the proposition stated by the Chief Presidency Magistrate and it is to be noted that the test applied by the Chief Justice was whether any default in neglect is imputable to the bail. The same view was ovidently adapted by the Court of King's Bench in Folkein v Critico(1) which was an application by a bail in like circumstances, though the principle is not clearly stated.

The next question is whether there was a duty cast on the bail to guard the accused an closely that he could not commit suicide There is an direct authority on the point, but Robertson y Patterson(2) supplies the auswer In that case the defendant being a seaman had been arrested at the cuit of the plaintiff for a debt and was released on pail, after which he was impressed into His Majesty's service. The defendants' hail applied for a habcas corpus, directed to the Commander of the ship to bring him up for the purpose of heing rendered in discharge of his bul A rule miss was obtained for entering an exonere'ur on the bail piece The Court thought it nnnecessary to issue the writ of habeas corpus but at once entered nn exone returnion the bail piece. Now it is clear that it would have been in the power of the sureties to prevent the accused being impressed All that they had to do was to do what the Chief Presidency Magistrate seems to think the sureties in this case ought to have done, viz, guard him carefully and confine him, so that he should never be in any public place where he could be impressed. It appears to us that the effective stops to prevent imprisonment would be more easily taken than steps to prevent Mr Adam contended that the accused was actually in the custody of his bails. If that is so under the present form of sarety bond, which we doubt it was certainly so in 1806 wlen this person was impresed into His Maje ty's service Mr Adam has argued with considerable force that the haling of the recured gave him an apportunity to commit suicide and that it was necessary to enforce the liability of the sureties so as on tho one hand to make thum understand the grave risk which they run in entering into these honds and on the other hand to unpress upon persons accused the serious responsibility which they would throw on their spreties if they made away with themselves Tacse considerations are however germane to all cases where the accused or defendant has allowed himself to be arrested or impressed But we do not find that the Court of King's Bench has proceeded on this view. In our opinion the fact that the sureties did not take steps to provent the accused from committing suicide oven though the possibility of his doing so may have passed through their minds does not amount to such neglect or default as to make them hable on the hond, The question we have to decide has quito recently come before a Bench of the Calcutta High Court Nrisingha Deb Chatterjee v. The King-Emperor(1), which decided that where an accused commits suicide the sureties are not hable for the default of his appearance. For the reasons stated above we have come to the same conclusion. We set aside the order of the Chief Providency Magistrate and direct that the sureties be discharged from their limbility under the hail bond

The law is now settled as laid down by Pix J, in Rousillon v Rousellon(1 , following Schibsly v Hestenholz(2) and Copen v Adaptson (3) a d was lately affirmed by the Court of Appeal in the same words in I anuel v Sumon(4) The circumstances that give juri-diction are alternatively (1) where the defendant is a subject of the foreign country in which the judg ment has been obt med, (2) where he was resident in the foreign country when the action hogan, (3) where the defendant in the character of plaintiff has selected the forum in which he is afterwards suod, (1) where he has voluntarily appeared and (5) where he has contracted to submit himself to the forum in which the judgment was obtained. Selection of forum, sah mission by appearance and contract to submit are treated in Mr Dicey's 'Conflict of Laws' under one heading 'Submission' It is first argued that the defendants were resident by virtue of the presence of the agent carrying on business for the firm and that service on him is good service. An incorporated company is resident wherever it substantially carries on business and so a foreign corporation carrying on basiness by an agent can be made liable to the jurisdiction by service on the agent within the jurisdiction See Newly v Cott's Patent Firearms Company (5), Raggin v Comptour D'Escompte de Paris(6) and La Bourgogne (7) partnership stands on a different footing. It is an aggregate of individuals having no corporate existence It is tino that, when a suit is filed against a firm, service on an agent at the principal place of business of the firm within the jurisdiction is good service on the firm whether any members of the firm are out of the presduction or not under the rules of the Supremo Court, Order XLVIII (a), rule 1 and Order XXX rule 1 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908, but even assuming that there was procedure correspond ing to this in the Supreme Court of Singapore, that does not make

RAMANATHAN undgment against the firm a personal decree against the foreign defendants which can be enforced in a foreign Court expressly decided in Sahrb Thambi v Hamid(1), and is supported by the clear authority of Russell v Cambefort(2) We have therefore only to consider the effect in a suit against the nartoers and aduably of service on an agent for the firm who held a power of attorney from one partner on behalf of the firm. The point was decided by this Court ogainst the plaintiff a contention in Nalla Karuppa Settiar v Mahomed Iburam Saheb(3) In that case the summons was served on one of the partoers resident within the prisdiction of the Court in Ceylon hut it was held that that service did not make the personal decree enforceable by a suit in this Const against a British Iodiao subject, a member of the partnership, who was himself at the time not resident in the turisdiction of the Ceylon Court It is argued that this decision is incorrect and reliance is placed on Bank of Australasia . Harding (4) and In re Hamault Forest Act, 1858(5) Bank of Australasia Nias (6) Copin \ Adamson(7), Fazal Shau Khan v Gafer Khan(S) and Annamala: Chetty v Muruoasa Chettu(9) a case decided by the Privy Council This latter case was a suit in British Territory against a French subject not personally resident in British India on a judgment obtained ogninst him in Pondi cherry where he resided It was sought to make him hable to British India b service on a relative within the jurisdiction of the District Court on the allegation that the business was a joint family business of which the relative was the managing momber The finding on these facts was against the plaintiff in the High Court and this was upheld by the Privy Council The Board go on to make the following observation - 'In both Courts in India it was apparently assumed that the question of inrisdiction turned on section 17 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that although the delendant was a loreigner, and although the cause of action arose in a foreign country, and although the delendant did not personally reside within the local limits of the juris liction of any Court in British India, and was not even temporarily in Arcot when sued there, yet he could be sued in the Arcot Court if he RAMANATURAN carried on husiness through an agent in the local limits of that Court's jurisdiction This assumption appears to their Lordships Kallyutal to require more attention than it bas recoived. Their Lordships see no reason for doubting the correctness of the decision of the Napier J case of Girdhar Damodar v Kassigar Hiragar(1) where the defendant was a native of Cutch and the cause of action arose within the I cal limits of the British Indian Court in which the action was brought" The actual words cannot be relied on in support of the plaintiff's contention as their Lordships expressly reserve the point, but the approvil of Girdhar Damodar v Kassigar Hiragar(1) makes it necessars to examine that case The suit was brought by the plaintiff in the Court of Small Canses to recover from the defendant a sum of Rs 1300-11-6 being the price of goods sold by the plaintiff to the defend ant in Bombay It was admitted that the defendant resided in Cutch, out of the jurisdiction of the Court, and that he carried on husiness in Bombay by a munim. It was also the fact that no leave of the Court had been obtained for the institution of this suit. It must be assumed from these words that the contract was entered into in Bombas by the munim on behalf of the defendant, that he was not resident in Bomb is at the time the contract was made and that he was not personally served within the muisdiction Sir Charles Sargent, CJ. held that by carrying on husiness within it they accepted the protection of the territorial authority and might be fairly rogarded by so doing as "submitting to the juris liction of the Courts of the country," and further in view of the great number of non-British subjects carrying on bu mess in Bombay through munims and otl or agents, the legislature in giving inrisdiction to the Court when the defendant corries on business within the local limits, must be assumed to have intended those provisions to apply to non resident foreigner. It should be noted that the first ground on which the learned Chief Justice puts his judgment is not the ground of residence but of submission which I will deal with liter It appoirs therefore that the High Court of Bombay held that the legislature intended the provisions of the Procedure Act to apply to foreigners and also that the

> The two cases in which the Bank of Australasia were plaintiffs are treated in Dicey's "Cooflict of Laws" as examples of the other conditions which he groups together under the general herd of submission, but there are observations as to residence and service on which the plaintiff relies. The bank was one established under a local Act in Australia, one of the sections of which provided that it should sue and be sued in the name of its Chairman A cut was accordingly brought against the bank and the Churmao served withto the jurisdiction and judgment ohtained On that indement, ouits were brought to the High Court of Justice against the two defendants, and both the Court of Common Pleas and the Court of Queen's Bench in the two cases held the plaintiff entitled to recover. In the first case Bank of Australasia v Harding(1), WILDY, C J . uses the following language -" If the defeudant bed given a power of attorney. would not notice to his attorney be sufficient?" and CRESSWELL, J. reforring to the Chairman says " Being his own appointed agent, he had notice of the proceedings" (This observation does not appear in the judgment to the Law Journal Reports) the second case The Bonk of Australana v Nias(2) Lord CAMPRELL, C J . uses equally deficite language "Nor 15 there anything at all repagnant to the law of lingland or to the principles of natural justice in enacting that octions on such contracts, instead of being brought individually against all the shareholders in the company, should be brought against the chairman whom they have appointed to represent them indement recovered in such an action, we think, has the same effect beyond the territory of the colony which it would have had if the defendant had been personally serv d with process. and being a party to the record the recovery had been personally against him" The language of the learned Judges in these two cases seems to ma to be applicable to cases where the persons sought to be made liable are not members of a company

but are individuals who have appointed a person to represent RAMANATHA them; and it must be noted that this is not a Company incorporated under the Companies Acts when a suit would of course not KALIMPTER he against an individual shareholder. It is an association of individuals authorised by a Local Act to sue and he sued by their chairman, and the language of some of the Judges goos a long way towards making the presence of the agent with a right to sue residence, and notice on him good service on which to found a suit on the judgment

Copin v Adamson(1) does not decide this point and will be considered on the second point The last case Fazal Shan Khan v Gafer Khun(2) was one in which the defendant appeared by nn agent and defended the suit | The Bench uses the following words -" It appears, however, from the evidence that the appellant carried on business by his agent within the limits of the territory Moreover the defendant did not protest that the Court had no sursdiction, but appeared by an agent and defended the suit Having done so, and having taken the chance of a judgment in his favour, he cannot now, when an action is brought against him on the judgment, take exception to the jurisdiction" It is difficult to say on which of the two propositions the Court founded its indigment. On the facts there was certainly a clear submission. On the whole in spite of the language used in these judgments on which the plaintiff relies I am not prepared to hold that the law allows service on an agent of a partnership to create jurisdiction on the ground or residence

The next condition is where the defendant has submitted to the jurisdiction in any of the three ways grouped together under that head In the view I take this must be largely a question of fact in each case. In this case the two parties now sued did for many years carry on business as a firm in the inrisdiction of the Court of Sing spore and cich of the defend ants was at one time managing the business there each of them did at one time give a po ver of attorney to a relative to manage the firm's business during their absence. One of those powers has been exhibited in the case and has already been referred to It is in Fuglish form and confers the widest powers

RAMANATHAN It anthorises the agent on hebalf of the firm to demand. sne for, collect and receive, etc, the rents and profits of any tenancies, to take and use ell lawful proceedings and means by distress or action or otherwise for recovering such rents and for enforcing the performence of any covenants or for evicting. ejecting or recovering demages from tenants, to demand, sue for, enforce payment of all montes, securities or personal estate end to prove in any bankruptcy for any preperty due, to adjust, settle, compromise or submit to arbitration any debt, to commence, provecute or onforce or defend, answer or oppose all actions end other legal proceedings and demands touching any of the matters aforesaid or any other matters in which the defendant may be held interested and generally to act as his attornov in relation to all matters in which he mey be interested Now it is obvious that this power to sue on behalf of the defendants, cen only have reference to the Supreme Court of Singapore or the Courts subordinate to its jurisdiction, and on these facts I should certainly be inclined to hold that the defendents here submitted to the jurisdiction. It is clearly established that if they had been plaintiffs in the suit, there would have been a selection of the foram and it is also clear that if in any contract there had been an agreement that suits should be decided by the Court of the place of business, there would have been a contract to submit I can see no reason why a power of attorney of this character which presumably is brought to the notice of persons dealing with the firm should not be evidence that the members of the firm adopted the Court of Sugapore as the forum before which their claims were to be brought Is there anything in the decision which compels me to hold otherwise? This point does not appear to have been pressed on the Judges of this Court who decided Nalla Karuppa Settiar v Mahomed Iburam Saheb(1) There was no power of attorney in that case, the service having been on one resident partner, and it may be that the facts in that case were not nearly as strong as they are in the present case. The decision wont entirely on the question whether the defendant was constructively resident and whether service on the resident partner was sufficient to found surrediction Shark Atham

CHETTIAR KALIMUTRO PILLAI NAPIER, J

Sahib v Datud Sahib(1) and Sevaraman Chetti v Iburam RAMANATRAN Saheb(2) are of no assistance on this point. The question there was whether the defendant had in fact submitted himself to the jurisdiction by appearance in the suit. In one case it was held that he had and in the other that he had not this point dees not arise in the present case. Nor is any assistance to he derived from the decision of the Privy Conneil in Gurdyal Singh v The Rajah of Faridhote(3) which was an attempt to enforce an ex-parte judgment recovered against a person who had not been served in any way, was non resident and was not carrying on husiness within the territory of the state I can find no decision laying down that the facts, such as are proved in this case are not evidence of submission in one of its forms I am strengthened in the view that I take by the language of the Judges in the two Bank of Australasia cases to which I will now refer The facts have already heen set out. There a Colonial Act provided that all actions and suits instituted hy the hank and all actions and suits prosecuted against the hank should be instituted by and prosecuted against the chairman for the time being of the said hank, and in the judgment of Wilde, CJ in Bank of Australasia v Harding(4) he states as follows 'It appears that the defendant was a partner in the company and that the Act provided that certain rights should be conferred on partners and that the husiness should be carried on under certain regulations all conducing to their benefit It may be jud cally taken that such an act has been obtained at the request of the partners. By this act it is contemplated that the business of the company could be more conveniently carried an if one member were sued instead of all, and execution might be issuable against the property of the rest The only point strongly argued was whether the remedy hy execution was in substitution of the remedy against the partners individually. It seems to me that if the defendant had thought that this Act which was procured for his henefit could not be considered as a submission by him to the forum in which the chairman was anthorized to sue and he sued that point would have been taken in the two cases. The fact that the power of make any difference and one learned Judge, as already pointed out, treated the chairman as his agent for this purpose. These two cases are authorities which have never been questioned and I am unable to distinguish them on principle from the present case They are treated by Mr Dicey as examples of submission and it is clear that they are not cases where the defendant's liability is based on the fact that he was the plaintiff in the lower Court, or appeared in the suit or contracted with the other party to the suit to submit the matter of the suit to the jurisdiction of the Court. It must therefore be that submission in one forum or other must be a mixed question of law and fact, and where we find, as appears in this case, that the agent is specifi cally appointed to bring suits of all sorts with reference to the partnership in the forum in which he is subsequently sued, I cannot construe this as anything but a submission to the forum nithin the meaning of one of the conditions required for giving a jurisdiction That Court baying acquired parisdiction and service out of jurisdiction by order of the Court being proved. the defendants prima facie are bound by the judgment and as they have not raised any other defence to the suit, the plaintiffs should have been given a decree in the lower Court The deci sion of the lower Court is reversed. There will be a decree for Rs 7.336-1-7 with costs subsequent interest at 6 per cent from date of plaint

A loan repayable at a fixed date is governed probably by article 66 and if not by article 115

Unlike cases governed by the Indian Succession Act and the Ilinia Wills Act, in a case governed by the Probate and Administration Act (V of ISM) it is obtaining of pro-sate is not necessary to dether be execut with the right to ame for debts due to the testator, and the estato is represented by the executor even in the alence of probate, within the meaning effection 17 of the Limitation Act, and time-begins to run from the date of the testators death, as the obtaining of a succession certificate is not a condition precedent to the filing of a suct but is only necessary before getting a decree

The facts are fully set out in the judgment

BALAERISH-NUDU V NARATANA-EWARY CHETTY WALLIS J T Ethiraja Mudahyar for the plaintiff C P Ramaswamy Avyar for the defeodant

JUDGMENT -The plaintiff in this case sues as executor of the will of the deceased V Nagammal to recover with interest the sum of Rs 10,680-9-9 alleged to have been denosited by her with her brother's son the defendant on 15th August 1900 It is common ground that this sum was doe by the defeodant to Nagammal on the date mentioned, but the plaintiff's case is that at thet time a snit for waste was about to be filed against Nagammal by the reversioner of her minor son's estate, to which she had succeeded more than twenty years praylously, and that, to prevent this sum getting into the hends of the Ricceiver in that enit, it was arranged between Nagammal and the defendant et the defendant's suggestion that Nagammal should give him a receipt for the modey which could be used against the Receiver in case of his seeking to recover the shove som from the defeodant as part of the estate of Nagammal's see eed that tha defendant shoold execute in her favour a document statum that though she had given a receipt for the money it had not really been paid to her, and that it had been arranged hetween them that the money should remain on deposit with the defendant who should make her advances for costs of litigation and household expenses and should pay her the amount due with interest at 9 per cent on the disposal of the snit. The counter receipt embodying these terms (Exhibit B) which bears the defendant's engasture though filed with the plaint, was not in terms referred to in the plaint, and the defendant who was apparently massare that it was forthcoming pleaded in his written statement that he had paid Nagammal the amount due on the date in question and thus discharged her debt in full and had also a receipt from her of the same date. He also denied that he had agreed to make any further payment to Nagammal, as alleged to the plaint, or that he paid her anything after September 1900 This case was persisted to during the examination of the plaintiff's witueses, but the only result of the cross examination was to elicit forther confirmation of their evidence and the defendant's takil was well advised in the interests of his client in not putting him into the box or calling ovideoco and in relying entirely on the defences that the suit is barred and that the plaintiff is not the proper person to suc

As regards limitation the following dates are material; the BALAKE deposit was on 15th August 1909, Nagammal died on 16th January 1904, and the appeal of the reversioner against the NARAT. decree of the District Court dismissing this suit was itself dismissed by the High Court on 1st December 1904 owing to Warrie her death while the appeal was pending. To save limitation the plaintiff in the first place relies on article 145 which in a suit against a depositary or pawnee to recover moveable property deposited or pawned allows 30 years from the date of the deposit or pawn There has been some difference of opinion in the Calcutta High Court as to whether this article applies to depesits of money, and the plaintiff relies on the decision of MacLEAN CJ.

and Stevens, J , from which Hill, J , dissented in Administrator-General, Bengul v Kristo Kamini Dasses(1) and on the more recent decision of Mookerire and Holmwood, JI, in Lala Gobind Prasad v Chairman of Patna Municipality(2) while the defendant relies on certain observations in the judgment of Wilson and O'KINEALY, JJ , in Ishur Chunder Bhadurt v Jibun Kumari Bibs(3), and on the dissenting judgment of Hill, J. already referred to This article was first enacted in the Limitation Act of 1871 and the proper course in my opinion is in the first place to see what it meant in that Act because at any rate unless there as some strong reason to the contrary it must be read in the same sense, in the subsequent Act in which it is re-enacted Mayor of Portsmouth v Smith(4) We should perhaps go further back as the language of article 145 is tal en from section 1 (15) of the Act of 1859 The only other article in the Act of 1871 in which deposit is mentioned is article 133 to recover moreable property conveyed in trust, deposited or pawned, and afterwards bought from the trustee, depositary or pawnee in good faith and for value" which again is founded on section 5 of the Act of 1859 As to these articles 13 and 145 the learned Judges observe in Ishur Clunler Blalure . Jebun Kuriare Bile(3) that clear from the context that the deposit norm is a deposit of goods to be returned in specie and that is in accordance with the old use of doposition (obviously a misprint for depositum) with which all lawyers are familiar I would venture to go even further and to say that when as in the Acts of 1859 and 1871 there is nothing to suggest the use of the word deposit in any other sense it must be taken to mean the sort of bulment known to hwyers under that name in the Roman Law of Bailments which was accepted by Bracton and afterwards by Lord Holt in Coggs v Barnard(1), ns fit to be enforced in England This depositum is a bulment of a specific thing to be kept for the harlor and returned when wanted as opposed to commodatum where a specific thing as a borso or a watch is lent to the hailee to be used by him and then returned, and both are contrasted with mutuum where cern, wine or money er other things are given to be used and other things of the same nuture and quality are to be returned instead. In my opinion there is no ground fer helding that in the Acts of 1859 and 1871 the word deposit in the sections and urticles already referred to included se-called denesits of money or other things which were not intended to be kept but to be used, and there is nething in the Acts of 1877 and 1903 to show that any different construction should now be put on articles 133 and 145

The framers of these Acts were lawyers and must be taken to have used the term deposit in the ordinary legal sense. This conclusion is not, I think, in any way affected by the fact that in 1877 the logislature introduced in new niticle. Of which speaks of "money deposited under an agreement that it shall be repayable en demand" thus using the word deposit not in its legal but in its popular sense. On the contrary an examination of what happened strongly supports the same view. No express reason was assigned for the amendment, and doubt has been expressed in some cases us to the meaning of the legislature and the reasons for the change, but it seems to me that these reasons are not very far to seek.

In English law and under the Act of 1859 time began to run in the case of leans prouble on demand from the date of the lean. In the Act of 1871 the legislature altered this and under article 58' for money lent under an agreement that it shall be payable on demand 'made time run from the date of demand in 1877, the legislature changed its mind and decided to go back to the old rule, and by article 59 made time run, not from BATAKRISH the date of demand, but from the date of the lean however retained the date of demand as the starting point by a new article 60 with regard to a particular class of loans repay able on demand described in the new article as ' money deposited under an agreement but it shall be repayable on demand' was then settled law that what are commonly known as deposits with banks and other hodies doing similar business whother carrying interest or not end whether fixed or ropayable on demand, are really loans and it would appear that the framers of the Act of 1877 who of course were aware of this considered very reasonably if I may wenture to say so that in the case of such deposits repayable on demand, seeing that repayment is not contemplated until expressly demanded, the date of demand is a more suitable starting point than tle date of the luan, and that they accordingly inserted the new article to effect this. This VIEW appears to me to be in accordance with the decision in Ishur Chunder Bhaduri v Jibun Kumari Bibi(1) and Perundoistayar Ammal v Nammaluar Chetti(2)

It seems to me fairly clear that the legislature in 1877 treated deposits of money repayable un demand as a special class of loans which ought to have a special starting point. Accordingly instead of one article dealing with loans payable on demand (article 58 in the Act of 1871) they provided two articles of and 60 with different starting points There is nothing to suggest that they thought deposits of maney were covered by article 140 On the contrary if they had done so they would scarcely have considered it necessary to provide a new article. The neces ity was that otherwise article 59 would have been held applicable to such deposits

For these reasons I have come to the conclusion that article 145 is not applicable to deposits for money and does not help the plaintiff It has not been argued before me that il e deposit should be regarded as one repayable on demand within the morning of article 60 or that the suit may be treated as against an agent for an account or as a suit against a trustee covered hy section 10 There are serious difficulties in the way of all these contentions but I do not di cuss them as the points have not been argued and the suit fails on another ground than limits Treating the transaction as a loan repayable at a fixed date it is governed probably by article 66 and if not by article 115 and I can see no sufficient reason for having recourse to article 120 It is however contended that even if the period is three years the suit is not harred by virtue of section 16 because the estate of the deceased was unrepresented from her death in January 1904 until prahate of her will was taken out by the plaintiff in 1910 The will is not governed by the Hindu Wills Act and section 187 of the Indian Succession Act is therefore not applicable. Under section 4 of the Probate and Administration Act the estate of the deceased vested in the plaintiff as her executor on her death in January 1904 and there is nothing in that Act to prevent him sning the defendant at once doubt if he had omitted to take out probate he could not have obtained a decree without producing a succession certificate, but there is nothing in that Act to provent his instituting the smit and afterwards obtaining the certificate before decree. In my opiaion the plaintiff was capable of instituting the suit within the meaning of section 17 from the death of the testatrix and that section does not help the plaintiff

I have also come to the conclosion on the third issue that the plaintiff is not entitled to maintain the present suit, because the money saed for helonged to her husband and his son after him and, when she succeeded as heir to her son, she only took a woman's estate for blo and on her death the property passed to the heirs of her son as last male owner and they were the proper persons to sue for it. The will of the deceased recites that the property was the self acquisition of her husband and that she had succeeded as her son's heir though she subsequently purports to dispose of this minney in the hands of the defendant The whole object of the transaction evidenced by Exhil it R was to prevent the receiver in the soit against her for waste from receiving the money in the defendant's hands os part of the estate of her deceased son The reversioner's suit No to of 1901 in the District Court of Chingleput alleged that the property to which she had succeeded on her son's death include l Rs 10 000 in deposit with the defendant's father of which at the date of suit Rs 15,000 remaine I in the han Is of the defend int. In her written statement the deceased made the averment which has not been proved in this case that her relations had advanced Rs. 2.000 to BALARRISH her husband to enable him to start business and raised the carious contention that as his property had been acquired with the aid of this nucleus she had succeeded to it as her absolute property She also pleaded, pursuant to the secret arrangement made with the defendant that she had received navment from him and given him a receipt, but she did not dony that the money in question had been deposited by her husband with the defendant's father. Lastly the conduct of the present plaintiff as executor and legatee under the will of the deceased in not proving the will and suing the defendant from the date of the death of the deceased in 1904 until late in 1910, though admittedly he was aware of all the facts can scarcely be explained except upon the supposition that he well knew that the deceased had no powers of bequest over the money in the hands of the defendant, and that the persons who became entitled on her death were her son's reversioners. On this ground the suit fails

There only remains the question of costs In view of the defence set up and persisted in until the close of the plaintiff's case that the defendant had repaid the money to the deceased, I direct that each party do hear his own costs.

JUDGMENT -The plaintiff in this case alleges that the defend ant preferred a complaint in the Presidency Magistrato's Court charging the plaintiff with the offence of defamation, which on the 30th July last was dismissed under section 203 of the Criminal Procedure Code, after a preliminally inquiry, and prays for damages for the malicious proscention of the plaintiff

Upon the case coming on for settlement of issues counsel for the defendant argued that the plaint does not disclose a cause of action, because the facts averred show that that there was no prosecution by the defendant. It is admitted that no process was issued to compel the attendance of the plaintiff before the Magistrate, but the latter issued a notice (Lxhibit A) to the plaintiff and held an inquiry under section 202 of the Code and after hearing counsel for both parties dismissed the complaint

The notice recites that the defendant had filed an information and complaint before the Magistrate, charging the plaintiff with the offence of having defamed the former and praying that a summons might issue against the latter, and continues as follows - ' Notice is hereby given that a preliminary inquiry will be held in the matter of complaint at this Court at II AM on the third day of July 1912 '

The document is thus a mere intimation that the Magistrate intends to take action upon the complaint, and does not amount either to a summons or to an invitation to the party charged to appear or take any other step in the matter, moreover, it is not included in the fifth echedule of the Code as one of the forms to be used by the Court, nor does it appear to he prescribed or contemplated by the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 Nevertbeless, upon receipt of a formal document of this kind the party affected by the complaint might well think it expedient to appear and he represented hy his legal indviser on the day mentioned, and if he did so appear, he would naturally desire to be heard and possibly to adduce evidence. Chapter XVII of the Code is entitled "Of the commencement of proceedings before Magistrates," and read together with chapter VI. "Of Barkwell, J processes to compel appearance," shows that proceedings ordinarily begin with the issue of a summons or warn and. Prior to the issue of process, the Magistrate has to satisfy himself that there are sufficient grounds for setting tha law in motion [section 204 (1)], and for that purpose he is bound to examine the complainant (section 209), and may postpone the issue of process while he inquires into tha matter himself or a local investigation is made by another person (section 202).

It appears to me that the object of the procedure prescribed by chapter XVI, which is entitled "Of complaints to Magistrates," is the separation of unfounded from substantial cases at the outset, and to prevent imnoceat persons from heing brought into the Police Courts and subjected to the annoyance of frivolous charges, and that this object is frustrated by the procedure adopted in this case

In a warrant case such as this is, the Magistrate may issue a sammons to the accused to appear [section 204 (1)], and may discharge the accused at any stage of the case [section 253 (2)]. Having regard to this provision and the sections of the Code abovementioned, I am of opinion that the hearing in this case by the Magistrate was not authorised by the Code, and cannot therefore be attributed to the defendant so as to render him responsible for any damage cansod thereby to the plantiff. I am also of opinion that these provisions show that the prosecution of the accused commonuces with the issue of process, after the complaint has been entertained by the Magistrate, and that the pror proceedings constitute at most an attempt by the complainant to prosecute the accused.

I do not think it necessary to discuss the highsh and Indian cases which has o been cited, since the are fully deals with in two decisions of the Calcuta High Court—PeRe ario v. Gulah Chand Annudjee (1) and Golap Jan v. Bholanath Khellry (2) with which I outsely agree

"Issue 1 —Whether the surt is not maintainable for want of a fresh sauction under section 18 of Aut XX of 1863?

Sanction was granted by this Court under section 18 of Act XX of 1863 to file a snit, Original Suit No 1 of 1907 On technical points that snit was allowed to be withdrawn with permission to bring a fresh suit Defendants argue that the old senotion lapsed and fresh sanction was necessary. I am unable to differentiate the arguments which influenced their Lordships in the above ruling from those applicable to the present suit. Plaintiffs argue that the Collector's sanction under Civil Procedure Code, section 539, is sufficient. I am unable to agree Section 18 of Act XX of 1863 clearly requires sauction ree Section 18 of Act XX of 1863 clearly requires sauction I must decide the issue for defendants and dismiss the suit."

JUDGENT —It seems clear that the suit instituted with the consent of the Collector is a good suit for all reliefs referred to in section 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure — That section and section 14 of the Act XX of 1863, so far as the forms of relief to which they relate are the same, appear to offer a choice to persons interested in the trust, they may proceed under either —It cannot be that they are bound to proceed under both, for that might lead to a dead look, if perclaines the Collector were to consist to a suit and the District Judge to refuse leave—It is not necessary to read the sections as involving this possibility and there would not the proceed the read the process.

not necessary to read the sections as involving this possibility and they ought not therefore so to be read.

The Collector's consent was given to a suit for these reliefs, the plaintiffs prayed for the remeval of certain trustics the appointment of ethers, and the visting of the property in the newly appointed incumbents. The consent was given in Normher 1908, and the suit was instituted on the 27th January 1909. It is now contended that in respect of the prayer for the removal of the trustees there is no valid consent, because in 1908 there was no provision of two enabling a suit to be instituted for that relief with the Collector's consent.

The sanction (or consont) shows that the Collector had considered the question and the mer is and made enquires, and there is no doubt that he dolbt-rately consented to the prayer for the removal of the trustees. Now when the suit was instituted the Court had to see that the C lit tor had consented to it and that his consent was sufficient to warrant its entertunment at the time of the suit. It formed a consent deliberately given for the protection of the trust and for the purpose of enabling a suit to be instituted for a particular relief; and there seems no reason why it should say "I must treat this consent as no consent, because it was made before the end of 1908", till then the Court could not have given the particular relief on a suit instituted on that consent, but that does not make the consent a nullity The Collector of course was able to give his consent irrespective of any provision of the Code, but under the old Code this consent would have been ineffective, even with it tho Court could not entertain a suit to remove a trustee, in 1909 the Court was able to do so . it found a consent already given and it was entitled to accept it as sufficient. The decree dismissing the suit must be reversed and the enit remanded for disposal occording to law We do not decide that all the reliefs asked for in the plaint con be given in this suit. It may be that hoving regard to the provisions of section 92 or to those of the Collector's convent, some of the claims are madmissible. That question and the question, should it arise, whether my omission can be cured by a further consent obtained from the Collector after the suit, must be left for decision by the District Judge. The cests of this oppeal will abide the result.

JUNGMENT -This appeal is against an order of the District Court of Velloro dismissing an application for execution of the decree of the Subordinate Judge's Comt of Nellore in Original Suit No 15 of 1892 The decree is one for partition and was passed on the 3rd August 1897 There were several intermediate applications for execution presented on the plaintiff a behalf during his minority by his next friend. One of them wis compromised on the 29th January 1900 The plaintiff a present application ignores the compromise, his ease being that it was illegal and not binding on him The application has been dismissed by the lower Court on the ground that it is barred by limitation under section 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure, it having been presented more than twelve years after the date of the decree, although within three years after the attainment of majority by the plaintiff The first question for consideration is whether the plaintiff is cutilled to the henefit of section 7 of the Limitation Act and to reckon the period of limitation for execution of the decree from the date of attainment of majority; and whether apart_from that section, there is any general principle of law entitling him to the same benefit on account of his disability arising from minority. Article 182 of the Limitation Act which lays down the general rule of limitation applicable to execution of decrees exempts from its operation cases coming within the purview of section 48 of the Civil Procedure Code Section 6 of the Act enacts that "where a person entitled to institute a suit or make an application for the execution of a decree is, at the time from which the period of limitation is to be reckoned, a milior. . , he may institute the suit of make the application within the same period after the disability has ceased, as would otherwise have been allowed from the time prescribed therefor in the third column of the first schedule", and as article 182 of the schedule is inapplicable to the case, section 6 enacting the rule of exemption during the period of minority must also be held to be mapplicable the District Judge, Mr WALLACE, has dealt with the question in a remarkably able and lucid judgment, but the question really does not admit of any serious doubt on the language of the section It is unnecessary to consider whether the other general provisions of the Limitation Act contained in sections 4 to 25 would be applicable or not, where the period of Limitation is prescribed by some special Act and not by the general code of limitation Section 6 is expressly limited to cases where the limitation is provided for in the Limitation Act itself We therefore agree with the Judge in holding that the plaintiff cannot claim the benefit of section 6 of the Limitation Act It is strongonsly contended by Mr Muthukrishna Ayyar, the learned takil for the appellant, that apart from that section minority is a well recognised ground of exemption in law from the operation of the law of limitation. He relies in support of this contention mainly on More Sadashir v Visari Raghunath(1) and a passage in Bacon's Abridgment. the Bombay case, it cannot be denied, upports his contention. The question there was the same is in this case balgent, CJ, observed 'The question referred to us must be dended by the general principle of law is to the di ability of minors, to which the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code must. in the absence of anything to the contrary, it deemed to be subject. a minor , and the circumstance that he has been represented by a guardian does not affect the question" No authority has been cited in support of the enunciation of the rule that there is a general principle of law that time does not run against a minor The passage cited from Becon's Ahridgment is in the following terms -" The rights of infants are much favoured in law, and regularly their laches chall not be preindicial to them, opon a presumption that they understand not their right, and that they are not capable of taking notice of the rules of law, so as to be able to apply them to their edvantage Hence, by the common law. infants were not bound for want of claim and entry within a year and a day, nor are they bound by a fine and five years' noncleim, nor by the statutes of limitation, provided they prosecute their right within the time allowed by the statute after the impediment removed "(I) Aing v. Dilliston(2, is cited as authority for this proposition After full consideration we have come to the conclusion that the authority rehed on in the passage cited does not show that according to the Luglish law, infancy is en answer The question in Aing v Dilliston(2) was to a plea of limitation whether a certain custom was applicable to minors, namely, a custom that the person to whose use a copyhold estate is surrecdered shell come in and he admitted after three proclamations or otherwise his land shall be forfeited. It was held that it was not and that therefore if a surrender be made in fee end the surrenderee die before the next Court, the estate is not forfeited by the infant heir and the surrenderee not coming in after three proclamations Exec. J. observed "that a feofiment of an infant was no furfeithre at the common law, and that as a particular custom may bind an infant for a time, so it may bar him for ever," and that the question was whether the custom in question as it was found in general words should hind an infant after three proclamations . "All customs," he said, " are to be taken strictly when they go to the destruction of an estate" Strictly, infants were not prevented by the letter of the custom, they were not bound by other customs like this, there was no necessity to construe them to be within the custom He no doubt observed that, "the right of infants is much favoured in the law, and their laches shall not he prejudicial to them as to entry or claim, upon a presumption that they understand not their night" but he did not say that they were not bound by statutes of huntation. On the other hand he observed "it is admitted that if an infant do not present to a church within six months, or do not appear within a year, that his right is bound, but this is because the law is more tender of the church, and the life of a man, than of the privileges of infuncy So if an office of parkship be given or descends to an infant, if the condition annexed in law to such an office (which is skill) be not observed, the other is forfeited. But that a proclamstion in a base court should bind an intant, when he is not within the reason of the custom, is not agreeable either to law or reason." Nor did either of the other concurring Judges Gragosy, J., and Dolben, J, make any prononneement in favour of the exemption of minors from rules of limitation proper. It may be that laches may not be attributable to an intaut and that a penalty inflicted for laches may not be enforced on an inlant. But laches should not be regarded as the sole or porhaps even the main ground on which rules of limitation are based. Lord 51, Leonards observed "all statutes of hantation have for their object the prevention of the rearing up of claims at great distances of time when evidences are lost; and in all well regulated countries the quieting of possession is held an important point of policy," In Liustees of Dundee Harbour v. Dougall(1) Lord Kenton described the statutes of limitation as statutes of repose. Sce also the observations of Lord REDESPALE in Cholmondeley v. Clinton(2). Lord COLE says that the limitation of actions was by torce of diverse Acts of Parhament, although at a very remote time in England there was undoubtedly a stated time for the heir of the tenaute to claim after the death of his ancestor and in case of non-claim before the expination of the time (a year and a day) the clausant was without remedy. Banning in his work on Limitations, page I, observes. " the limitation of the times for bringing actions is, at the present day entirely dependent on statute." He states that under the common law the presumption arose after a long time in respect to a legal claim that it had been satisfied See Jones v. Turberculle (3). Judges have repudiated the notion that fimitation is based solely on the ground of faches. In Dalton v. Angus (4)

Lord BLACKEUEN observed "This ground of acquiescence of laches is often epoken of as if it were the only ground on which prescription was or could be founded But I think the weight of authority, both in this country and in other systems of jurishrudence, shews that the principle on which prescription is founded is more extensive. Prescription is not one of those laws which are derived from natural justice Lord STAIR, in his Institutions, treating of the law of Scotland, in the old oustoms of which country he tells us prescription had no place (hook 2, tit 12, e 9), says, I think tinly, "Prescription, although it be by positive law, founded upon ntility more than upon equity, the introduction whereof the Romans ascribed to themselves, yet hath it been since received by most nations, but not so as to be counted amougst the laws of nations, because it is not the same, but different in diverse nations as to the matter, manner, and the time of it . . Ît 18 hoth tair and expedient that there should be provisions to enlarge the time when the true owners are under disabilities or for any other reason are not to be considered guilty of luches in not using their right within the specified period, and such provisions there were in the Roman law, and commonly are in modern Statutes of Limitations, but I take it that these are positive laws, founded on expedience, and varying in different countries and at different times," Angell in his work on Limitation observes "although, says Domat, there was no other reason to justify the introduction and use of prescription than that of public policy, it would be just to prevent the property of things from being constantly in a state of uncertainty Luches hke limitation no doubt deprive the plaintiff of his remedy, but it depends upon general principles, while limitation depends on Laches may be adapted to the facts of each express law particular case, but lumination is a matter of inflexible law. Limitation then being the result of statute law, it has been held in England that no exemption from it can be recognised except what the statute itself provides In Beckford v Wade(1), the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council held that the fact that the defendants in an action were absent from the realm could not postpone the running of limitation. The Master of the Rolls observed "The proposition, that this construction, under the doctrine of inheient equity, is put upon our English Statutes of Limitation, is, as I apprehend, altogether unfounded General words in a statute must receive a general construction . unless you can find in the statute itself some ground for limiting and restraining their meaning by reasonable construction, and not by arbitriry addition or retrenchment" He goes on to say "The true inle on this subject is laid down by Sir Eardly Wilmor in his opinion in the House of Lords on the case of Earl of Buckinchamshire v Drury(2) He saye 'many cases have been put, where the law implies an exception, and takes infants out of general words by what is called a virtual exception. I have looked through all the cases, and the only rule to he drawn from them is, that, where the words of a law in their common and ordinary signification are sufficient to include infants, the virtual exception must be drawn from the intention of the legislature, mamfested hy other parts of the law from the general purpose and design of the law, and from the subject matter of it ' And he mentions the Statutes of Limitations, as an instance of a case, in which infants would be barred if it were not for the introduction of the saving clause Accordingly we had that in the great case of Stouel v. Lord Zouch(3), upon the Statute of Fines of Henry the Seventh where the question was, whether, when the bar by five years' non claim had begun to run in the time of the ancestor of full age, it should continue to run against his infant heir, although there was great difference of opinion among the Judges upon that question, the whole argument turns upon the true construction of the statute itself with reference to all the parts of it, and to the object it had in view, and not upon any supposed inherent equity, by which infants were to be excepted out of the operation of the Statutes of Limitation On the contrary it is laid down in that case and laid down without any contradiction 'For as much as they intended,' that is, the Legislature intended, 'to avoid universal trouble (as the preamble speaks) and to make peace which is to be preferred before all other things and for as much as they have made the provision general viz that the fine shall be final, and shall conclude as well privies as strangers if the Act had stopped there, it would have bound as well infants. femes covert, and the others named in the exception, as people of full age, and who were void of such defects." His Lordship wont on to observe, referring to the case before him, that the absence of the defendants from the realm or even the fact of the Courts of Justice being shut up in times of war were no grounds for excluding the Statutes of See also Angell on Limitation page 498, where the omnions of Chancellor Kent and Marshall, CJ 10 America to the same effect are referred to. It is perfectly clear from Beckford v Wade(1), that minority unless expressly provided for in the statute would be no ground of privilege See Mohumind Bahr door Klan v Collector of Barcilly(2) We have no hesitation in saving that the same view must be held in this country also

The earliest statutes of limitation in India therefore made express provisions in favour of minors See Midras Regulation 2 of 1802 section 18 clauses 1, 2 and 3 In Act XIV of 1859. section 11 provided a general exemption in favour of minors hat only in the case of suits In Act IX of 1871 also the exemption was confined to suts but a further restriction was introduced by it hy limiting the privilege to cases where limitation was provided for in the schedule to the Act There can be no doubt that the restriction was deliherately made. In section 7 of Act XV of 1877 the privilege was extended to applications, but the restriction to cases for which the limitation was provided for in the Act was continued. The provision in the present Act is in the same terms We cannot therefore uphold the argument that there is any findamental rule of law or justice entitling the appellant to claim that the limitation should run only from the date of his attaining majority The derision of the Punjab Chief Court in Jhandu v Mohan Lal(3), is in accordance with the view we have taken on the question

It is next contended for the appellant that the application is not burred in so far as the claim for mesne profits is concerned, even if section 48 of the Civil Procedure Code would be a bar so far as partition is concerned. The argument is that with regard to mesne profits the docreo cannot be regarded as complete until they are ascentained, and that the present application may be regarded as one for the ascertain. ment of the mesne profits and as such should be regulded as one not for execution of the decree but as one in the suit itself to finish the enquiry and make the decree for mesne profits final And rehanco is placed in support of the argument on Puran Chand v Roy Radha Kishen(1), Har sanore Narain Singh v Ramprosad Singl (2) Vidnapore Zarundari Company, Ld v Naresh Narain Roy(3), Muha imad Uma jan Khan v Zinat Begam(4) and B aliya Bibi v Narai Hasan(5) The decree here was passed when the repealed Civil Procedure Code was in force It provided that "the defendants do pay to the plaintiff his one third share of the mesno profits (to be iscortained in execution) from the date of suit 11th August 1892 until delivers of the lands or until three yours from this date whichever event first occurs" The direction for the ascertainment of the mesne profits in execution was apparently made under section 211 of the Code. Section 212 onacted that with regard to mesno profits prior to the instituti n of the suit "the Court may either determine the amount by the decice it elf or may pass a decree for the property and direct an enquiry into the amount of mesne profits and dispose of the same on further orders" Where the decree provided for the mesne profits up to the date of delivery of the property the enquiry had necessarily to be postponed Section 244 land down that " question regarding the amount of any mesne profits or interest which the de ree has made payable in respect of the subject matter of a suit letween the date of its institution and the execution of decree or the expuration of three years from the date of the decree, should be decided by the Court executing the decree It is argued that the expression 'the (urt executing the lecree' merely designates the Court which is to hold the enquiry into mesne mosits and that the provision in section 241 does not make the

decree is not complete with regard to meane profits for the purpo e of execution until they have been ascertuned, may also be unexceptionable, but this does not show that an application for the ascertainment of mesne profits would not be an application for execution as held by the Calcutta and All thabad High Courts The Cide expressly made it such Ram Kishore Ghose v Gem Kant Shaha(1) is in accordance with this view Midnapore Zamindari Company, Ld v Naresh Naram Roy(2) no doubt contains an observation that the whole decree including the decree for possession must be regarded as incomplete until the mesno profits are ascertained, but with all deference we are for the reasons already stated unable to agree in this view. It is not supported by the earlier decisions of the Calcutta High Court It is based partly upon a indement of the Privy Council in Ra lha Prasad Singh v Lal Sahab Ras(3) But that case does not support the proposition. There although there was a diclaration that the original defendants were hable for mesne profits the decree did not determine the important question whether the def nilants were liable jointly or severally in respect of wrongful occupation. There was no adjudication upon any of they matters until a long time after the original decros and until after the death of the delendants whose representatives were wought to be made hable. The decision of their I ordships was that the representatives not having been made part es to the un estigation ab t mesi o profits they were not hable for the amount adjudged against them I hen Lord ships did not decide iny mestion of limit it in The appellant relies also on the decision of this Court in Lyl anatha Aiyar v Subramanian Pattir(4) | There the decree directed that the costs of one of the parties should be paid by the other when a certained The ascertainment was not directed to be made in execution proceedings. The Court had no power to give uch a brection, The question was when his tation began to rin for the execution of the decree It was held that the decree was complete only when the costs were ascertance! We do not think that the case affords any support to the appellant's contection here the rding to section 48 of the present Code the execut; n of all decrees except a decree granting an injunction will be barred after the expiration of twelve years. An application for the ascertainment of mesne profits being in our view an application for execution, we must hold that it is burred by the provisions of the section

But it is contended that this case must be decided according to the provisions of the present Piecedure Code which by Order XX. rule 12, directs that in a suit for the recovery of immoveable property and me ne profits the Court may direct an enquiry as to the mesne profits and should pass a final decree in accordance with the result of the enquiry The effect of the provision is to make the decree to far as mesne profits are concerned complete only when the amount has been ascert used while not making the rest of the decree incomplete till then In this view an application for the ascertainment of means profits would not be one for execution of the decree, though the question might then arise whether article 181 would not apply to such an application We are however of opinion that the question whether the appliention is one for execution or not should be decided in accordance with the provisions of the repealed Code | The effect to be given to a document and to the proceedings of a Court must be decided hy the law in force when the document was executed or the proceedings were passed. The decree for mesne profits in this case cannot be regarded as incomplete and incapable of execution on the ground that according to the present Code it would be so reparded This view is in our opinion in accordance with the decisions discussed at pizes 324 to 333 of Maxwell on the Interpretation of Statutes See also the judgment of this Court in Muthiah Chettiar v Ramasami Chettiar(1)

Lastly it is contended that the application is not barred at any rate so far as the recovery of outstandings is concerned mass much as they had not been collected by the defendants at the time of the decree, according to which the plaintiffs are entitled to recover their share when the cutstandings are collected. But the application for execution does not state when they were collected or that they have been collected at all. It does not therefore disclose any right on the part of the plaintiff to recover anything from the defendants. In the result the appeal is demissed with easts.

Consolidated appeals and cross-appeals Nos 114 to 116 of 1910 from the judgment and decroes (20th November 1905) of the High Court at Madras in Appeals Nos 122 and 123 of 1990 and in Appeals Nos 32 and 41 of 1994 which affirmed the decree (2nd December 1899) of the Subordinate Judge of Kistina in Original Suit No 35 of 1895, and varied the decree (12th December 1903) of the District Judge of Godāvari in Original Suit No 44 of 1899

The facts sufficiently appear in the judgment of the High Court (DAVIES AND BENGON, JJ.), which will be found in Ser Rayah Venkata Narasimha Appa Raev Sii Rayah Rargayya Appa Raw(1) where a genericinal table of the names and relations of the hitganis is given on page 439

The subject-matter of the higgation concerned the zamindari estates of Nidadavole and Medur, both of which at one time formed part of the great Nuzvid zamindari. The suit in the Narasimha V Partha-Barathy

Subordinate Judge's Court related to the zamindari of Medur alone, and the suit in the District Judge's Court related to both Medur and Nid davole The effect of the decrees of the High

Medur and Middayole 'The effect of the decrees of the High Court was that one Rangayya Appa Row (No 11 in the pedigree) and bis younger brother Narasimha Appa Row (12), and their rousin Parthasarathy (16) were entitled to each of the two zamindaris in equal shares. The main questions for determination in these appeals were (1) whether the estate of Nidadayole is partible or impartible, and (2) whether an adoption made on 28th December 1690 of Narayya Appa Row (17) by a lady called Papamina Row, widow of Narayya Appa Row (5), was valid or invalid. The first question argued before their Lordships was the question of the partibility or otherwise of Nidadayole

On that point the District Judgo in Suit No. 44 of 1899 beld that the Nidadavole estate was not impartible, but descended according to the ordinary rules of Hirdu Law, and that view was affirmed by the High Court. The estate of Nidadavole was granted by Government in 1802 by a sanad under Madras Regulation XXV of that year to Narasumha Appa Row (No. 2 in the pedigroe). He died in 1827 and was succeeded by his adopted son Narayya Appa Row (5) on whose behalf the estate was managed by the Court of Wards until be attained his majority in 1833. In August 1843 the entire estate was brought to eale for arrears of revenue, and was purchased by Government. The estate was then granted by the Government to Narayya Appa Row (5) who deed in 1864.

As to toe tenure and nature of the estate previous to 1802 the High Court said

In the view that we have taken that the evidence clearly shows that the estate has not been of an impartible character and descend; ble to a single heir since 1750 we do not consider it necessary to go further back and discuss whether the estate was, prior to that time, ield on a military or fendal tenure or partook of the nature of a principality or ray. We may however state briefly that we concur in the conclusion of the District Jadge that there is no reason what ever f i thinking that the estate ever partool of the nature of a principality or ray. There is more show of reason in support of the idea that it was held on a sort of military tenire, or rather that it was a deshuith or rester's estate burdened with a liability to furnish a certain number of armed men to the ruling power when so required. No doubt, in the first years of their rule the English authorities regarded the zamindaris as military or feudat Narasimus estates (Exhibits 201 and 204) but the ii correctness of that view was explained in the letter of the Board of Revenue to Government, dated 30th September 1786 (Exhibit JJJ), and the same view as to the true character of these zamindaris was maintained in the Fifth Report, pages 6 7 and 8 Whatever military assistance was required of the zamindars it was quite a minor part of their duly aid it wes in respect of this particular zamindan expressly declared (Exhibit 20) to have ceased altogether after the rebel Anrayya was deposed in If it existed up to that time it is quite clear that it was not of such a character as to imply that the e tate must be held by a single person only, for we find that the zamindari was in fact held by the brothers Venkatadrı and Narayya ın equal shares from 1756 to 1771 a period which embraced several years under both Muhammadan and British rule No presumption in favour of importability therefore arises from the tenure on which the estate was held, and there is nothing to negative the positive cyidence which we have as to the actual facts of enjoyment since 1.56, and the inferences to be drawn from them'

On the question whether Nidadavole was partible or ımpartıble

De Gruyther, K C and A M Dunne contended that it had been wrongly decided by the Courts below that the estate of \idada ole Both that estate and the estate of Medar were part was partible of the zamindari of Nuzvid of which in 1 69 it was offi inlly reported that the zamin lari was held by cer ain Rajas or Chiefs as their hereditiry estate, paying a certaint ibute to the Government and I cong subject to service very much; the same manner as the old fendal tenures The Nuzvid Zumindar was or various occasions called on to render mil they service, and from this and its very nature, it was hald from its inception as an impartible estate, and eventually came to Narayya (No 1 in the pedigree) who after participating in its management with his brother. became on his brother's death the zamindar. He lost the estate in 1783, but though he had three sons the Government, when it was decided to restore the estate, grapted it to the eldest son Narasunha (2) in September 1784, thus, it was submitted, recognising its impartible character Narasimha's (2) dissolute character and misconduct obliged the Government to consider the estate forfested in 1794, and though eventually at the time of the permanent settlement in 1802 the Government decided to grant Narasımha (2) only a portion of the zamındarı, and made a permanent settlement of about one-third of the estate to his brother Ramachandra (3), that was done, it was submitted, on grounds of public policy, and in no way recognized the estate as being purtible for the shares were not only unequal, but Narasimha (4) Narayja's (1) third son, was given no interest at all in the estate The samindari granted to Narasimba(2), was now the Nidaday le estate and that granted to Ramschandra (8) was now the Nuzvid estate Then on the death of Ramachandra (8) his son Sohhanndri (6) succeeded to the Nuzvid estate and died in 1868. In October 1871 in the course of disputes whether the estate was partible or impartible Venkata Narasimha (12) brought a suit in the District Court at Guntur against his five brothers to obtain possession of a sixth share of the zumindari The suit was dismissed in 1875 by the District Judge who found that the "zamundari was ancient and in divisible up to the date of its division by Government in 1802, and that the portion then granted to Ramaclandra (3) was granted with unchanged incidents and therefore in in indivisible state" On appeal the High Court at Madias in 1874 affirmed those findings, being of opinion that "it is abundant'y clear that there is not an estate in these provinces of which the original impartibility may be more safely predicted", and that "the ovidence showed clearly that the zamindari was an ancient impartible estate in the nature of a principality, and that what had occurred subsequently between the brothers bad not altered the character of imparti bility attaching to the portions of the original estate which they then agreed to hold separately" Venhata Rao v Court of Wards (1) was taken to the Privy Conneil on appeal and in the course of the judgment (in December 1879, their Lor dships

said. "It was not disputed that the zamendare, prior to the year Names of 1802, formed part of an ancient and much larger estate which was judivisible and descendible to a single heir, and that prior to the British rule it was a military jagbir held on the tenure of military service, and in the nature of a ray or principality " But their Lordshins were of opinion that, assuming the impartible character of the original zamind in, the portion which was granted to Ramachandra (3) was held by him subject to the ordinary rules of the Hindu law and consequently they decreed the suit in favour of the plaintiff Venkata Narisimba (12) another suit brought in the Kistna Court in 1872 by the widow of Venkatadri (13), Simhadri (14), and Vonkatramayva (15) against the other three sons of Soblanadri (6) to recover their shares in the Nuzvid estate, the District Judge in 1877, following the decision of the High Court in 1874 in the former case. dismissed the suit. On appeal, after additional evidence had been taken, the question of partifulity was reconsidered by the High Court, and in January 1879 that Court came to the conclusion that, on the evidence then offered, it was beyond question that the estate was an ancient feudal principality, and that as such it was impartible. Having regard, however to the judgement of the Privi Council in December 1879 in Raia Lenkata Ruo v Court of Wards(1), the Nuzvid estate wis partitioned, the share which fell to Venkataramay, a (15) was a lled the Mediar estate, one of the properties now in dispute. In 1775 the principle was recognised by the Government of India that none of the large zamındarıs should be divided but should go to the oldest son. If an estate was a zamındarı, impirtibility, it was contended, followed no matter what was the title of the rules, whether zamındar, talakdar, raja or anything else estate now in suit was a Raj and in the evidence in the case had descended for three generations at least to the eldest son | There was therefore, it was contended on the evilence, ground for saying that the estate of Nidadavole was in partible titor to 1802, and as the grant of it in that your made no alteration in the nature of its tenure (the sanid was ere under Madras Regulation XXV of 1802) the presumption was that it remained the same That Regulation took away no rights proprietors

the evidence in this case showed that it was partible, and even NARASIERA if it was it one time an impartible estate, it was, under the sanad of 1802, as interpreted by this Board in Raja Venlata Rao v. Court of Wards(1), constituted a partible estate A zamindari was ordinarily partible unless it was a ray or was specially made impartible otherwise, Mayne's Hindu Law, seventh edition, page 632 It must then either be shown that as to the \idadayole estate there was a special custom of impartibility, or that it was a rai in which case the presumption would be that it was impartible. Here no special custom was either relied upon or proved, nor was there anything to show the estate was a rai, so that on both points the appellants had failed in their proof Reference was made to the 1 ifth Report of the Select Committee on the affairs of the East India Company and various passages were cited from vol II of the Madras edition, pages 5 to 30, to show that \idadavolo was not a ray, and that so far from being of the nature of a 113 or even a military tenure, it was pronounced to be merely a 'desmukh' zamindari Other passages were to the effect that the "Zaminda" of Nuzvid was one of those ramindars who could boast of no higher extraction than being descendants from the officers and revenue agents of the Sovereigns of Orissa who were employed by the Muhammadan conquerors in the management of their new acquisitions" and that ' the zamudurs though they arrogated to themselves many of the attributes of petty ruleis probably nover regarded in that light by the inhabitants of their somewhat catterel estates the estate could hardly, therefore, have ever formed an ampartible ray or a feudal holding' Peference was made ilso to Grint's Political Survey of the Northern Circurs (Appendix to Fifth Report of Select Committee), page "Oo and the Glossary at the end of the book, definitions of ' Zamindu ' and ' Desmuth ' [Lord ATENSON referred to the definition of 'De mukh in Wil on a Glosen y, page 132], the definition of Raj in Wilson's Glossary page 433, the letter of the Board of Revenue to the Government dated 30th September 1786 and Sri Raja Satrucherla Jagarnadha Razu Sri Raja Satrucherla Ramalhal a R zu(2) in which the Mirangi zamindari of a nature very similar to the Aidadavole estate and in much the same circumstances, was declared to be partible The question, however, whether an estate is governed by the ordinary Hindu law, or by any special custom was a pure question of fact, to be decided in each case upon the evidence adduced in it. Malhharjuna v. Durga(1). In the present case both Courts below had concurrently found on the evidence that the estate of Nidadavole was not a ral, nor impartible, but was partible and governed by the ordinary Hindu law; and such concurrent findings it was the rule of this Board not to disturb unless they were shown to be clearly wrong Reference was made to Allen v. Quebec Warehouse Company(2), Owners of the "P. Caland and Freight" v. Glamorgan Steam Ship Company(3); Ram Anugra Narain Singh v. Choudhry Hanuman Sahai(4), Parbati Kunwar v. Chandra Pal Kunuar(5), Sangd Husam v. De Gruyther, K.C., called on to reply said his contention was that there was no question of fact, the facts had been found and the law applicable had to be ascertained from them [Lord Akkinson —You have to show as that the Courts in India were clearly wrong in deciding that the estate was partible] The decisions were wholly wrong because they had not given effect to the rule of succession which had prevailed, in the family that held the estate, for a very long time. As to the status of the Zumindars it was set at rest by legislation in 1703 when they were declared to be the actual proprietors of their estates, and reference was made to the lifth Report of the Select Committee on the affairs of the Last India Company, vol II, Madras edition, pages 5, 6, 7 and 8, Multiu Vaduganadha Texar v Dorasinga Zetar(9) as to the Shiwaganga Zamindari which was held to be

LORD PAPER -The principles to be applied in determining the question which now arises for decision do not, in the r Lordships' opinion, admit of any controversy. These principles may be stated as follows -First, in the absence of a sanad under Regulation XXV of the Madris Regulations of 1802, those regulations do not affect the title to any land [Collector of Trichinopoly v Lekkamani(1)] Secondly, the acceptance of s sanad in common form under Regulation XXV does not of itself. and apart from other circumstances avail to alter the succession to an hereditary estate [The Udiyarpalayam Case(3)] Thirdly, nuless there be an existing estate with other incidents which a sanad in common form under Regulation XXV can operate to confirm, such sanad will confer on or confirm in the grantee an estato descendible according to the ordinary rules of inheritance of the Hindu law-Raja Veilata Rao v Court of Wards(4) Fourthly in order to establish that any estate is descendible otherwise than in accordance with the ordinary rules of inheritance of the Hipau law it must be proved either that it is from its nature impartible and doscendible to a single heir, or that it is so impartible and descendible by virtue of a special family custom [Babio Gunerh Dutt Sing! v Maharajah Moheshur Singh(5)] Lastly, the nature of the estate and the existence or otherwise of a special family distor are questions of fact to be determined on the cyrdence available in each case [Mallikarruna v Durga(6)]

The question now arising for decision is wiether the Zamin dan of Nidadavole is importible and descendible to a high heir or partible and descendible according to the ordinary rules of inberitance of the Hindu law The Zamindari of Nidadayole was the subject of a sanad in common form under Regulation XXV, and on the principles above stated it must be held to be partible and descendible according to the ordinary rules of inheritance of the Hindn law, unless the sinad could operate as the confirmation of a previously existing estate which from its nature or by virtue of some special family custom was impartible and descendible to a single heir The appellant contends that the grantee under this sanad had at and prior to the date there of an estate which was of the nature of a ray or principality and therefore impartible. He does not rely on any special family custom At and prior to the sanad the grantee thereunder had no doubt some estate, but whether or not it was an estate in the nature of a raiss a question of fact to be determined on the evidence Both Courts below have found that the estate was not in the nature of a rai, and having regard to the ordinary practice of thie Board it would be wrong to advise Hie Majesty to disturb this finding unless their Lordships are satisfied that it was not justified by the evidence [See Allen v Quebec Warehouse Company(1)] So far from being so satisfied, their Lordships after considering the evidence are not prepared to say that they should not themselves have come to the same conclusion Some stress was laid on the contrary findings of the Courts in the hitigation which culminated in the proceedings before the Board [Raza Venkata Rao v Court of Hards 2)] but their Lordships observe that in the present case there was evidence of a very material nature which was not available in the earlier litigation

1913 The question involved the construction of the will of the NARASINHA testator, dated 6th December 1864, which gave the power to his widows to make an adoption. The terms of the will and the authority to adopt are sufficiently set out in the judgment of thier Lordships of the Judicial Committee

On this question the District Judge had decided that the will was not genuine, and for this and other reasons had held that the adoption was invalid

On appeal the High Court (Davies and Brison, JJ) [(see Srs Rajah Venlata Narasimha Appa Row v Sri Rajah Rangayya Appa Row(1)] held that the will was genuine and as to the adoption they held that a power to adopt granted jointly to the two widows by the will of the testator was valid under the Hindu law, and that such a jower could be exercised by one widow after the death of the other , the case being, the High Court observed. testator intended to give anthority to the widows to exercise the power to adopt jointly and not singly. It is suggested that the widows were trustees and that on the death of one the other had the powers of both. But, if so, for whom were they trustees? Certurily not for the testator. Reference was invace to Stokes' Hindu Law Booke, page 588, parigraph 11. A joint power to adopt was invalid as being contary to the nature of the principles of the Hindu law is to adoption. I or these, as well as for the reasons given for the appellants in Appeal No. 114, adoption should be declared to be invalid.

Sir E Clarke, K.O , and Sir Easle Richards, K C , contended that the adoption was valid The proposition that a joint power to two widows to adopt was invalid was one which was not found in any of the text hooks or decisions on the Hindu law In Bombay wint adoption was allowed On the construction of the will was it absolutely necessary for both widows to adopt? It was enhmitted it was not, and Mayne's Hindu Law (seventh edition), name 137, section 109, was referred to The joint power was not necessarily illegal, as it could be exercised by both the widows agreeing in the selection of a child, and by one of them only receiving the child in idention. In that you the will was in accordance with the law It was in inferential construction that the widows would agree as to the how to be adonted, and as to which of them should receive him in adoption, and the widow who received him in adoption would become the mother of the boy That was n matter of arrangement between them, and a valid adoption, it was submitted, could be so made The point was never seriously raised in the former litigation of 1888 No objection was ever taken to the adoption that it was made under a noint power to adopt. In neither of the written statements was it suggested that the adoption was invalid because the power to make it was a joint power. In favour of the validity of a rount power of adoption there was the case of Lucl marun Lagore in Sir F Macnighten's "Considerations of Hindu Law." page 172, and that hid never been held to be erroneous Annapurne Nachiar v Forbes(1) is relied on as deciding that a joint power was invalid, but, as the High Court in the pre ent case rightly says, there is no such raking to be found in that case the effect of the decision is that a joint power was NARASUMBA Then there is Inder Kunwar v Javal Kunuar(1) where the validity of a joint power was not questioned [Lord Moulton The question never arose in that case as Lord Macvachten construed the will to mean that powers to adopt was only given to one widow] Siruda Prasad Pal v Rama Pali Pal(2) was a case directly in point. Reference was also made to West and Buhler, page 977 Alhoy Chander Bagchs v Kalapahar Haji(3), Amit'o Lal Dutt v Surnomoye Dasi(4), Surendro Keshub Roy v Doorg isoonders Dassec(5) and Serker's "Low of Adoption" (Tagore Law Lectures, 1883), edition 1891, pages 245, 246 a caso of a power of adoption heing given by a man with two or more wives The intention of the testat r shoul I be considered . he no doubt wanted an adoption to be made from a religious point of view, as through a son he would acquire spiritual benefit . Surva narayana v Venkataramana(6) As to whether the surviving widow could exercise the power to adopt, it was submitted that to say as the will did that both of them should act, was to give power ta each of them to act. The case was not to be governed by the principles derived from the English law as to powers, which was unsuitable to the construction of Hindu wills and reference was made to Huncomannersaud Panday v Mu sumat Baboose Munro; Koonweree (71, Bat Moticahu v Bat Martul at (8), Bhagal att Barma nua v Kalı Charan Singh(9) and Bhaiya Rabidat Singh v Indar Kunwar(10) A reasonable and probable construction of the will should be given on the principle of the Cypres Doctrine and the case should not be leaded on principles of linglish law that because one of the widows died the sirvivor could not exercise the power of adoption which had been given to both. Though no provision was made in the will for the case of one widow dying, yet the adoption by the surviving widow was not probibited,

LORD MOULTON -The further question now for consideration in these consolidated appeals is the ownership of the Zamindari of Medur It is common ground that at one time this zamind in belonged to Narayya Appa Row, the son of Venkataramayya Appa Row, who will for convenience be referred to as Narayva the younger. It is also common ground that Narayya the younger died intestate on the 4th August 1895 The points in dispute are whether at the time of his death Naraysa the younger had become by adoption the son of Rays Narayya Appa Rao Bahadur Garu, who died on the 7th December 1864 (and who will for convenience be referred to as Narayya the elder), and whether if such adoption took place, it had the effect of divesting him of the Zamindan of Medur. In order that the respondents in this appeal may sustain their clum to a share of the Jamindari of Medur, it is necessary that they should succeed on both these points, masmuch as their claim by inheritance from Norayya the younger depends on his having been validly adopted into the family of Narayya the elder. Their claim must therefore fail if he was not validly adopted, or if, having been so adopted, he thereby forfeited his right to the Zamindari of Medur, which appears to have been ancestral property in his family of origin.

The alleged adoption took place after the death of Narayya the elder and was made by his widow Papamma The respon dents claim that this adoption was a valid exercise of the powers given by the last will of Narayya the elder The appellants, on the other hand, contend that the power of adoption which pur ported to be given by the said will was in itself invalid, and that even if the power was valid as given in the will the alleged adoption was not in accordance with that power, and was accordingly of no force or validity If the appellants succeed in making good either of these objections to the validity of the adoption, the whole claim of the respondents admittedly falls to the ground, and their Lordships have therefore considered it desirable that these points should be fully argued in the first instance as preliminary points and that they should express their opinion on them before considering the other portions of the case

The will of Narayya the elder is dated the 6th day of December 1864, i.e., immediately previous to his death. He was a member of the Velama branch of the Sudra caste. He had two wives named respectively Papanama and Chinnamma. So much turns upon the language of this will that it is advisable to cito it in full. It reads as follows.—

"As my illness increased, and as I think I would not activity, you both should divide in equal shares my Zamindari Middavole and Bhbaigalli parganas and Ambaipet pargana, the cash in the upstair building and all other moveable and immoveable property. It has been arranged that my nephew (sister a son) Chiranjivi Vellnaki Venhatakirshan Row should engo herothirin) from son to grad doon the profits of the village of Mandar attached to Ambaipet Mintah aid also of Nagalipalli and Rajipotepalli villages attacled to the talinkdari and that my brothers in 'aw Vellanki Jagannadha Row Garu and Vellinki Sura Row Garu, should enjoy hereditarily the profits of the village of the Urdrajiavaram attached to Nidadavole pargana paying every year the peablash first therefor at the subdivision according to the Listband (instalments). You both should maintain our samastanam, servants, clerks, dasis and other servants NARASIMDA You should for the most part live in harmony with my younger brother Chiramiya Venkatadri Appa Row You shanld ad pt a boy who is our sunnihita (one closely related) whenever it strikes you that our samastanam should continue. In all matters both should act without quarrelling. I have this day alore caused a petition to be written and sent to the Collector of Godavur in regard to this matter You both should without ful act according to the aforesud pad it als (terms) "

The will is signed by the testator and witnessed by four witnesses, and under their names come the words -

' We both have agreed to not necording to the aforesaid forms ' and this is signed by Papamma and Chianamma

Chinn unma died in 1831 It was not until the year 1885 that any steps were taken with regard to the adoption of a hoy, but in that year the surviving wife Papanim a purported to idept Venkataramayya, the father of Narayya the younger This so called adoption of Venkataramayan was declared by the Court to be invalid, and thereupon in the year 1890 Papamma purported to adopt Narvyya the younger

The appellants contend that the proper construction of the language of the will is that, it gives a joint power of adoption to the two wives to be exorcised when they shall think it desirable that the testator's samast mam should continue They contend that such a joint power of a loption as an itself invalid, in ismuch as only one wife can adopt and they further say that even if this he not so, the occasion for the exercise of the power is when the two wives should jointly decide that it was desirable that the family should be continued and the act must then be the joint act of the two wives. If this be so it follows that the power could no, be exercised after the death of one of the two wives, since thereafter there could be neither agreement nor 1 int action

It is somewhat difficult to set out prec selv the contentions of the respondents on these points. Their (causel admit that while both the widows were living no adoption could take place without the consent of both But they contend that the proper interpretation of the ling tage of the will is that when the two widows should agree on the desirability of adoption taking pince and on the person to be adopted, the odeption should be carried out by one of the widowe (preferably the first wife) who would thereby become in law the mother of the adopted child. They contend that a joint power of adoption is valid by Hindu law and must be interpreted in the ahove sense, and, further, that on the duth of the one widow the power both of choice and adoption would, under the terms of the will, pass to the survivor

Before examining the validity of these contentions it will be well to clear up one or two points upon which their Lordships are of opinion that no reasonable doubt can exist.

In the first place there could be no power of adoption by either or both of the widowe in the present case excepting such is might be derived from the powers given by the will. In this part of India, it all evente a widow has no power to adopt a son to a deceased liusband excepting by express authority given by him in his lifetime or by will. In the next place only one wife can receive the child in adoption so as tostep into the position of being ite adoptive mother. These sendent from the cases which establish that the receiving mother acquiree in the eye of the law the same poet on as a natural mother to such an extent that her parents become legally the anternal grandparents of the child. To hold that a child could boar such a relationship to more than one mother would be entirely contrary to estiled law and would produce mextracable confusion in the law of inheritance.

But it does not follow as a matter of necessity from these considerations that a power given to more than one wife to adopt must be an invalid power. In many matters custom solves difficulties which appear to be involuble when the questions are considered from a purely logical point of view. In the very question that is before their Lordships there are indications in the cases atted that in some parts of India such a power might perhaps be interpreted as giving a preferential right of adoption to the first wife. But their Lordships are of opinion that the validity of a joint power of adoption and its interpretation are questions of far reaching importance in Hindu law and that in the present case the materials for deciding them are very in sufficient. They would greatly regret to find thousefues compelled to decide such questions on imporfect materials and incomuch as in the view which their Lordships take of this case.

it is not necessary that these points should be decided they NAMASIARA desire to express no opinion upon them, and will assume for the purposes of their decision that the respondents are right in their contention that such a joint power of adoption given to the two widows was, if properly interpreted, a valid power, and that if they had agreed to a person to be chosen for such adoption they could have validly executed the power

There remains the second point, is, whether the power given by the will was exerciseable by the surviving widow alone after the death of the other

The arguments of the appellants on this point are that upon a proper construction of the will it gives a joint power to the two wives to be exercised when they jointly come to the conclusion that it is desirable that it should be exercised, and that it should then be exercised only in case of a boy to be chosen by them jointly. As a more matter of construction their Lordships are of omnion that the appollants are right in this contention and in an ordinary case of the giving of a joint power to two donees the legal consequences claimed by the appellants would follow.

But the respondents clum that this must not be treated as a mere question of construction. They submit that the continuation of the line of the testator must be taken to have been for religions purposes in order that he might have the advantages of an heir who could perform the religious ceremonies affecting They therefore contend that this Board should his future life met aside all rules of law prevalue in Lugland with regard to point donees of a power and should as a matter of judicial duty. give effect to the intention of the testator with respect to procur ing for himself an hen by adoption, and not primit that inten tion to be defeated by its becoming impossible of execution by the two dones wently by 11 2500 of the death of one of them

Lordships are of opinion that this reas ning is In all ca es the primary duty of a Court is to ascertun from the linguage of the testator what were his intentions, se, to construe the will It is true that in so d my they are entitled and bound to bear in mind other matters than merely the words used. They must consider the surrounding circumstances, the position of the testator, his family relationships, the probability that he would use words in a particular senso, and many other things which are often summed up in the somewhat picturesque figure "The Court is entitled to put itself into the testator's arrichar " Among such surrounding circumstances which the Court is bound to consider none would be more important than ance and religious outmons, and the Court is bound to regard as prosumably and in many cases certainly) present to the mind of the testator influences and aims arising therefrom But all this is solely as an aid to arriving at a right construction of the will, and to ascertain the meaning of its language when used by that particular testator in that document the construction is settled, the daty of the Court is to carry out the intentions as expressed, and none other. The Court is in no case justified in adding to testamentary dispositions. If they transgress any legal restrictions, they must be disregulded they leave any eventuality unprovided for, the estate must, in case that eventuality arises, he dealt with according to the law which provides for succession of property in the thience of testamentary directions applying thereto. But the Court never adds to a will anothing which needs to be done by testamentary disposition. In all cases it must logally carry out the will us properly construed, and this duty is universal, and is truo aliko of wills of overy nationality and every religion or rank of life This fundamental principle does not clash with the principle that the Court will not necessarily apply English rules of construction to such a will as we have here to deal with These rules of construction amount in many cases to nothing more than saying that a special phrase which may be used in more than one sense shall primd facie be deemed to be intended to hear one particular meaning, unless from the consideration of the context or the surrounding circumstances, the Court can come to the conclusion that it is there used in a different souse other cases the rules are the expression of such tencencies in the Court as the desire to avoid an intestacy or the presumption in favour of immediate vesting of an estate Such rules are purely an English product based on English necessities and Euglish liabits of thought, and there would be no justification in taking thom as our guide in the case of Indian wills Nor does this fund montal principle clash in any way with what is sometimes called "giving a liveral interpretation" to native wills. That native testators should be ignorant of the legal phrases Troper to express their intentions, or of the legal steps necessar)

to carry them into effect, is one of the most important of the NARASIMHA "surrounding circumstances" which the Court must here in mind, and it is justified in refusing to allow defects in expression in these matters to prevent the carrying out of the testator's true intentions. But those intentions must be ascertainful by the proper construction of the words he uses, and once ascertained they must not be departed from Applying these principles, their Loidships have to ascertain the true intentions of the testator from the language used in the will The words are "You should adopt a boy who is our sannihita (one closely related) whenever it strikes you that our samastanam (family) should continue! Such an adoption would have effects of two very different kinds. In the first place it would provide some one who would offer the cust mary oblations for the good of the soul of the testurer, and in the second place it would clange the succession of the property The devolution after the death of the widows would be longer be to the persons entitled to succeed on an intestacy but to the heirs of the person adopted Counsel for the respondents would have us regard the religious motive as the overmistering one so that tre intentions of the testator must be treated as if they were dictated by it alone Their Lord-hips fully appreciate how strong such a motive may be expected to be in the mind of a Hindu But in their Lordships' opini n the language of the testator points to the picdominance of the secular motive. He does not direct that there shall be an adoption as he would naturally have done had he wished in all events to secure that there should be a son to perform the due religious rites. He makes it depend on the opinion of his ni lows whether and wl en an adoption should tale place. It is common ground that the occasion for an adoption would not arise in the lifetime of the two wid we nuless they both agreed to use the power aid there is nothing which indicates any intention to interfere with their freedom of choice in the matter, whether the true interpretation be that the power was joint or several

But this does not exhan t the material which we have for arriving at the te tator's true intentions. In judging of the hight in which the directions of the testator are to be regarded. it is legitimate to look at the contemporaneous decine ent referred to in the will which he wrote or caused to be written with the

PARTHA SABATHY, LORD MOULTON express intent to render olear his wishes with regard to his succession This document has, of course, no testamentary effect, but it is legitimate to look at it as one of the surrounding circumstances in order to test the soundness of the principle of interpretation pressed upon us by Counsel for the respondents In the will the testator writes "I have this day alone caused a petition to be written and sent to the Collector of Godavari in regard to this matter" This petition, which is signed by the testator and bears the same date as the will, is substantially a repetition of it though the language is not precisely the same The passage relating to adoption reads thus "That if it should strike them (se. his widows) to continue the same tanam, they should adopt a boy who is my sannihita' This language emphasizes that which is expressed also in the will, viz , that the adoption should only take place if and when the widows thought it desirable that such should be the case, or in other words if and when they thought it desirable that the succession to the property should be changed. Had the testator been moved by an overmastering religious motive to secure that there should be some one to act as his son after his death, it is inconceivable that he would have used such language or made such provisions relating to the futore adoption of a son. He would have directed that an adoption should take place and not left it to depend on the problematical concurrence of his widows in their views as to its desirability

For what it is worth, it is clear that this was the interpretation put upon the will by the widows themselves. It will be remembered that they signed the will at the date of its execution and promised to act according to its terms. Three days after this they write to the Collector of Godavari referring to these provisions of the will in the words "and that if it should strike in this samastanam should continue we should adopt a boy who is our sannista." The testator died in 1864. His widow Chinamma died in 1881 leaving Papanina surviving her. It is not ontil 1885, fair years after the death of Chinamma, that aim steps to adopt a boy are taken. It is clear therefore that the widows who were acquainted with the provisions of the testator's will it the time and indection to carry them into effect did not interpret them as doing more than leaving them quito free to adopt a not as they might think desirable.

РАВТИА-RABATHY Logo MODETON

Their Lordships are therefore of opinion that in the present harasings case there is nothing which requires or justifies them in interpreting the provisions of the will with regard to the adoption in any special way arising from the fact that the testator was a Hindu They must adhere to the plan moaning of the language So constraing it they are of opinion that it gives to the widows mountly the power to adopt a son should an occasion arise which in their opinion makes it desirable so to do The power is a joint power and the occasion on which it is to be exercised depends on their joint opinion In other words, the exercise of the lower is vested in the discretion of the joint dones. Now it is clearly the law that in such a case the death of one of the donees puts an end to the joint power. This is not by virtue of any peculiar doctrine of English law or of any series of English decisions. It flows from the inture of a joint power. If power is given to A and B persone designate to do an act if and when they think it desirable the occasion caunot arise nor can the power be exercised unless they are both hving and in agreement as to the act | This cannot be the case after the death of one of them and the consequence is that the survivor cannot do the act because he has not the warrant of the agreement of his late colleague nor can be then do the act, seeing that the authority to do it is only given to the two acting jointly. The case is different when the I cwei is vested not in person e designate but in the occupants for the time being of a specified office such as executors or trustees but that is not the case which we have to consider here The point may perhaps be put in a simpler form not involving any appeal to legal documes as to joint donees of a power Their Lordships are of opinion that the words of the will when properly construed relate to choice and adoption by the two widows acting jointly Hence these words refer only to the period of time when both widows are living. The will is silent as to the perio I after the death of one of the widows and if their Loidshijs wer to hold that Pajamma could adopt a son after Chingamma s death they would be providing for a period of time which the testator left unprovided for and innoticed in his will, ie they would be making an addition to his testamentary dispositions which is a thing that no Court is entitled to do

Lord Mourton—Then Lordships are of opinion that the two decisions appealed against are correct, that the High Court acted rightly in setting aside the two assignments the one to Annamalia and the other to Chidambaram, and that no valid proceedings can therefore be based on either of those assignments. The question whether any of the parties can establish rights based not on the assignments, but on other grounds, such as the actual payment of debts, is a point which was in their Lordships' opinion, not before the Courts below, and is not before their Lordships, and on that point therefore they pronounce no opinion

Their Lordships will, therefore, humbly advise His Majesty that these appeals should be dismissed

JUDGMENT -The plaintiff, who is the Khazi of the Kundapur Jumma Maspid, appointed by Government, instituted the suit in this case against the defendant to restrain him from officiating Spraces JJ at marriages celebrated in the place and for the recovery of a sum of Rs 11 which the defendant had received as fees for four nikkas performed by him in violation of the plaintiff s rights The Munsif dismissed the suit, bolding that the plaintiff had no cause of action against the defendant, as he acquired no exclusive right by his appointment as Khazi to officiate at marriagos The District Judge reversed his judgment and passed a decree in the plaintiff's favour. The Munsif relies in support of his corclusion, on section 4 of the Khazis Act XII of 1880, clauses (b) and (c) of which by down that 'nothing herein contained, and no appointment made hereunder, shall be leamed to render the presence of a Kazi or Nub Kazi necessary at the celebration of any maisinge or the perfor nance of any rate or ceremony or to prevent any person discharging any of the functions of a Lazi' We agro, with the Munsit that the section shows that an appointment under the Act does not confer on the animatee any exclusive franchic or any exclusive right to officiate at marriages Section 2 of the Act enacts that the Local Government may, if it thinks fit after c usulting the or actual Muhammadan residents appoint one or more khazis whonever it appears to it that any considerable number of Muhammidais i sileit in my local area de ne that one r more Khazis should to app in tel for su h local area. contained no provisions conferring any exclusive right on a person appointed as Khazi under it. The opinion of Sir Rowland Wilson, the learned writer on Muhammadan Law is also in support of the Munsif's construction See page 137 Mr Sita ama Ran for the respondent relies on Muhammad Yusaub v Savad Ahmed(1) in support of his contention that the plaintiff has an exclusive right But the plaintiff in that case did not claim the office under an appointment made under any statute He was appointed by the Governor of Bomb y as the representative of the sovereign power which according to Muhammadaa Liv had the right to appoint Khazis Tie office so created was a judicial and administrative office, and registration of marriages as d officiating at the mwere only part of the functions of the office holder The plan tiff there complained of the breach of his rights or general, including his judicial and administrative rights There can be no doubt that a judicial or administrative office created by the sovereign confers rights and privileges of an exclusive character Act AII of 1850 expressly says that a Khazi appointed under that Act is to line no jidicial or administrative powers We must hold that that case has no bearing on the one before us Another case was relied on for the respondent Sayad Hashim Saheb v Huseinsla(2) The suit in that case related to the office of Khat b in a mosq io, as also Mira Mohidin v Asan Mohidin(3), which was also cited for the appellar t An office which requires the holder to perform duties in connection with an inclitation werld ordinarily carry with it rights of an exclusive character, and does not interfere with the rigit possessed by all persons to exercise any profession or calling they migit choose to adopt The object of the Kharis Act of 1880 was merely to appoint a person whose duty it would be to render certain services to such Muhammadans as may choose to resort to him for certain purpo os, and does not cinfer on him any exclusive right to perform the functions which his office requires him to discharge This was the view a lopted in Blo 'wi , Synd Unwur Ulee(4) and in Zeinut ollah Cozee v Aurecho Hah(5)

The respondent also contends that by the custom of Muham madans the Khazi has the exclusive right of efficienting at marriages. But as pointed out in Muhammad Yusabe v Sayad Bernard Ahmed(1) the effice of Khazi is not one created by the community of Muhammadais but by the Sovereign, whose administrative Services of Muhammadais but by the Sovereign, whose administrative Services JJ power is the source of the Khazi rights. Moreover, we do not understand the plaint in this case as asserting any right based on an enforceable legal custom.

SANGIBLE NAIB J

SANKARAN NAIR, J .- The question is whether the plaintiff's application is barrod by limitation. The plaintiff obtained a decree in Original Smit No 11 of 1903 on the file of the District Court of Vizagapatam The decree was transferred to the District Munsif's Court of Parvatipur for execution on the 5th October 1904 The decree holder got certain immoverable pronerties attached, but the potition was dismissed on the 10th of March, 1905 and no further steps were taken in the District Munsif's Court | The decree holder then applied to the District Court at Vizagapatam on the 13th December, 1907 for the sale of the property attached by the District Minisif The petition was noturned for amendment under section 235 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1832 It was represented without amendment and was then recorded without being registered The decree holder makes this present application on the 21st April 1910 for notice and for the realisation of the amount by sale of the properties airealy attached the question whether this present application is barred by limitation depends on the question whether the application of the 13th December 1997 to the District Court was in accordance with law and to the propor Court

The application of the 13th of December 1907 prayed for notice under section 248 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 and the decision of the District Judge that such application must Naristrato be treated as a step in and of execution is in accordance with Peda Ballan the decision in Parhappa Achari v Poojali Seenan(1) The only question that remains therefore for decision is whether the application is made to the proper Court The District Judge decides that the proper Court to which the application should have been made was the District Munsif's Court of Parvatiput to which the decree had been transferred for execution and that therefore the present application is barred under eection 223 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 (section 41 of the present Code) the Munsit's Court of Parvatipur to which the decree was sent for execution has to certify to the District Court of Vizaga patam the fact of such execution or if the Munsif's Court fails to execute the decree the circumstances attending such failure Till that is due the Muusif's Court retains its jurisdiction to execute the decree. See Abda Begam v. Muznifur Husen Khan(2) There is no doubt therefore that the Mansife Court had juris diction to entertain a similar application for sale, though that Court had dismissed the application for execution in 1905.

OF BOSBILL SIMHULU BAHADUR MAIR J

The next question is, is that the only Court to which this application could be made or had the District Court also jurisdiction to order the sale of the property Under section 38 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908 (section 223 of the Code, Act \IV of 1882) the decree may be executed "either he the Court which passed or by the Court to which it is sent for execution " This in itself does not authorise the District Court of Vizagapatam which passed the decree to execute it after it had been sent for execution to the Munsif's Court of Parvatinur Section 39 states the conditions under which a decree may be sent to another Court for execution Under clause (c) it may be sent for execution to another Court if the Court directs the sile or delivery of immoveable property situated outside the limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree and jr sumably within the limits of the jurisdiction of the Court to which it is sont for execution. The reason for the transfer in this case is

plun enough By clause (a) it may also he sent to another Court if the judgment-debtor resides there or carries on business or work for gain within the limits of the jurisdiction NABABARAJU

It is true the judgment-debter may upply for stay of excents in proceedings under Order XXI, rule '6, but he is not ontitled to get the execution proceedings stayed While therefore these sections may not show that con current execution cannot be carried on, they certainly show

cumstances It is only when such execution is nocessir; in the interests of the decree holder and when it can be carried on Sate Rais without hardship to the judgment dobtor that it ought to be PEDA BALLAR allowed by the Court which passed the decree The other provisions show that such Court apparently retains control over the execution proceedings. When the decree has to be executed against the representative of the judgment debtor, then according to section 50 the application has to be made to that Court which passed the decree When a decree has to be executed at the instance of the assignee of the decree-holder, then also the application has to be made under Order XXI, rule 16, to the same Then again power is given to such Court to stay the execution proceedings in the Court to which the decree is sent for execution When therefore concurrent execution is neces eary the Court which passed the decree may order it But till such order is passed and permission is given to the decree holder to execute the decree simultaneously in more than one Court. he is not entitled to carry on execution proceedings at the same time. The decision seem to bear out this view. In Saroda Prosaud Mullick v Luchmeeput Sing Doogur(1), then Lordships of the Privy Council hold that it was open to a Court to send the decree for execution to three Courts at the same time This decision was passed under the Civil Procedure Code of It may be pointed out that under section 286 of that code the Court was bound to transmit the decree for execution to another Court "unless there be special reasons to the contrary" Under the Codes of 1882 and of 1908 it is optional with the Court to send it to another Court | Under section 284 of the Code of 1859 their Lordships point out, that when the decree is sent for execution to another Court conditions may have to be imposed upon the decree holder. This also shows the necessity of the exercise of indicial di cretion. In Krish tokishore Dutt v Rooplal Dass(2), also there was an order by the Court which passed the decree for similtaneous execution. These decisions are authorities for the proportion that decrees may be executed simult meously in more thin one Court, but in all those cases there were orders allowing such execution and the consideration that I have already set out would seem to indicate the accessity of an order permitting concurrent execution before such execution preceedings can be carried out. In the PEDA BALLAR present case after the decree was transferred for execution to the Parvatipur Munsif's Court that Court had seisin of the execution proceedings and it was bound to carry them on until execution was obtained or further execution became impossible was no order of the District Court of Vizagapatam staying execution in that Court, for the purpose of executing the decree in the Vizigapatam Court itself I am therefore of opinion that the Judge is right in holding that the application for sale in 1907 should have been made to the Parvatipur Munsif's Court and that the District Court was not therefore the proper Court to entertain such an application The present application is therefore baired I confirm the order of the District Court and dismiss this appeal with costs

The accused was charged with robbery under section 397, In him Penal Code, and was tried by a jury who unanimously found him not guilty The Sessions Judge in his charge to the jury pointed out that section 397 was a combination of robbery and voluntary causing of grievous hart and that it was open to the jury to find him guilty under section 326 alone. The offence under section 397 is triable by a jury Whereas that under section 326 is triable with assessors The Sessions Judge in referring the case to the High Court made the following order -"The jury have unauimously found the accused not guilty of any offence I am numble to agree with the verdict I should find the accused guilty of voluntarily causing grievous hurt by means of a knife, an offeuce falling under section 326, Indian Penal Code, though I would give him the benefit of a reasonable doubt as regards the robbery I am clearly of opinion that it is necessary for the ends of justice to submit the case to the High Court "

T Rangachanar and S Ranganadha Ayyar for the Counterpetitioner in Referred Case No 10 of 1912.

The facts of all the charges are fully set out in the judgment of SUNDARA ATTAR. J

Berdaba Ayyar, J SUNDRA AYNE, J.—This is a case of misconduct against a first grade pleader practising in Bellary. One Mum Reddi ledged a complaint against the pleader charging him with the misconduct for which he has been tried by the District Judgo of Bellary. He subsequently withdrew his complaint, hat as the District Judge had before the withdrawal already framed a charge against a pleader, he proceeded with the inquiry, found him guilty of the misconduct charged, and made a report to this Court under section 14 of the Logal Practitioners' Act

The facts that led up to the charge are hriefly as follows inquiry into a charge of dacoity was going on about June 1908 in the Sub Magistrate's Court of Tadpatri against Muni Reddi The pleader was engaged according to Mani Reddi's case to defend him both in the Magistrate's Court and in the Sessions Court of Bellary in the event of the case being committed to the Sessions Court for trial, and a fee of Rs 350 was settled and paid for the pleader's services in both Courts The pleader appeared in the Magistrate's Court but did not defend Muni Reddi in the Sessions Court Ho left the district for Rangoon without making any arrangement for Muni Reddi's defence at the Sessions trial Another pleader had to be engaged for the Muni Reddi was acquitted at the trial quently instituted a suit for the recovery of the fees paid by him with interest It was transferred to the Suberdinate Judge's Court of Bellary for trul The pleader defended the suit contending that his ongagement with Muni Reddi was only to defend him in the Magistrate's Court and to put in a petition for bail un the Sessions Court, and did not include Mum Reddi's datence at the Sessions trial, that only Rs 268 and not the whole of the Ra 350 stipulated for was paid to him by Muni Reddi, Muni Reper that although Muni Reddialterwards asserted that he had under-

taken the defence in the Sessions Court also, he repudiated my such agreement, and that he had not failed to fulfil the ongagement actually outcred into by him. The Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit upholding the pleader's defence. On appeal the District Judge Mr Phillips reversed the judgment of the Subordinate Judge and found the defendant's contentions to be untrue He passed an order under section 476 of the Code of Criminal Procedure directing the prosecution of the pleader for making a false statement on a comparatively unimportant point The order was set aside by this Court in revision and it is unnecessary to refer to it further Mnni Reddi afterwards put in a petition against the pleader under the Legal Practitioners' Act requesting that an inquiry should be made into the pleader's conduct, but as already stated, he subsequently withdrew the petition The charge framed against the pleader was that having agreed to appear for Muni Reddi in the Sessions Court and received the fee for such appearance he failed to appear, and when asked to return the fee he failed to do so, and that in defeading the suit filed by Muni Reddi he denied receipt of part of the fees, and also denied that he was engaged to work in the Sessions Court, and that therefore he was guilty of fraudulent and improper conduct in the discharge of his professional duty, an offence under section 13 (b) of the Legal Practitioners' Act No fresh evidence was recorded in support of the charge and indeed there was no one to let in evidence as Muni Reddi had withdrawn his complaint. The pleader evidently relied on the evidence he had already adduced in the civil suit but he also adduced some fresh evidence He examined two witnesses and gave evidence again himself He also put in his account book and diary which he had not filed in the civil suit. The District Judge after considering the fresh evidence adhered to the conclu sions he had airried at in his judgment in the appeal from the Subordinate Judge's decreion in the civil suit Mr Rangachariyar who has appeared for the pleader at the hearing of the charge against the pleader in this Court has raised an objection which if well founded would go to the root of the whole proceedings before the District Indge and vitiate his report That objection is that the Judge was wrong in considering the

MUNI REDDI judgment or the evidence in the civil suit, that the proceedings in the suit were not admissible is avidence at all in the inquiry under the Legal Prioritioners' Act which he contended was in the nature of a criminal trial and that the charges should have been established by evidence adductd at the enquity. He argues that a judgment is not admissible in evidence in any judicial proceeding except in the cases covered by sections 40, 41 and 42 of the Indian Evidence Act, and that none of these sections is applicable to the present case. This contention I am entirely unable to accept In In the matter of Razendro Nath Mukerys (1) a pleader who had been convicted of fraudulently using as genaine a document which he knew to be forged was proceeded against for misconduct under paragraph 8 of the Letters Patent of the Allahabad High Court That Court not only regarded the judgment convicting the pleader as good evidence of his misconduct but refused to allow the promiety of the conviction to be questioned at the inquiry, and removed his name from the rolls of the Court | The Judicial Committee of the Privy Conneil upheld its procedure Counsel who appeared for the pleader before the Privy Conneil did not indeed question the admissibility of the Crimia al Judgment in evidence but merely contouded that the Court would not in consequence necessarily dishar him and that the learned Judges of the High Court went too far in not allowing the propriety of the conviction to be questioned which connsel maintained was not justified other in law or in fact The Privy Conacil dealing with this argument observed "It is plain that the object of the present appeal is to have the judgment of the Sessians Jadge and of the High Court on the uppeal reviewed and reversed in substance if not in form This ought not to be ullowed In effect the appellant would radirectly have an appeal against the conviction when if he had petitioned for leave to appeal against it the leave would certainly have been refused "These observations show that their Lordships treated the conviction as conclusive evidence of the offence of which the pleader had been convicted. Their Lordships refer to the judgment of Lord Manssiers in In re Brounsall(2) where that learned Judge observed with reference to proceedings taken aguest a solicitor who had been canvicted of stealing a guinea

^{(1) (1900)} I LR 22 All, 49 at p 63 (PC) (2) (1778) 2 Cowper's Rep. 829

"This application is not in the nature of a second trial or a new Mess Report punishment. But the question is, whether, after that conduct of this man," (i.e., in stealing the gnines, it does not say whon, where or how) "it is proper that he should continue a momber of SUNDARA n profess on which should stand free from all suspicion AIYAR. J. it is on this principle, that he is an unfit person to practise as an attorney." LOPD MANSFIELD evidenly appears to have regarded the conviction as evidence of the man having committed the offence of theft. Mr Rangachariar contends that the case before the Allahabad High Court and the cases referred to in the

Privy Council judgment thoron are distinguishable from the present case, for in those cases the practitioner had been convicted of a serious criminal offence and that such a conviction apart from the question of his being really guilty of the offence or not, would be a sufficient ground for his being regarded as unfit to be a practitioner in a Court It is no doubt true that a conviction for felony or other serious offence has been regarded as a sufficient ground for punishing a solicitor or an advocate for misconduct, and section 12 of the Legal Practitioners' Act recognises and gives effect to this view. But what is the principle underlying it ? The conviction itself is certainly not misconduct on the part of the pleader convicted Cun it he said that whother the pleader be guilty or not, he having been subjected to the infamy of a conviction he must be further punished by the Court in its disciplinary jurisdiction over its practitioners? I do not think that this is the reason for punishing a pleader The Court is not bound to, not does it always altogether remove a pleader from the exercise of his profession on the ground of his conviction of a criminal offence It may inflict a lighter numeliment by suspending him for a period. If the infamy due to conviction be the ground of punishment one would suppose that if it makes him unfit to practise he must be regarded as unfit to do so for ever and not for a period only. But as already observed the Court, having regard to the gravity of the offence, the extenuating circumstances, if any, and taking all the facts of the case into consideration, has the power in the interests of the public and of the profession to award such punishment to the pleader, or no punishment at all. I am of opinion that the reason for punishing a person who has been convicted is that the conviction is good evidence of the commission by the pleader

VENKATA Row SUNDARA AYEAR J

MUSI REDDI of the offence in question But, assuming that the conviction itself is regarded as good cause for punishing the pleader, would not a similar principle apply where a civil court has found the pleader guilty of grave misconduct which requires that he should be dealt with by the Conit under its disciplinary jurisdiction? I see no reason why it should not. The principle would of course not apply where the conduct of the pleader was not the direct issue in the Court which found him guilty of misconduct but only arose incidentally in a litigation between other parties Such was the case in In re Lubeck(1) In this case the suit related to the very misconduct charged against the pleader in the present proceedings and I see no reason for holding that the judg ment and the proceedings in the civil cuit are not admissible in evidence With respect to the contention that the judgment would not be relevant on the question of the pleador's guilt under any of the sections of the Innan Evidence Act, I do not think it presents any serious difficulty. It appears to me on the other hand to he a rather bold argument to urge that the finding in proceedings against the pleader in which the question was exactly the same as at the present enquiry should be regarded as irrelevant There is no reason why it should not come within the provisions of section 11 of the Indian Lyidence Act which lays down that "Facts not otherwise relevant are relevant if hy themselves or in connection with other facts they make the oxistence or non-existence of any fact in issue or relevant fact highly prohable or improbable,

> I have more doubt whether the finding of the civil Court can be regarded as conclusive In a criminal trial the guilt of the accused has to be proved by the prosecution beyond all reasonoble doubt and a court convicting a pleader of a oriminal offence must be taken to hove found the offence proved conclusively ngainst him But in a civil sait the finding on the issue does not proceed on the conclosiveness of the evidence adduced on either side but on the balance of the cyldence addreed on both sides It might for instance be said that in this case the District Indge could not be hold to have decided in the civil suit that the plaintiff had proved by the evidence beyond all reasonable doubt that the pleader had agreed to defend the plantiff in the Sessions

VENKATA BUNDARA

Court and that he had been paid hie fee for doing so It is un- MUNI REDDI necessary to decide this precise point in this case, for the District Judgo did not treat his own previous indement in the civil suit as conclusive against the pleader, but allowed him to adduce any evidence he might choose No complaint has been made before as that the pleader was not allowed to let in any specific ovidence or that he was prevented from further cross-examining any particular witness examined in the civil suit on any specific matter. I must therefore disallow this objection of Mr Ranga chamar

The learned valid reviewed the evidence adduced in the civil suit and the fresh evidence adduced at this inquiry at considerable length and attempted to show that the findings of the Judge cannot be sustained I have given to both the ovidence and to Mr Rangachariar's arguments the anxious consideration which any case against a professional gentleman deserves, but I nm unable to differ from the conclusions of the Judge I do not consider it necessary to repeat the reasons given by the Judge in his careful and elaborate judgment and shall only deal with the principal points urged by Mr Ranguchariar The first question for decision is whether the pleader undertook to defend Muni Reddi at the Sessions trial also, or whether he merely agreed to put in a bul petition so far as the Sessions Court was The receipt (Exhibit A) given by the pleader to Mani Reddi contains strong evidence against him in his own handwriting His explanation that he stated in Exhibit A that the proceedings to which the receipt related were to he in the Sessions Court also merely because he agreed to put in a petition for buil in that Court is not satisfactory to my mind. It is extremely unblicly that a pleager of long experience would not, if that were the case, specifically state in Exhibit A that the fee received by him covered only a bail petition in the Sessions Court I do not lay stress on the statement made by the pleader in Fxhibit B 2 that he would move for ball in the Sessions Court statement might have been unale in the hope that he would be one and for the Sessions trial also. The pleuder jursued in this ease the extriordinary course of withholding from Mum Reddi all knowledge of his defence in the civil suit until the actual commencement of the trial His defence had to be ascertained by Muni Reddi from the questions put to the latter's witnesses

Muni Ryphi in cross-examination, and the cross-examination was so skilfully

Very contrived as to disclose as little of the defence case as possible

In fact, it would be impossible to discover a great deal of the defence except from the evidence adduced by the pleader after the plaintiffs' case had been closed. It is most unfortunote for the pleader that he pursued this line of conduct but he has no one else to blame if the same references are drawn against him as would be drawn in the case of any other litigant It is to my mind also very improbable that Muni Reddi who had been committed for trial on a grave criminal charge punishable with a minimum of seven years' imprisonment would not have taken any steps to procure legal assistance at the Sessions trial until the very day which was fixed for the trial, viz. 14th October 1908, if the pleader had not agreed to defend him When Muni Reddi was in the box in the civil suit he was not asked whether the reference in Exhibit A to the Sessions Court was not merely because of the pleader's agreement to put in a bail petition in that Court, and not because he had undertaken to defend him at the trial itself Mr Rangachariar has placed much reliance on the evidence of Roshi Reddi in the civil suit in support of the defen lant's case Roshi Reddi's evidence has been subjected to close analysis by the District Judgo and I shall content myself with saying that I agree with him that his evidence is not trustworthy I do not attach weight however as the District Judge does to the pleader's objection to Mani Reddi s attempt to show that he and Roshi Reddi were not friendly to each other when Rosh: Reddi gave his evidence This attempt was not made by Muni Reddi until after the case was closed and I cannot say that the pleader was not then entitled to object to it. It has been strenuously urged before us that Roshi Roddi was an honest man whom the pleader did 1 ot know before it was elicited in plaintiffs' cross examination that he was present when the pleader was engaged for the case This is not quite correct as pointed out by the District Judge, for Roshi Reddi's name was disclosed in Muni Reddi's answer to the pleader's interrogatories But what is more important is that the pleader took pains to chert from Muni Reddi by cross examination that Roshi Reddi was Muni Reddr's friend If Roshi had not already agreed to give evulence in favour of the pleader why was this question put The learned valid for the pleader has not been able to suggest

any satisfactory reason I feel convinced that the pleader had MUNI REPORT already approached Roshi Reddi and Roshi had already agreed to support his defence In Exhibit I Subba Rao, a second grade pleader through whom the pleader's engagement was arranged, certainly wrote to the plender as if he had been engaged to defend Muni Reddi in the Sessions Court It is not said that the pleader repudiated the suggestion that he had undertaken to appear at the Sessions trial The accounts filed by the plender at the inquiry do not support his contention, the reference in them to the case being merely 'the Tadpath case,' an identification which would be equally consistent with Mnni Reddi s contention other evidence has been adduced by the pleader to prove that he did not nudertake Muni Reddie defence in the Sessions Court I have no heatation in coming to the conclusion that he did do so

Mr Rangachariar's next contention is that assuming that the engagement included Muni Roddi s defonce in the Sessions Court, as the whole of the pleader's fee was not paid but only Rs 218 ont of Rs 350, the pleader was absolved from the duty to appear in the Sessions Court Here again the pleader starts with the initial difficulty that Exhibit B-2 furnishes evidence against him in his own handwriting The person who actually made the payment Subbanna has no doubt not been called but in the fice of Exhibit B 2 it lies on the pleader to prove that the statement in it that the amount was paid was incorrectly made. His case is that it was intended to be paid to his clerk but it was subsequently withheld as he was not able to attend the Magistrate's Court the next day He says that the clerk told him that the pryment was not made, but the clerk is the proper person to speak to the nonpayment and he has not been called Exhibit I, Subba Rao's letter, was relied on by Mr Rangachanar in support of the pleader's contention But it appears to me to furnish strong evidence against him. It refers to a sum of Rs 50 which had not been paid. This probably refers to a further payment which the pleader says was promised to him for defending limin sio accused before the Ministrate. It is not alk ; I to be a part of the Rs 95 in question Tho letter certainly suzg sisthat nothing else was due to the pleader. It is argued that the amount is not mentioned in the receipt Exhibit A which refers to the other payments mide ly Mnui Reddi. This min be because the man who made the payment, Subanna, did not take the receipt with him

VENEATA Rose SUNDARA

MCAI REDDI Whon he paid the amount The pleader admits that moneys paid to him would not he entered in receipts given by him if the receipts were not produced. The accounts of the pleader are strongly relied on to disprove the payment but as pointed out by the Judge this is only negative evidence. Might it not be that there was an omission due to the pleader's clerk? The clerk would have been able to tell the Court but he was not examined The accounts were not put into Court in the Civil Suit and the explanation given is absolutely unsatisfactory Roshi Reddi's evidence was as I have already stated rightly rejected by the Judge It is admitted that the plender or his clerk mide no demand on Muni subsequently for the Rs 95 I must hold on the evidence available to the Court that the sum of Rs. 9., was paid to the pleader Having regard to this finding it is unnecessary to deal with the further question whether the non payment of a portion of the fee would absolve the pleader from his duty to appear for the chent. In the absence of an agreement that the fee promised abould he previously paid, it is to say the losst very doubtful whether a plea of non payment of part of the fco would be of any avail The Judge further finds that some few days before the trial there was an altercation between Muni and the pleader in consequence of the latter's assertion that he had not agreed to appear at the Sessions Court for Muni and that Muni finally agreed to pay a further sum of Re 50 but the pleadar kft the place before the date fixed for the trial arrived without making any arrangements for the defence Tho defendant examined his brother to prove that when Muni went to Bellary on the 14th October 1908 for the trial he told him that the pleader had not been engaged at all for the Sessions trul Much emphasis has been laid on Muni taking no sters at all for nearly a year after his trial and acquittal to complain of the ple ider's conduct or to demand the return of the fee from him, and it is strongly urged that this was due to his consciousness that he had nothing to complain of and that his subsequent conduct was due entirely to the matigntion of the pleader's coemics and particularly of Mr Krishuama Churlu But it is remarkable that although the pleader received a notice from Muni in October 1909 and tool care to ascertain that Mr. Krishnama Charlin who sent the notice had been nutborised by Muni to do se, he sent no reply to it and took no steps to deny the allegations contained therein Proctically the whole of Manu's case was disclosed in that Muni Read notice Exhibit C but the pleader withheld his case until he saw the whole of Muni s evidence addaced in the Civil Suit A client is not generally in much baste to take proceedings against a pleader of standing It may be that Muni was prompted by others to make his complaint, but in the circumstances I do not think that any inference adverse to the truth of Munis case can be drawn from his delay I therefore hold it to be satisfactorily proved that the pleader after undertaking the defence of Minn at the Sessions trial and receiving payment for it deliberately failed to make any arrangements for the defence on a false plea that he had not agreed to conduct the defence at the Sessions trial Mr Rangachariar argued that if it should be found that the pleader did undertake to appear for Mnn: in the Sessions Court his default must have been due to forgetfulness on his part as he had arranged for his other cases during his absence. The District Judge was inclined to take this view in his indement in the Civil Sait but this view is absolutely inconsistent not only with the pleader's own contention both in the Civil Suit and at this inquiry but also with the evidence of his brother that he told Muni Reddi on the 14th October 1908 that the pleader had not agreed to defend him at all in the Sessions Court It is very difficult to helicve that a Sessions Caso of so grave a nature in which the ploader had appeared in the Magistrate's Court would have been forgotten In Re Venkata Rao(1) preferred by the pleader against the judgment of the Judge in the Civil case his counsel stated that the pleader might have forgotten the engagement As this was inconsistent with the case that his engagement did not include the Sessions trial Mr Rangachariar was asked to explain the inconsistency and the Court was told that the statement in the memorandum of Civil Revision Petition was made by Counsel without instructions. In the circumstances I am unable to accept the suggestion made as a last resort that forgetfulness might have been the reason for the pleader not arranging for the defence

It is argued for the pleader that even if all the facts are found against him they amount only to negligenco and that the pleader cannot be punished for mere negligence not amounting to fraud than negligenco, nor am I prepared to accept the contention that a pleader who is wilfully and grossly negligent in the discharge of his dutes cannot be punished for his misconduct in the exercise of our disciplinity powers. The pleader was not golly of o mere omission to do his duty in this case. He repodiated the agreement into which he had entered with his client ond ho did so deliberately and without justification. I c moot say that this amounts to anything less than fraudulent conduct on his part.

A passage in Cordery on Solicitors, page 180, was referred to on hehalf of the pleader I do not think that hassage lave down noything more than that it is not oll negligeoco which would furoush o couse of action to a client that would be purished hy the Court Cortainly that is eo For jostanco n pleader may not have acted with sufficient diligence in the discharge of his He may not have jostructed himself in the facts or tho low of a case as he should He may have octed cootrary to the client's instructions in some particular matters, or he may have acted without instructions In such cases the Court would generally be cootest with leaving the chent to his remedy in an action for damages But negligeoce may also be so gross and amount to such a violation of the duties of a pleador as ao other of the Court and to the hugant and as a member of a respossible and honourable profession os to require that the Court should punish him in the exercise of its powers over its officers The rule to be followed has been very recently laid down by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in its judgment in a case in which a rokal of this Court was concorned See the judgment dated 20th Jane 1912 in In the matter of Krishnasicami Aiyar(1) In that case the pleader was acquitted of all direct and personal trund, hut he was found guilty of not exercising any control over his clerks who omitted to discharge their duties and wrote falso letters to the client and misled him, and of a grove omission in not informing the Coort and the client of the true state of things ter he had discovered the improper conduct of his clerks

MENI REDDI the suit This is likely as the case was almost ripe for indement when the transfer was made. If the amount was not paid as fees due for professional work then the payment must have been on account of a half share possessed by the pleader in the claim by virtue of the transfer Vannages, who tries to support the pleader as much as he can is equally mable to show how the amount of Rs 785 10 0 was made up Ho tries to make out that he promised to pay the pleader his fee and a present but he could not give any explanation as to how tho fee would amount to Rs 785 10 0 He admits that that amount was paid to the pleader He says that the interest payable on the loan was 71 annas and not 6 per cent so as to throw doubt on the amount available for division between him and the pleader admits that the profit made out of the transaction was Rs 1,571-4 0 and he also admits that he charged the pleader 8 annay per Rs 100 interest on his whole account including this sum of Rs 4 000 There is absolutely nothing to support his statement that 71 annas and not 6 per cent was the interest payable on the loan In the absence of any explanation forthcoming from the pleader I have no doubt that the Jadge was justified in coming to the conclusion that it was agreed between him and Vannagee that he should receive half the profits arising from the transfer of the claim. It is immaterial to consider whether he became interested in the transfer on the 7th September or only on the 9th The Judge's conclusion is strongly supported by the ovidence of the petitioner's second witness who purchased the claim from Vanuagee Ho states that he negotiated the purchase with the pleader without any reference to Vannagee and that the payment of the consideration was made to the latter at the instance of the former Papayva who does not admit that the pleader had a share in the claim admits that the negotiations for the transfer to Vaunagee took place at the pleader's house

The next question is whether the pleader's act in purchasing the claims amounts to grossly unprofessional inisconduct within the meaning of section 13 of the Legal Practitioners Act claim was then the subject matter of n suit in which the pleader appeared for the plaintiff. giving out that the suit would be dismissed. There can be no doubt that the pluntiffs were apprehensive of failure The pleader on the other hand was in a far better position than his chent to judge of the chances of success. There can be no doubt that the transfer was a highly speculative one. There is no force whatever in the contention that the claim ceased to be an actionable claim because a suit had been instituted for its That fact is absolutely immaterial according enforcement to the definition of actionable claim in section 3 of the Transfer of Property Act The old definition contained in section 130 of Act IV of 1882 and clause (d) of section 185 as it originally stood put this boyond a doubt. Mr Rangachariar, on behalf of the pleader, contends that a purchase of an actionable claim is not necessarily improfessional conduct Mr K Srimvasa Avvangar, who appears on behalf of the Vakils' Association supports this argument I am quite unable to accept this contention Section 136 enacts as follows "No Judge, legal practitioner, or officer connected with any Court of Instice shall buy or traffic in, or stipulate for, or agree to receive, my share of, or interest in any actionable claim, and no Court of Justice shall enforce at his instance, or at the instance of any person claiming by or through him, may actionable claim, so dealt with by him as aforesaid" It does not merely make purchases of actionable claims by the classes of persons named in it nnenforceable in law It expressly prohibits them from being interested in any transfer of an actionable claim. The probibition is based on the ground of the offices held by them I cannot doubt that the doing of an act which a legal practitioner is forbidden to do on the ground that he is a legal practitioner is a vicintion of the conduct that he should pursue as a practitioner and therefore unprofessional conduct. It is urged that the legislature could not have intended to minke the purchase of an actionable claim by a ploader under all circumstances unprofessional conduct, that in other countries there is no such absolute prohibition, that the New York Civil Procedure Code forbids purchases of actionable claims and negotiable instruments only where it is made " with the intention and for the purposes of bringing a suit thereon," and that is the French Civil Code the prohibition is confined to claims falling within the jurisdiction of the Court where the pleader is practising. The language of section 136 of Act IV of 1882 is in my opinion absolutely clear. It is quite immaterial that the Indian Legislature considered it expedient to enact the rule in wider terms than the legislatures of some other countries have done It ber g clear that the pleader's act amounted to professional misconduct, was it grossly unprofessional? I have no doubt that it was I have already referred to the cir cumstances under which the transfer was made First Instance, as a matter of fact, passed a decree for about Rs 11,000 though the amount was reduced to Rs 6 000 and odd in appeal the purchase amounted in this case to trafficking in litigation It is unnecessary to decide the question whether the purchase of an uctionable claim though unprofessional must amount to grossly unprofessional misconduct in every case Undoubtedly tle onus would be on the pleader who purchases an actionable claim to show that in the circumstances of any partioular cause it does not amount to gross misconduct. I think that it would not be improper to hold that pleaders should not be permitted to do acts that are liable to subject them to severe temptation. I am of opinion that this charge has been proved against the pleader Ingree with the learned Chief Justice as to the punishment that should be imposed

The second clarge -The facts relating to this charge are practically undisputed The pleader belongs to a wealthy family possessed of various kinds of properties including landed estates, houses directorships in companies, secretaryship in one company, an agency nuder the Oriental Life Insurance Co, some other trace agencies, shares in Joint Stock Companies and a mill at Bellary known by the name of Medum Seshauna Cotton Manufactory The evidence of Scinivasa Rao, tho pleader's brother, and bimself a pleader, shows that in 1894 the members of the family entered into a partnership fresh partnership deed (Exhibit G) was executed in 1900 According to this deed each member of the firm is authorised to sign the name of the firm, and the partners of the firm are responsible wontly and severally for the acts of the firm as well as for the acts of each partner and for monies reaching the hands of any one of them The pleader states in his written statement "The members of the firm supervised the work of the managers and agents whenever they have lessure and during holidays" He denies that he has engaged himself in trade Mara Repos V Veneata Row SENDARA

In the face of the admitted facts, I am of opinion that the denial is absolutely untenable. It is contended that the actual work of the trade is done by clerks and neents and that therefore the plender cannot be said to be personally carrying on trade I am quite unable to agree that the mere as pointment of servants or agents is sufficient to show that the trude is not carried on personally by the pleader In that case any trader who is able to engage clerks and to dispense with attending to enstomers himself may say that he is not personally engaged in his trade. It is not denied that the agents and managers could be dismissed at pleasure by the pleader and his partners odmission that the members of the firm supervised their work puts an end to all doubt on the matter It is contonded by Mr Rangachariar that a ploader who belongs to a trading family should not be regarded as trading, simply because other members carry on trade the benefit of which would go to all the members of the family including the plouder I agree with him so far It is quite true that every member of an undivided Hindu family cannot be said to be carrying on a trade the benefit of which would go to the family One member of it alone may be carrying on the trade but he may do so with family funds Although as between the members of the family the profit or the less must be shared by all of them, it would not follow that every o 10 of thom is conducting the trade Again two or more monbers may alone carry on a trade as partners and tho outside public may be dealing with their alone though as amongst the members of the family sater se all might be responsible for the results of the trade Bit if all the members enter into a partnership and carry on a family trade as partners then all of them must be regarded as carrying on the trade This is a distinction well understood in law. In the present case the pleader who is the senior member of his family has entered into a partnership with the other member He as much as any other member of the family is trading with the outside public whatever may be the netual amount of work done by him in connection with the management of the trade I lold therefore that the pleader must be held to be personally engaged hoth in trade and in the other businesses referred to in the deed of partnership. It is then argued that carrying on a trade is not

professional misconduct within the meaning of section 13 of the Legal Practitioners' Act and that there is no rule framed by this Court under that Act which has doclared it to be misconduct Clause 27 of the rules framed under the Act is in these terms any person, having been admitted as Pleader, accepts any appointment under Government, becomes a student of any school or college for purposes of pursuing his studies or enters into any trade of other business or accepts employment as a Law Agent other than a Pleader, Mukhtar or Agent certified under Act XVIII of 1879 and these rules, he shall give immediate notice thereof to the High Coort, who may thereupon suspend such Pleader from practice or pass such orders as the said Court may think fit" It is true that engaging in trade or other husiness is not definitely pronounced to be misconduct by this rule According to it the High Court may give permission to any pleader, if it thinks fit to do so, to ongage himself in any particular trade or business A similar rule has been framed under the Letters Patent of the High Court with respect to High Court Vakils although enriously enough no such rule has been framed applicable to advocates and attorneys The pleader was undoubtedly guilty of misconduct in not obtaining the permission of the High Court for carrying on trade or other business has been engaged in trading business of an important olirricter and it was undonbtedly his duty to apply for and obtain the High Court's permission No charge however has been framed. against lum of violating the provisions of clause 27 which requires him to upply for permission to the High Court and I do not think we should find him goilty of misconduct in violating the provisions of this clause without his having an opportunity to explain his conduct But it does not follow from this that he is not guilty of misconduct by being engaged in trade or other business without the permiss on of the Conit, if his doing so is inconsistent with the profession of a pleader Tho inlo onables pleaders to avoid all risk of heing prononoced guilty of misconduct by obtaining the opinion of the High Court with respect to any business they may propose to undertake but the failure to take advantage of the provisions of the rule cannot absolve them from liability to he convicted of misconduct if they act in a manner inconsistent with their profession. It seems to me that there are two reasons why carrying on trade may be inconsistent with the profession of a pleader One reason is that it might prevent MUNI REDDI him from devoting that attention to his work as a pleader which his duty to the public and to the Court require that he should But another and certainly not less important reason is that a pleader should not be permitted to engage himself in any pursuit which is inconsistent with his status as a member of a learned and honourable profession In England every person who wishes to be called to the har has to state that he is not and has never since his admission as a student 'heen engaged in trade and that he is not an undischarged hankrupt" I am not aware that according to the rules of the bar in England a Barrister can be punished for heing engaged in any trade or husiness inconsistent with his being actively engaged in the practice of his profession though there are various offices the holding of which is deemed to be inconsistent with practice as a Barrister. See page 384 of Halshury's Jaws of England, volume II But I strongly believe that carrying on a trade would he deemed to be generally inconsistent with the active practice of the profession of either a Barrister or an attorney To do so may not be in some cases inconsistent with the status itself of a legal practitioner He would prohably not be punished for having been engaged in trade or other business if he was not practising his profession at the same time, although it is probable. I think that there are some trades and businesses which may be regarded as altogether inconsistent with the status of an Advocate However as the rules stand it would be open to this Court to permit any particular trade or business being undertaken hy a pleader There might certainly be some kinds of business which would in no way pe inconsistent with either the status or the active practice of a pleader's profession. There have been instances where engagement even in a trade has also been permitted by this Court although I take it that this would not ordinarily be allowed It may be that there are enterprises which, baving regard to the circumstances of this country, the Court would sunction a pleader actively promoting and devoting a portion of his time to Whether sanction should be given in any case would no doubt largely depend on the character of the trade or business and the extent to which it is likely to occupy the time and attention of the pleader But no pleader can be permitted to derive any advantige by taking the responsibility on himself

VENEATA ROW SUNDARA and engaging in a trade or business without the sanction of the Court If he does so he takes the risk of its being sabsequently held that his conduct amounts to professional misconduct. If permission would not have been given if he had asked for it, he must be held guilty of misconduct in having done that which the Court would not have sanctioned This is the rulo followed where a trustee acts without the sanction of the Court in a matter for which he could have obtained its permission. I do not consider it possible that the Court would have given permission to the pleader in this case to be engaged as e partner of a large cotton mill and in the various other businesses which the pleeder admits to be included in the concerns of the partnership It is, however, possible that he thought, as he says hn did, that masmuch es he would not have to devote much of his time personelly to his work as a partner he was not acting in violation of his daty as a plendor. I am willing to believe that he ected bong fide end without any intention to act contrary to his duty as e professional man I am therefore of opinion that it is sufficient to point out that he acted wrongly and that it is unnecessory to impose any punishment on him for his conduct in this matter

Badraray Nair J

SANKAPAN NAIR, J -I think that Mr Rungacherier is right in his contention that any charge against the pleader must be proved by evidence taken at this enquiry But I do not accent the further contontion that the judgment in the civil suit is admissible in evidence The pleader wes the defendant in that suit It was dicided therein that the plaintiff had paid him his fee to appear for him at the Sessions, that he failed to appear without making any arrangement for the conduct of the case a decree wes passed against him on these findings. The facts found against him must be taken prima facie, to be proved At the same time I think it is open to him to show that the judgment is wrong and should not be accepted as final for the purpose of this enquiry Any evidence which should have been put was not produced in the sur will of course he viewed with grave suspicion Nor is it clear to mo why it is not open to as at this enquiry, to consider whether the judgment is right on tho materials on which it was based. There is no law proventing us from doing so, end I see no injustice in it

I think therefore the Judge is right in allowing the pleader Muni Report to give further evidence On the evidence Exhibit A the receipt given by the pleader to Mini Reddi makes it clear that he was bound to defend him at the Sessions I doubt whether it is open to him to say in this enquiry after giving that receipt unless ho proves my take or some other invalidating circumstance, anything against that recept Because as a pleader it was his duty to grant a proper receipt and not one which is misleading. He has however fulled to prove that he did not agree to appear at the Sessions I do not attach any weight to the other contention that the vikil was not bound to appear as his client owed him a portion of his fee. He has failed to prove that any balance is due

Mr Rangachariar argues that a pleader like Mr. Venkata Rao would not have failed to make some arrangement about his case before going to Rangoon There is great force in this argument Mr Venhata Rao appears to have made arrangements about all other cases The only explanation that suggests it elf to me is that he may have really thought that he was not bound to appear for Muni Reddi at the Sessions. This is supported by the facts that the counterfoil of the receipt kept by nim showed that he was to appear only before the Magistrate and that Srimias Rao told Subba Rao that Mr. Venlata Rao was not engaged to defend Mum Reddi What took place at the meet ing in September between Mani Reddi and the vikil also supports this view I think that Venkata Rao believed that he was not engaged to defend Mani Roddi at the Sessions If he had pleaded in this enquiry after the disposal of the appeal, that he acted in this erroneous but honest belief and tendered a proper apology, speaking for myself, the result might have been different But he has persisted in this enquiry in trying to prove a defence already found false in a civil suit. I agree accordingly to the order which will be pronounced by the Clief Justice

The charge against the pleader Mr Venkata Rao is that he purchased the claim of the plaintiff in Original Suit No 8 of

NAIB, J

1909 on the file of the Suhordmate Judge's Court of Bellary That was a suit brought by Pichavya and Papuya against certain minors for the recovery of a sum of more than Rs 11.000 After evidence had been heard, but before judgment was prononnced one Vannan agreed to purchase the claim of the plaintiffs therein for Rs 4 750 on 7th September 1909. Now, it appears from the evidence of the vendor, who is the prosecution fourth witness in the case, that so far as he is concerned he had nothing to do with Mr Venkata Rao, and that, though the negotiations for the sale took place in Venkata Rao's house, the claim was agreed to he sold to Vannaji who was his client without any consultation with Venlata Rao Vanuari borrowed Rs 4,000 of this amount from the firm of Satraji Dongerchund Anadaji who was examined us a witness for Venkata Rao was a partner in that firm It appears from his evidence, which there is no reason to disbelieve, that when the firm lent Rs 4,000 to Vannau. the amount was debuted against one Bhatan Kheman who was the principal of Vannan, two days later Vannan told his witness that it should have been orbited against him and not against his principal, he refused to do so, then Vannaji got a letter from Mr Venkata Rao asking him to debit that amount against Venkata Rao's account and that was accordingly done Mr Venkata Rao admits having written n letter to the firm asking them to do so. The entry was made by the prosecution first witness and he also gives evidence to the same effect

On the 7th of December, Vannan sold the decree to one Veerabhadrappa Veerabhadrappa was a relative of the defendants in that suit and was naturally interested in them. He says that he heard a rumour that Mr Venkata Rao had purchased that decree and that he spoke to him and arranged to purchase the decree from him, he paid Rs 6,392-8-0 to Venkata Rao and got an assignment of the decree from the original decree holder Pipayi ah who had agreed to sell it to Vannan. The money was actually paid to Vannan as Venkat. Rao directed him to do so. According to this witness he never saw Vannan at all while the negotiations were going on. If the matter had stopped here the case would have been one of suspicion only

But there is the following additional circumstance to be taken into consideration. The entire amount borrowed by Vannan was Rs. 4.750. Now, this with interest at 6 per cent per annum for three months, that is the period between Septem. MUNI REPOR her 7, the date of agreement of sale to Vannagi and December 7, VENEATA the sale of the decree to Veerahhadrappa, would come to Row Rs 4,821-4 0 The difference between the two am unts SANKARIN Rs 6,302-8-0 and Rs 4 21-4-0, .e, Rs 1,571-4-0 is the profit and half of this is Rs 785 10-0

Now, it appears from the evidence and it is admitted that this amount, i.e. Rs 780 10-0, was paid on Venkita Rao's account to his father in law. It is not explained how this particular sum of exactly half of the profits was due to Venkata He gives no explanation, he produces no account to show that this was due to him for any fee There is evidence that the interest payable on the sum of Rs 4000 was at 6 per cent The evidence as to the rate of interest payable on the remaining Rs 750 is discrepant and it is not clear what the real interest was, but there is nothing improbable in their setting apart interest at 6 per cent for three months for the purpose of calculating profits on the transaction. In the absence of any explanation on the part of Venkata Rao the only conclusion that we are justified in drawing is that he received it as his share at the profits of the transaction, and taken with the other circumstances of the case his advancing the money to Vannaji and the facts disclosed by the prosecution second witness whose evidence is strongly corroborated by these two facts, I come to the conclusion that from the 0th September 1909 Venkuta Rao must be treated as a partner with Vannau and equally interested with him in the decree

The quest on then remains for consideration whether this as grossly improper conduct in the discharge of professional duties.

An actionable claim should not be purchased by a pleader and in my opinion the purchase of a claim after suit offends against pullic policy more than the purchase of such a claim before suit. It is tr flicking in hingation and when the wond r is the client of the purchaser the transaction in the milority of cases is likely to be op ressive to the client. In the ca e before ns however, not only no undue a lantage has been taken but Venkata Rao seems to hive acted furly Papayyah offered to accopt Rs 4 000 from Veeral adrapps in full satisfaction of his claim and he got from Vannaji and Venkata Rao Re 4,750 21

Numi Raddi Veneata Row Sankaban Kaib J Firther Venkata Rao did not deal with the client and was not in fact the original purchaser on the 7th — It is also proved that a portion of the interest due to the minor was remitted. As this is the first case of the kind that has come before this Court, a lenient view night have been taken of the case, if he had pleaded good faith and placed before the Court all the facts. He has not chosen that course. I agree to the order which will he pronounced by his Lordship the Chief Justice.

The next charge against Mr Venkata Rao is that he has been trading in cotton and yarn with the other undivided members of his family as partners. That he is a partner with them is proved beyond doubt by Exhibit G. The Company has also bought a spinning infli in Bellary, horrowed money to pay for it and to cover working expenses, it was huying cotton and solling yarn. There are, no doubt, managers and gumastas appointed but Venkata Rao and his brothers do not cease to be persone carrying on trade any the less on that account Holding then, that Venkata Rao and his brothers are traders, the question remains whother he is guilty of any grossly unprofessional conduct. Rule 27 of the rules framed by the High Court under the Legal Priecutioners' Act XVIII of 1879, runs thus—

"If any person, having been admitted as Pleader accepts any appointment under Government, becomes a student of any sel ool or college for purposes of pursuing his studies or enters into any trade or other business or accepts employment as a law Agent other than a Pleader, Mukhtar, or agent certified under Act XVIII of 1879 and these rules, he shall give immediate notice thereof to the High Court, who may thereapon suspend such Pleader from practice or pass such orders as the said Court may think fit

"Provided that when a pleader is appointed by or under the authority of the High Court to the office of District Munsif, whether temporarily or permanently, it shall not be necessary to give the notice prescribed in the first part of this rule, but no Pleader while employed as District Munsif shall be permitted to practice or do any business as a pleader before any Court"

Now it will be noticed that the High Court can take action under this rule only if the pleader who enters into any trade or business gives notice to the High Court Under the rule he is MUNI RECOR I ED SATA Row SANKARAN NAIR J

It may be a question whether any rule even is necessary, because the evil to be guarded against cannot be serious as the sanads of the first grade pleiders have to be renewed ever year and the High Court may refuse a renewal But, in any event, I do not think it necessary that we should take any action under section 13 as against any ple ideas to whom rule 27 is applicable. I am also of opinion that it is difficult now to say generally that a pleader should not eogage in any trade or business. Confining myself now only to vakils they exercise the profession both of the Advocate and the Solicitor and they should not be debaired from performing those functions which a Solicitor is, and a Barrister may not be, entitled to discharge. Many, if not the majority, of the pleaders are members of joint families who are engaged in trades or husiness. It would be an unnecessary interference with them now to declare that such trades or hasi ness are unprofessional. The notion that no trade bowever bonestly carried on is worthy of a vakil is a relic of the times that have passed away, and I should regret its introduction into India

On the facts before us, there is no doubt Mr Venkata Rao has been guilty of a violation of rule 27 in not having reported to the H gh Court his connection with the firm or with the mill But he has not been charged with having violated that rule and we cannot take noy notice of it as he has had no opportunity of making any answer to that charge. The omission to comply with rule 27 by a pleader would probably come under clause (b) It would certainly come under clause (f) If, therefore, a First Grade Pleader omits to make the application which he is bound to submit to the High Court under rule 27, then he may be suspended under section 13 for breach of that rule until he makes the application under that section or any further time the High Court thinks fit If he makes the application under rule 27, then he can be dealt with under that rule Apparently therefore the rule and the section provide adequate remedy for all cases. Whether the pleader should be suspended or should be allowed to carry on a trade under rule 27 depends upon the particular circumstances of each case, the character of the person making the application, the nature of the trade or business, the time that the pleader would have to devote to it There may also arise other considerations. The trade or business may be one which it may be in public interests to foster in that locality and min other than pleaders may not be available perhaps to carry on the trade or business satisfactorily Under this rule applications are being made to the High Court for sanction and they have heen granted or rejected according to the particular circum stances of the case If we law down a definite rule under section 13 of the Act, it would be depriving the Bigh Court of the discretion vested in it by rule 27 for, it is obvious that once a pleader is declared to be disqualified from eng ging u any trade or in any particular kind of tride it would not be right for the High Court to give any sanction under rule 27 to any other pleader applying for t I am not therefore able to say that under section 13, the High Court should declare that it is unprofessional for a pleader to follow any trade or busines . With regard to the charge in connection with the criminal case against Muni Reddi I am unable to accode to Mr Rangachariar's contention that the judgment and evidence in the civil suit against the Pleader, Mr Venkati Rao, is not admissible as evidence against him in the present proceedings. The question in that cuit was the very question which we now have to decide, its, whicher he engaged to defend Muni Reddi in the Sission

I do not think that the decision is conclusive proof against him in the present proceedings, but it has not been treated as conclusive. He has been allowed in the present proceedings to produce further evidence in support of his defence and ho has produced t, and it has been duly considered by the District Judge and by us. There is no suggestion that any ovidence which the pleader wished to adduce in the present proceedings has been shut out. We have not been referred to any autil ority for holding that the judgment is madiussible in the present proceedings are establishing a prima factions of unprofessional conduct against the pleader or for holding that we are precluded from considering whether the judgment is right on the evidence on which it was based, nor do I see any ground in riason why we should treat them as madmissible.

On the merits the evidence and probabilities in all these cases have leen so fully considered in the judgments of the two District Judges and of my learned brothers that I do not think anything would be gaired by my reviewing them afresh I entirely agree with the conclusions at which my learned brothers have arrived

I do not understand how it can be seriously are ied that what the pleader is said to have purchased from the plaintiffs in Original Suit No 3 of 1309 was not 'an actionable claim,' and that there was nothing contrary to law or public policy in his purchasing it, if he did do so and therefore, his doing so was no professional misconduct. The pluntiffs el im had, no doubt been put in action, but that did not render it the less an action able claim" as defined in section 3 of the Transfer of Property The claim was still sub judice Though the case was ripe for judgment no judgment had been given The claim had not become merged in a decree Section 136 of the Tr nefer of Property Act in the most stringent terms declares that Judge legal practitioner or officer connected with any Court of Justice shall buy or traffic in or stipulate for, or agree to receivo, any share of or intere t in any actionable claim' A pleader holds a privile ed position in connection with the administration of austice, and the law impo as on him certain

It is. I think, futile to contend that it is not professional misconduct for a man to do that which the law expressly forbids him to do by reason of the profession which he exercises degree of misconduct will, no doubt, vary with the circomstances of each case, but I cannot doubt that a transaction such as that with which we are now concerned amounts to gross misconduct The pleader who is conducting a case is in a better position than his client to judge of the probability of his success or failure, and the nearer the case is to judgment the greater will be his opportunity for correctly anticipating the event. It may be that when a case is ripe for jodgment there is no longer any temptation to the pleader to conduct the case improperly, but to allow him at that stage to purchase his client'e claim would expose him to a strong temptation to mis represent to his chent his prospects of success and the value of hie claim In the present case the transaction was a highly speculative one evidence shows that the plaintiffs feared their suit would be dismissed, and were willing, at one time, to sell their claim for Rs. 4 000 They, in fact, got a decree for Rs 11,000 in the Original Court, though this was reduced on appeal to Rs 6,000 It is true there is no suggestion that the pleader made any mis representation to his clients in this case, and the plaintiffs were satisfied with the price (Rs 4750) paid to them, but this does not prevent the pleader's purchase of the claim, in defiance of the express provisions of law, from being professional misconduct of a very grave character

It only remains for me to state the decision at which we have arrived as to the penalty we should in pose under section 13 of the Legal Practitioners' Act on Mr Venkata Rio in respect of the charges which have been established against him not plead youth or mexperience in extenuation of it is misconduct. Its gravity his certainly not been lessened by the false defences which he has put forward and maintained throughout in regard to the charges relating to his conduct in connection with the criminal case against Mani Reddi, and in purchasing his own chant's claim in Original Suit No. 3 of 1909 in the Subordinate Judge's Court We do not think that a more warning or consure would suffice to mark our sense of the gravity of his misconduct in either of those cases. We think that we are required to impose a penalty of a substantial period of suspension in each case. We accordingly direct that Mr. K. Venkata Rao be suspended from the exercise of his profession as a pleader for six months and three months on account of his misconduct in regard to these two cases respectively, the two periods to run

We do not think it necessary to impose any penalty in connection with the charge against him for engaging in trade. VRIDHACHALA REDDI AND ANOTHER (SECOND PLAINTIFF AND FIRST DRIFFDANZ), RESPONDENTS *

Estoppel by judgment-Equitable estoppel-Res judicata-Indemnity contract of
-- Breach-Decres against promises is binding on promiser.

The second defendant undertook to pay interest on certain debts of the plaintiff and in difault, agreed to indomnify the plaintiff against all losses caused thereby. The second defendant baving defaulted, the creditor recovered indigment both for principal and interest on the debty, in a suit to which the plaintiff and second defendant were parties the court finding that second defendant were parties the court finding that second defendant with a fine the plaintiff for recovery of damages against the second defendant, on account of the latters default in payment of the stipulated interest, the second defendant again pleaded natures.

Held that whichier the technical rule of res judicate was applicable or not, the second defendant was equitably estopped, by reason of the finding in the previous suit from reasing the contention that he had really paid the interest date to the creditor

Wi ere there is a contract to indemnify, a decree passed against the promises esmost be impeasibled by the promiser and if both the promises and the premiser were parties to the suit by the third party, or if the promiser had notice of the suit, the indement would be conclusive against the promiser.

The contract on the part of the promeor is substantially broken when the court finds in a suit honeatly defended by the promises, that there has been a violation of duty by the promises, which has entitled a third party to the demage for which the indemnity has been given

SECOND APPEAL against the decree of E. L. R. Thornton, the District Jadge of Trichinopoly, in Appeal No. 18 of 1909, dated the lat day of November 1909, presented against the decree of C. Subrahmama Atyar, the District Munsif of Kuhttalai, in Original Suit No. 720 of 1903

The facts of the case appear sufficiently from the judgment.

The Honourable Mr. T V Seshagus Ayyar for the appellant N. Rajagopalachariar for the first respondent.

JUDGURNT —The question raised in this case is one of some importance. The second defendant had agreed, while the plaintiff was a minor, to manage the plaintiff properties and to hand over possession to him after his attainment of majority. One of the duties that the second defendant undertook to perform was the payment of interest due on the debts. Ho did not pay the interest on one of the debts and in consequence the creditor instituted a suit (Original Suit No 521 of 1897) in the Kulitalia District Munist's Court. The plaintiff and the second defendant were both parties to that sait, the second defendant being the third defendant there. He contended in that suit that he had paid up the interest, but failed to adduce ovidence to prove his contention. The plaintiff subsequently paid the amount to the creditor, and instituted this suit to recover the damages sustained by him in consequence of the second defendant's tailure to pay

The Lower Appellato Court has held that the second defendant is bound by the finding in Original Suit No 521 of 1897, and cannot now be permitted to allege or prove that, as a matter of fact, the interest due to the cieditor had been discharged by him prior to the provious suit. Mr. Seshagiri Ayyar contends that the rule of res sudicata is not applicable to the case as the plaintiff and the second defendant were co defendints in the previous suit and as it was not necessary to determine the question as hetneen them to give relief to the plaintiff there We consider it unnecessary to determine whether the case would really come strictly within the rule of res sudicata as we have no donht that the second defendant must be held to be equitably estopped from raising the contention that he had really paid the interest due to the creditor He, as co-defendant in the provious suit, had an oppurtunity to prove it. It was his duty to do so in order to prevent a decree being passed against the He failed to do so He had undertaken to plaintiff bere indemnify the plaintiff if, in consequence of the breach of the covenant or his part to pay the interest on debts, the plaintiff was put to any loss Owing to his fulare to adduce evidence a decree was passed against the plaintiff and he was obliged to pay the creditor It would be manstrous in the circumstances to allow the second defendant now to do that which by his fulure to do before he put the plaintiff to loss. The case of the plaintiff however might be put even on breader grounds than in the circumstances it is necessary to do It has been held by both the English and American courts that, where there is a AYYAR AND PHILLIPS J. Couttact to indemnify, if a decree has been passed against the person entitled to indemnity, the correctness of that decree cannot be impeached by the person bound to indemnify The contract of indemnity might no doubt strictly he said to require that it should be proved that the indemnifier acted in violation of his duty, as well as that his act caused loss to the party entitled to indemnity But the courts have held, and we think rightly, if we may say so, that the contract is substantially broken when the court has found in a suit honestly defended by the purty entitled to indemnity that there has been a violation of duty by the indemnifier which has entitled a third party to the damages for which the indomnity has been given further been held that, if both the indemnifier and the purty entitled to indemnity were parties to the action by the third party, as in this case, or if the indemnifier had notice given to him of the anit against the party entitled to the indemnity, the judgment would be conclusive against the indemnifier even as an individuation by court Whether the technical doctrine of res judicata is implicable or not, there can be no donbt that the second defendant must be hold to be estopped from contending that the debt was discharged It is nanecessary to refer to the authorities at length

> In Goundarazulu Narzsımham v Devarabhotla Venkatanarasayya(1), it was held that n sale of land belonging to a joint family of Brahmins to defray the expenses of the marriage of one of its male members cannot he said to have been made for family necessity and is therefore not binding on the other members of the family This decision has been dissented from in Sundrabar v Shevnarayana(2) and its correctness has been doubted in the judgment of this Court in Kamesuara Sastri v Veeracharlu(3) In both of these cases the matter is fully discussed. There is, however, a suggestion in the last-mentioned ruling and in a later Judgment in Malayands Gounder v Subbaraya Vanasaraya Gounder(4) that a distinction might perhaps he drawn hetween the case of Sudras and that of the three twice born castes though the judgments of CHANDAVAKAR, J, in Sundrabas v Shevn trayana(2) and of KRISHNASWAHI ATTAR, J, in Kameswara Sastri v Veeracharlu(3) show that regarding the question from the point of view of religious ceremonial it may be said that there is a greater necessity for marriage among the Sudras than among the higher castes, the Bombay ruling clearly holds that there is no difference in the law in the two cases and that is also the inclination of opinion as expressed in Kameswara Sastri v Veeracharlu(3) for a declaration that two sales made by the widow of the last owner, the first defendant in the smit, to the second and third defendants respectively are not valid beyond the life-time of the widow. The sales were admittedly made for the discharge of the widow's hinsband's debts. The attack against them was based on the ground that the prices settled for the sales were very inadequate. Both the Lower Courts have dismissed the was partly rested on the ground that the plaintiff did not ask that the Court should put the vendeo (alience) in the same posttion as if he had obtained a mortgage for the amount which was binding on the reversioner This suggests that the Court might declare the sale invalid but at the same time declare that the vendee has a charge for the portion of the consideration paid by him which is binding on the reversioner Sir Barnes Peacock no doubt points out that a declaration that a reversioner may obtain possession on the death of the widow on condition of paying a certain sum of money ought not to be made because the plaintiff who institutes a suit for declaring an alienation involid may not sarvive the widow and it would be optional with the netual reversioner who becomes entitled to the estate on the widow's death to recover possession or not, but as already observed this inconvenience orising from the foot that the plaintiff mov not be the octuol reversioner who succeeds the widow exists equally whether the decree is one altogether setting saids or upholding o sale or one prononning it invalid os a sale but declaring a charge in favour of the alience. The law as to declaratory suits nos not the same when Phool Chund Lall v Rughoobuns Suhaye(1), was decided as it has been after the enactment of the Specific Relief Act And the decision in that case therefore, caunot safely be relied on in cases orising under the present Act In Mahomed Shunsool v Shounkram(2), where a person having a reversion sued to set aside o sale made by a life- wner, their Lordships of the Privy Council felt no difficulty in passing a decree that on the death of the life-owner the plaintiff would be entitled to possession on payment of portion of consideration for the sale which was binding on him Their Lordships did not decido whether the estate would on the death of the life-owner pass to any one as the owner of a vested reversion or to the person entitled to succeed under Handa Law as reversioner on the termination of the his estate. That decision thousfore would be authority for the position that even if the reversioner has no vested interest, a decree might be presed that the reversioner would be outsiled to possession of the property after the death of the life owner on his complying with certain Whatever that may be, it is lifficult having regards

ABBUB BAHIM AN PENCER

JUDGUENT -The District Munsif has found on the third issue that the appellants (defendants Noe 2 and 3) had no occupancy rights and, although the Subordinate Judge has not recorded any exprese finding on this point, it is clear from his judgment that he regarded the relations in which the parties stood, as precluding any independent right of occupancy existing in these appellants. We think that Exhibits C and II show that the District Munsif's conclusion on this issue was correct It was contended for the appollante that the (first respondent's) plaintiff'e title having been determined before suit by expiry of his lease deed he was not entitled to obtain a decree of ejectment against the appollants, but we think that the expiration of his lease deed does not necessarily imply the expiration of his right of possession and as nguist parties who are in no better position than trespassers he is ontitled to a decree [vide Gibbins v. Buckland(1) and Knight v Clarle(2)].

We may ned that the handlord, who is the first defendant, acquiesces in the plaintiff getting a decree and it has been shown that the appellants are not in a position to resist the landlorn's right. This Second Appel is discussed with costs (one set).

A suit for money is a suit relating to the property of a ward within the meaning of sub-section 1 of section 49 of (Madras Act) for 1902 (Vadras Court of Wards Act) and requires a notice of suit under that section

A more demand for payment is not a notice of suit.

Suit upon a promissory-note egainst a ward under the Court of Wards.

White, C.J.—One of the points first raised in this appeal white, C.J. is not altogether free from difficulty, but as we have made up our minds about it, we do not think anything is to be gained by further consideration. The two points which have been raised by Mr. Govindaraghava Ayyar on bohalf of the appellantarise under the second issue in the case, viz, whether the second definidant, the Collector, wis entitled to notice of suit under section 49 of Madrias Act I of 1902 and if so, was a valid notice served on him. Section 49 is in these terms "Ao suit relating to the person or property of any ward shall be metitated in any civil coart until VENKATAthe expiration of two months after notice in writing has been delivered to or left at the office of the District Collector specified Row NAIDU in the notification under section 19 or the Collector appointed under section 46, as the case may be " M1 Govindaraghava Ayyar has argued first that no notice is necessary and secondly, if notice was necessary, the notice which the evidence shows was given in this case was sufficient As regards the first point, the question turns on the construction of the words "No suit relating to the person or property of any ward shall he instituted, etc," and the question we have to consider is what is the meaning of the words "rolating to the person or property of any ward" for the purpose of the section Mr Govindaraghava Ayyar has pointed out that the words are 'relating to the person or property" and not "affecting or which may affect the person or property" of a ward The suit before us ie a money suit, a claim on a promissory note, in which it was sought to make the ward or the estate of the ward liable There can be no question that if the plaintiff succeeds in this suit the ostata of the ward will he affected because axecution will have to go a_ainst the estate But the words are not "affecting" hut "relating to " It is quito clear if we adopt Mr Govinda raghava Ayyar's construction we shall have to exclude from the scope of the section every money suit, because such a smt according to him, though the result may affect the estate, Bat a suit for money in does not relate to the estate which a decree may be realised in exacution against the estate of the ward seems as much within the mischief of tha section as a smit relating to the specific property of any ward which according to Mr Govindarighava Ayyar is what the legislature meant According to Mr Govindarighava Ajjar so far as I can see the suits which come within the section would be limited to mortgago suits and ejectment suits. However that may be, a suit for money would certainly be excluded from tho operation of the section On the other hand, the construction which Dr Swami-

n dhan on behalf of the respondent contends as the right It is difficult to doubt leads to this construction think of a suit against a ward which does not relate to the person or property of the ward, and that heing so, his construction to a great extent, if not entirely, renders the VRYKATAwords "relating to the person or property of any ward " super- CHELAPATRY fluous or meaningless and section might as well well run "no Be RAJAN BY SIVA suit against a ward shall be instituted in any Civil Court" Bow VALDU Dr. Swammadhan suggests, and there is some force in the suggestion, that the words "relating to the person or property" WHITE, C.J. were adopted as a compendious form of expression having regard to the general scheme and scope of the Court of Wards Act which gives protection to the person and property of the ward The conclusion I have come to, although the point is not altogether free from doubt, is that the learned Judge is right in the construction which he adopted that a suit for money is a suit relating to the property of a ward within the meaning of sub-section (1) of section 49 of the Madras Act I of 1902

Our attention has been called to a few authorities. I do not think that the decision in Sri Venkatachallapathy Sahaya Vivarasaya Company v Kanalasabapathia Pillai(1) to which Mr Govinda aghava Ayyar called our attention helps him much That was a case in which a question as to the construction of the words "relating to trust" within the meaning of article 18 of the schedule II to the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act arose. and it was there held that the suit in that case was not a suit relating to a trust A case which is more in point is an English case -In re Staines(2) The question those was with reference to the construction of Order LI, rule 1 of the English Rules of the Supreme Court That rule provides that if in any cause or matter relating to any real estate it appears necessary that the real estate should be sold the Court or a Judge may order the same to be sold The question was whether the "cause or matter" in question related to real estate. The iction was by the next friend of an infant claiming an account of the personal estate and rents and profits of the real estate North, J , held that that was not a cause or matter relating to real estate. He said it was really an action for the recovery of rents and profits and that the Court had no power to sell an infant's real estate merely because it thought it would be for his benefit that it should be sold The words of Order LI, rule 1 are "atlatus to real estate" Here the expression is much wider "relating to person or property " The property may he real or personal. As has been pointed out the legislature could not have adopted wider or more comprehensive words than "relating to" and I am of opinion that the words "relating to the person or property" are wide enough to include a case in which a claim for money is made against a ward.

The second point I can dispose of very shortly. Here again I think the learned Judge was right. It seems to me that neither Exhibit E read alone nor Exhibit E read by the light of the other documents and the other facts proved or odmitted can be said to constitute a notice of suit for the purpose of section 49 of Madras Act I of 1902. They all come to nothing more than a domand and cannot he said to amount to a notice of suit-That being so it is really unnecessary to consider whether the notice was bad on the further ground that it was not delivered to or left at the office of the District Collector and it is not necessary to consider whether in a case where the evidence shows that notice was given to the manager and brought to the knowledge of the Collector it is enough for the purpose of the section.

On both the points I think the learned Judge was right and I diamiss the appeal with costs, one act to first respondent and

MILLER, J -The plaintiff and the first defendant are both Miller, J widowe of the father of the last male owner of the property in dispute and they are both step-mother, of the last male owner, and the question is whether the plaintiff has any right to share in the property in dispute which has been conveyed to the first defendant by certain persons who alleged themselves to be the sons of the grand father of the last male owner. The question so for as it turns on Hindu Law is whether a stepmother is entitled to succeed in any circumstance to the property of her step son and it has divided itself practically into two parts in this Court first whether she should not be given a right to succeed as being in the class of gotiage sepindes and secondly whether, even if she has no right is a member of that class, still she is a signida within the meaning of thit term in the Mitakshara and should be allowed to succeed before the Cr wn at any rate, as a relation though not as a gotrija sapinda his opening Mr Se highri Avan suggested but he did not press the contention that the tip m ther should be allowed to succeed as being equivalent or next deort them ther I think it is clear that that contention cann t succeed in the face of the decisions of this and the other High C uits. The contents is which he and press then was that as a _otran sapinda she ought to be allowed to succeed. It seems to me that that question has been decided against him by a Full Bench of this Court in Mars v

SEETHAL NACHIAR. MILLER J

Chinnammal(1) It is suggested that we should treat that case as mercly deciding that the step-mother is to be postponed to the paternal uncle, but it seems to me that there is nothing in that case either in the judgment of Sir Charles Turner, CJ. or in the judgment of Muttuswami Ayyan, J which suggests that they had in mind the nocessity of deciding any question other than whether the step mother is in the line of heirs at all Perhips I am wrong in saying that it is not suggested because the learned Chief Justice does suggest the question, whether if sho is in the line of heirs she is not postponed to the paternal But the decision of the matter did not proceed upon any preference of a male sapinda to a female sapinda except in this souse that female sapinday unless they are nimed in the text of the Mitakshara are excluded altogether That, I think, is what Mari v Chimammal(1) clearly lays down No doubt both the Chief Justice who spoke for the majority and MUTTUSWAMI AYYAR, J who agroed with him, though perhaps on slightly different grounds both those learned Judges took it that the step-mother was a sapinda within the meaning of that term as defined in the Mitchshara, but they do not base their decision excluding her from inheritance on the ground that, though a sapinda, she must be postponed to the paternal uncle, they listinctly exclude her altogether and not merely postpone her That is clear from the judgment of both the learned Judges " The claim of the step mother as a gotraja sapinda" (that is her right to succeed in that espacity) says the learned Chief Justice "has not been in my judgment ostablished and" (for that reason) "the claim of the paternal uncle must be allowed" not that she might come in if the paternal ancle were not a preferential hear, but that hor claim as gotraja sapinda had not been established And MUTTUSWAMI AYYAR, J. says " Phough I entertum no doubt that she is a getraia sapinda in the Mitakshara sense of sapinda relationship. I do not think that all female sapindas are recognised to be heirs to this Presidency", and then he gives certain instances and he suggests that if usage were in fivour of the step mother's claim he could not say that the Mitakshara actually declared against its legality, but he is not inclined to depart on that ground from the course of decisions upon the point. The result seems to be that the case we are asked to decide here has been decided by a Full Bench of this Court and that decision is clearly hinding on us, and I for one am quite content to follow it and am not disposed to question it now. I therefore take it that it has been decided, so far us this Court can decide it, that the step mother is not to be allowed to inherit to her step-son as goten a sapinda.

Then I come to the second point which Mr Seshagiri Avvar raised, that is, whether she should not be allowed to succeed as a relation. Now it is very difficult for mo to find any place in the scheme of succession laid down by the Mitakshara for relations who are not either those enecially named or gotrajas or No doubt there is a passage in Kutti Ammal v. handhus Radakrisina Aryan(1), which has been relied upon and which is criticised in Jogdamba Koer v Secretary of State for India in Council(2), which might suggest that the learned Judges there considered that all relatives however remote, whether they he samindas or handhus or not, have to be exhausted before the estate, can pass to the Crown. The passage might suggest that, but the decision in that case has been explained in this Court to be that a siste was there allowed to succeed as being a bundhu and. as has been pointed out in Lakshmanammal v Turuvengada(3). it does not necessarily follow from this passage that the loarned unders who decided Kutts Annual v Radakristna Asvan(1) intended to suggest that there were other classes of hears who were not in any of the classes mentioned in the Mitakshara There is undonhtedly a passage in Gridhars Lall Roy v The Bengal Government(4), which lends support to the contention of the appellant Taking a passage in the Viramitradaya as reading that "maternal uncles and the rest" must be comprehended nuder the term bandhus as otherwise they would be omitted and their sons would be entitled to inherit and after them they themselves. which would be objectionable, their Lordships say that if that he the correct reading, it would follow that even if the maternal unck and others who are not mentioned in the text of the Mitakshara relied upon were excluded from the list of bandhus, that is to say, as I nuderstand it, are not bandhus, still according to the Viramitradaya they would inherit after the ban lhu But in that case it was not dicaded whether it should be taken to be the law that persons who cannot be classed as hiedhus but were still relations could succeed after them Their Lordships 83y, "1t 13, , unnecessary to consider whether the title of any remote relation who could not be brought within the category of Bandoos or other class of hens specified by the Mitacshara would prevail against that of the Crowa," and they held in the case before them that the maternal nocle of the father was a handhu of the father and as such entitled to inherit as a bandhu Therefore though that observation as to the construction of the passago in the Viramitradaya cortainly does suggest that their Lordships were proposed if accessory, to consider the question whether there might not be relatives who might succeed though they were not bandhos, that ease d or not decide that there was any such class of persons to be really found. I think it is very difficult as I said at the outset to find a place for any such class The stop nother is certainly not a bandhu. If she comes in at all she must come in as getrage sapuid, it is difficult to suggest where she comes, wh ther after all the sapin las or after the Samau dal as or after all the males getrages and bandhus as one class or otherwise

The only other authority which has been eited to us is suggesting that there may be relatives who are not bradhas is Sandran mal v Ringarams Mudaltar(1), in which there is an observation. That has been explained in a later case Venkatasubramanam Chills v Ihayarammah(2), where the lorined Indges point out that the same Judges who speak in Sandrammal v Rangasims Mudaltar(1), of the distorts a dighter as not being a bhimat gottr sapinal is have sub-equently in a other case reported in the same volume Balamma v Pullayua(3), and that the sister is admitted on the ground that here is been easiered a bhimat gottry aspinal is of that that even such has been explained in later decisions of this court does not afford any authority for the proposition that there is a class of relatives who are not bandhus or gotrija sapindas who can inherit The case I have referred to-Gridari Lall hoy v The Bengal Government(1), and the cases in this court which have admitted certain femule classes to inherit as baudhus do not go further than this. that the list of bandhus as given in the Mitakshara is not exhaustive, and that others who can be brought within the class of bhinnagotra sipind is may be allowed to inherit as bandhus. That being the state of the authorities I certainly am not prepared to set up a different view that there may be another class of relations who are entitled to inherit There is no suggestion of that to my mind in the text of the Mitakshaia, laying down that in the absence of bandhus certain strangers can inherit-a text supported by a citation from the work of Apastamba to the effect that in the absence of male issue the nearest kinsman is entitled to succeed and it there are no kindred, strangers can inherit it has been argued before as that there is something in that text which suggests that there may be persons who are kindred who are not either bandhus or sapindas or any of the special heirs described in the Opening of chapter II, section 2, of the Mitakshara But the text of Apastambas, we are told, relates to the nearest sapunda and whether that is so or not, whether the text distinctly refers to sapindas or not, there is no reason that I can see why we should in order to arrive at a proper interpretation of the term kindled in the text of Apastamba go outside those classes of persons wto are mentioned as heirs by the Mitakshara No other text has been cited nor any other documen of this Court, I think which warrants the bringing in of relatives who are not handhus. And there is no case that I know of in the other High Courts which warrants it On the other hand in Jogdamba Koer v Secretary of State jor India in Council(2), it has been held that the brother's widow who is also a gotraja sapinda is not entitled to succeed in preference to the Crown I hold then that so far as the Manakshara Law goes and apart from usage the step mother is not in the line of heirs at all and if it were necessary to decide the point I should say that the property goes to the Crown in preference to her

SEETHAI V. NACHIAR, MILLER, J.

Then a question of res judicata was raised on behalf of the respondent on the ground that in a former suit a person alleging himself to be a nearer relation of the last male holder than the vendors of the present first defendant preferred a claim to the possession of the property now in question. The present plaintiff was the first defendant in the suit and the present first defendant was the second defendant therein, and the present plaintiff alleged that there were no dayades of the last male holder entitled to succeed before her. The only finding in that judgment, as I understand that passage in the judgment, is that the plaintiff in that suit was not so near a relative of the last male holder as the vendor of the present first defendant No doubt the Subordinate Judge in that case does say that the present first defendant's vendors were the nearest legal herre, but I do not think that by saying so he intended to decide anything which was really in any way in questinu between the first two defend-He doss not discuss that in his judgment or decide it expressly and it was not necessary for him to decide that in order to dispose of that suit. Consequently I am of opinion that there is no bar by that suit.

Then the Lower Court was asked shortly before disposing of the case, after the first hearing and after the issues were settled to frame two new issues, one as to estoppel and the other as to the custom of the caste. As to estoppel I do not think there is any real ground for such in issue and the Sabordinate Judge was right in not allowing it to be raised.

As to custom no doubt what was asked for was an issue as to the custom of the Presidency. The polition runs "moreover according to the custom prevailing in the Presidency the step-mother is also betraceording to Hudu Law." Really that does not suggest that the plaintiff was referring to any special caste custom. But I ammot clear that we ought on that ground to refuse to sllow the issue to be raised. It ought modulit to have been presented in the pleadings or at the first hearing, but it was actually presented before the ordence was taken, before anything more had been done than the settle issues and set down the case for argument on the preliminary issue of law. In those circumstance I am disposed to allow the plaintiff to raise a special issue, viz. "whether according to the usage of the eastin to which she and the first defendant belong the step-inother is entitled to inherit to her step son" I would ask the Subordinate Judge to take the evidence that may be addreed upon that assue and return a finding to this Court within a period of two months. If the finding is in the affirmative that is if by usage the step mother is cutilled to succeed, the Subordinate Judge will also return a finding on the two following issues (1) Are Rangasami Chetti and Vasudevan Chetti mentioned in paragrabi 3 of the first defendants written statement hors of Ramasami Chetti the plaintiff's step son aid (2) it so, is the plaintiff by virtue of the usage established entitled to succeed in preference to them.

The facts of the case are set out in the judgment

T R Ramachandru Ayyar and P. Elayalwar Ayyangur for the appellant

The Honourable Mr. L. A Govandaraghaga Ayyar for the first and the second respondents.

JUDGMENT —The suit ont of which this Second Appeal arises was brought by the mother and brother of one Manklammil (decased) to recover, with mesne profits, curtain lands belonging to her, which are now in the possession of first defendant, who is the widow of Munkkammal's highard's brother.

It may be premised that both Manikk iminal's husband and his brother (first defendant's husband) predeceed Manikkammal and that the bindings of the lower courts, (a) that the property was of the briting of stridinian and (b) that Manikkammal's marriage was in an approved term are not now conjusted.

The District Munsif dismissed the suit on the ground that hirst defendant was the proper here to the suit property but the District dudge found (1) that hirst defendant was not no here it all, (2) that second plaintiff was in the line of succession and (3) that in the absence of any allegation in defendants' written statement of the existence of a neater here, second plaintiff was ontitled to succeed. He necondingly gava a decrea for possession of the set lances, though without means probins, which were not proved.

All the above points (and no others) have been argued

As regards the first point the principal governing succession to the stridmanam of A thinds female, married according to an orthodox term and dying without issue, have been considered in a very recent judgment of this Gourt to which one of us was a party Marja Pillai v Shabayjalhach(1). It was hold that such property devolved on his high und and, finling her husband, on his sapurdas in the order land down in the Mitakshara with Kananannah reservence to the succession to the property of a male. No authority has been quoted for the suggestions of the learned vakil for MATRI ANNAL. appellant that the term sapinda in Mitalshara, chapter II, section White, C J. II. blac. II, should be understood in a different sense to that in which it would be used in reference to inheritance from a male; and applying this test to the case beinge us, we must hold that first defendant cannot be recognised as an heir.

A brother's widow is no doubt a gotraja sepinda but it does not follow that she is intitled to succeed as an heir, and as a fact under the Madras system of inheritance she is not

This is clearly laid down in Balamma v Pullayya(1) "The law as settled in this Presidency is that a widow can only succeed to her husband's property which was actually vested in him cirlies in title or in possession at the time of his death. As observed by Mr Mayne, she mustiale at (once at her husband's) his death, or not at all No such right can accrue to her as widow in consequence of the subsequent death of any one to whom her husband would have been heir if he had lived "

Neither of the cases quoted by appollint's vakil Mary v. Chinnammal(2) and Venkatasubiamamam Chelis , Thuyarammah(d) are in any way opposed to this. The former indeed contains a specific expression of the same opinion (vide page 129, MULTUSWAMI ALYAR, J., The latter accompases the claims of a husband's brother s daughter (not wife) to succeed as a baudhu to a women's stridhanam .- a totally different case l'assing to the accord point, it is argued on behalf of the appellant, that on failure of husband's capindas qualified to succeed the line of succession is exhausted, and the property escheats to the state.

this is a doctrine contrary to the general spirit of Hinda law of unherstance, and one to which we should be loth to give effect. It is unsupported by any text to which our attention has been drawn No rubne has been quoted on either side, but Dr. Banucijee in his Hindu Law of Marriage and Studhanam discusses the point, and comes to the conclusion that the widow's blood relations would, at any rate, succeed to the Kanakamal exclusion of the Crown (see page 378) The same view is Analytic. deducible from 'West and Buhler," page 544 and we concur natural and to in the

White, C J AND Sankaban Nair, J

It may be remarked here it at although there is no contest between the two plaintiffs, the learned District Judge is in error in giving the decree in favour of second plaintiff. As remarked by Dr. Bannerjee in the passage quoted above, the mother (first plaintiff) and not the brother, is the preferential heir and respondent's wakit agrees that the decree must be modified in this respect

There remains only the third point, regarding which the District Judge appears to us to be in error. On the findings indicated above first defendant is in the position of a more trespasser but it is none the less necessary for plaintiffs, who seek to out her, to prove then own title. Her failure to plead a justarita does not absolve them of this duty. We must therefore call for a finding on the following issue.

At the time of the death of Manikkammal were plaintiffs the nearest heire to her?

Fresh evidence may be adduced by either side—the finding should be submitted in air weeks and seven days will be allowed for filing objections

In compliance with the above order, the District Judge of North Arcot submitted the following

FINDING -I have been directed to return a finding on the following issue "Whether at the time of the death of Manikkammal, plaintiffs were the nearest heirs to her?"

Three witnesses were examined on heh ilf of the first defendant (appellant to the High Court) The plaintiffs (respondents to the High Court) did not appear in person and were not represented hy a vakil It appears from the ovidence of the witnessee examined before me that one Yesotha Numar the father in law of first defendant and the deceased Manikkammal had an alder brother named Santhinatha Namar who is dead | The latter had a son Appasami Namar who died leaving him surviving two sons Yesotha Namar and Santhinetha Namai who are alive The father of Yesotha Namai (first defendant a father in law) had a vonuger brother named Santhuatha Namar who is dead It is stated that he had four sons who are now living. Their names are Appachi Nunar, Ananthanatha Namar, Lok pala Namer and Jonathos Samar Plaintiffs in the suit are respectively the mother and brother of the deceased Manikkammal The evidence of the witnes es examined before me appears to be trustworthy and is not contradicted I would therefore return a finding that the plaintiffs were not the nearest heirs to the deceased Manikkammal at the time of her death and her nearest heirs were her husband's dayadis Yesoda Namer, Santhi natha Namar Appachi Namai, Ananthanatha Namar Lokapala Namar and Jenathos Namar The two former appear to be the nearest hears being the grand sons of Manikkammal shusband's father's brother

RABIN, J

The Government plender Mr C I Napier for the respondent ABDUR RADIUS,—In this case the plaintiff sucd the Secretary of State asking for a decree declaring his title to a house site in a certain village, for recovering a certain sum of money which had been levied from him as penal assessment and for a perpetual injunction restraining the defondant from levying any such assessment on the lands in question. The defondant's case was that the land dishalmentha being what is called Potter's Inain, and does not belong to the plaintiff and that on that ground the defondant was entitled to collect penal assessment from the plaintiff.

Both the lower coarts, on a coasideration of the evidence, have found that the plaintiff did not succeed in proving the ownership of the land. It is found however at the same time that the plaintiff is in possession of the land and has been so for about three years He is in posse sion under two documents of title derived from two persons, Venkatasami and Subirayudu, one of whom at least was in possession of the land. There is no finding by either court as to whether the had is Ashahrengha or Potter's Inam or not They thought that mass ach as the plaintiff failed to prove the title of his vendors the suit must be distaissed. In my opinion that would not le sufficient to conclude this suit. It is found that the plaintiff is in possession of the land and we tany tole it that he is in no sersion under a prima faces title derived fro a persons in possession of the land. That being so, if the defendant failed to prove that the land was an Ashalmenaha or Potter's Inam and he had a legal title to it the plaintiff would be entitled at least to the declaration that he is in lawful possession of the land to use the language of the Privy Council in Ismail Iriff v Mahomed Ghous(1) It is contended however by the learned pleader who appeared for the respondent that mere possession is not sufficient to found a declaration of title, and in support of this he cited Hanmantran v Secretary of State fr In ha(2) and Rassonada Rayar v Sitharama Pillai(3) The ruling in Hannantrav v

SECRETARY OF STATE ABDITE RABIN J

Secretary of State for India(1) does oot, it seems to me, support the contention of the respondent. All that is laid down there is that if the possession is showe to be wrongful, tl en the plaintiff woold not be entitled to a declaration of title But bere it cano ot be said upon the findings as they now stand that the plaintiff's possession is wrongful. It is not necessary to discuss Russoonada Rayar v Sitharama Pillat(2), because in my opinion the subsequent judgment of the Privy Conneil in Ismail Ariff v Haho ned Ghous(8) is quite clear and conclusive on the point I way observe that at first I was joclined to entertain some doubt as to whether in a case where the defendant has not actually dispossesed the plaintiff, the plaintiff would be entitled to a declaration of his title on the strength merely of possossion not extending over the statutors period But it seems that the decision of the Privy Council at least goes to the extent that, if the plaintiff has been in possession even though for less than 12 years, be would under section 42 of the Specific Rollef Act be entitled to a declaration that he is in lawful possession as against a wrong door who sought to interfere with his possession The levying of poorl assessment on the land, if it was not justified, would amount to nolawful interference with the plaintiff's po sussion

Then apart from the question whether the plaintiff is cotifled to a declaration in the terms asked for by him, it seems to me to be clear that, if the land is not slown to be communal land, tho Secretary of State would have on right to collect penal assessmeet from a person to pos ession thereof simply on the ground that he is not the legal owner of the land, but somebody else It thus becomes necessary that we should have a finding on the question whether the land to dispute is Asl almenaha land or not The finding must be on the ovidence on record. The finding will be submitted within three months from the date of this order and 10 days will be allowed for filing objections not prepared to differ On the other hand it seems to me cle if ATTAPARAJI that for the disposal of the second and third of the plaint players the findings are defective. The right of the Government to levy penal assessments is conditional on the land being communal or, as it is here described Achalmenaha, and the learned Sabordinate Judge seems to have overlooked the fact that, although the planntiff may not have established his title to the suit land, he may nevertheless claim immunity from penal assessment thereon unless the land is Ashalmengha There is no finding as to this and a finding on this point indicated by my learned brother becomes necessary

SECRETARY OF STATE AYEING, J

In compliance with the order continued in the above judgment, the Subordinate Judge of Kistor at Ellore submitted the following

FINDING .- I am directed to submit my unding on theevidence on record on the following issue -

Whether the land in dispute is Ashalmengha land or not P

The suit site is situated in the villigo of Vandiem. It is deposed to by plaintiff's witnesses Nos 1 to 4 and admitted by defendant's witnesses Nos 11 and 15 that the suit sitelies in the middle of the village surrounded by houses. The defendant s witnesses Nos 1 to 10 are admittedly residents of other villages who do not know anything about the suit site. The defendant's witness No 12 only speaks to his attestition of a certain mortgage document. The only material evidence is that of defendant's witnesses Nos 11, 13, 14, 15 and 16

The defendant's witness No 11 is G Venlataswam, who is a resident of Vandram. The defondant's witness No. 11 deposed that plaintiff's vendor Subbarryudo lived in \ andram only for 3 years on the suit site but the witness was unable to state in his closs examination to whom the suit site belonged. The witness stated that the suit site is in the mildle of the village and that potters "come and occupy it a d go

The defendant's witness A 12 dil not say anything about the ownership of the suit site. The defendant's vitues No. 13 A Narasunulu is the most important witness. He was the karmam of the village V indram for 40 years from 1860 to 1900 The witness deposed that plaintiff s vendor subbirioudu came to the suit site in 1900 and hied there for 3 years. The witness further deposed that Subbarayudu's brother Venhataswami, defendant's witness No 3, was not known to him In his cross examination, defendant's witness No 13 stated that as he had not reported the encroachment of Subbarayudu when it occurred, he (witness) was fined after it was reported by him I may here observe that the defend int's case, as set out in the written statement (vide paragraph I), was that the suit site is a portion of an Ashalmenaha land set apart for communal purposes But not a single question oppears to have been asked by defendant's takil about this to defendant's witness No 13 in his examination in chief And the only facts elicited in his cross examination by plaintiff's vakil are that " those whe came to live on the suit site were not Circur servants, that they used to live in a pake (shed) on a cent of land end that the petters have a (separate) roam in the village With reference to this admission of defendant's witness No 13 it is argued for this plaintiff that the suit site was not the "Ashalmenaba" land of defendant. It is further argued that if the suit site had really been a part of Ishalmenah t, the defendant would have certainly produced the accounts showing the Ashalmenaha hads In other words, the best evidence would have been the production of the accounts relating to Ishalmenaha lands The non production of the said accounts is a very strong circumstance against deferdant because the presumption is that the production would be unfavourable to him

The evidence of the remaining defendant's witnesses Nos 11 to 16 tends to show that the suit site was in the enjoyment of successive potters for e long period before plaintiff's veodor Subbarayudu came to reside on the suit sit; in 1900 The ovidence on pluntiff's behalf is that the villagers introduced the several potters in succession and allowed them to remain on the suit site. It is not proved by defendant that the several potters occupied the suit site with the permission of the Village officers as stated in paragraph 3 of defendant's written statement. On the contrary the admi sions elected in the cross examination of the (Larnam) defendant's witness No 13) to the effect that " those who came to live on the suit site were not Circir servants' and that "there was a separate mam for potfors in the village lead strong support to the plaintiff's case that the suit site was in the enjoy ment of succe site potters who were introduced by the villagers themselves as the site in question did not belong to Government | The plaintiff's witnesses Nos 5 and 6 deposed Attaragan that the Government had no right to the suit site at any time

OF STATE

Thus with reference to the evidence discussed pro and con in the foregoing paragraphs, I hold that the onus of providing that the suit site is a part of Ashabienal a by on the defendant and that this onus has not been discharged. Nothing was cherted in the examination of the kurnam (defendant's witne s No 13) as to the right set up by defendant in respect of the suit site as Ashalmenaha land | The defendant could have produced the accounts relating to Ashalmenaha lands This would have been the best evidence But such ovidence has not been produced and the kurnam himself does not depose that the suit site is a part of Ashalmenaha land I therefore find the issue in the negativo

This Second Appeal coming on for final hearing after the return of the finding of the lower Apy ellete Court upon the issue referred by this Court for trial, the Court delivered the following

A question is now raised for the first time that the cause of action for the recovery of the money was barred by the provi sions of the Act III of 1905, we cannot decide that question in the appellant's favour, seeing that neither of the Courts below was asked to consider it

Accepting the finding we reverse the decree of both Courts and declare that the plaintiff is in lawful possession of the land in suit, directing the payment to him of Rs 6-4-0 wrongfully collected from him

Easements—Waterrights—Distinction between surface water, and water sowing in a definite channel

No claim can be made, either as a natural right or as an easement by prescription, to water which does not flow up a definite course, but which should be regarded as purisce water or surface droining

The right to the water of a stream does not coses, when it coses to flow in a confined water course, unless it exhausts itself as a stream, and merely sosts into the ground

The chief characteristic of corface water is its inability to maintein its identity and existence as a water body. When the flow of water on one person's land can be identified with that on another, a right to swoth flow can arise, although the water may flow along an intervening piece of land.

Water flowing into a field from a known channel and passing along the field commands into another field though not over a confined track in the former field, but along its whole area is not surface water.

Well defined existence arising from an ascertained content is the roal test in coming to a conclusion ageinst any body of water being regarded as surface water.

The question whether or not particular water is surface water is one of fact to be determined by the circumstances attending its origin and continued existence

The right to the water of a stream is sostalizable notwithstanding the fact that the water in the stream is not always sufficient for the purpose for which the right is claimed, or that it seaches the plaintiff's land not directly, but indirectly by flowing into another channel.

A river channel supplied the means of irrigation for the lands of the partice to the sail, and the other ryots of the village. A branch leading from the man channel passed through the lands of defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3 in a defasts water course up to the fourth defendant's lands, when it cotered the fourth defendant's field, and after irrigating at, lowed over 's bands and joined another channel which frangated the plaintiff's lands. Defendant's load, 1, 2 and 2 blocked up the channel at a possibility that the fourth defendant's land. In a suit by plaintiff for declaration of his right to the customary apply of water.

through the channel, and for an injunction restraining the defendants from ADIMARAYANA obstructing the water course

Held, that the water of the channel when it entered the fourth defendant a field could not be regarded as surface water, but continued in a definite water course and plaintiff was entitled to the usual supply of water unobstructed.

SECOND APPEAL against the decree of A L HANNAY, the District Judge of Vizagapatam, in Appeal Nn 20 of 1910, presented against the decree of T. N LARSHMAN RAO PANTULU, the District. Munsif of Vizagapatam, in Original Suit No 721 of 1908

The necessary facts are fully set out in the indement

B. Narasımhesuara Sarma for the appellant

K V L Narasımham and V Ramesam for the first and the second respondents

JUDGMENT -In this case the plaintiff asked for a declaration Sundana of his right to take water through a channel for the cultivation of certain land belonging to him and for an injunction restraining Alvas, JJ the defendants from obstructing the course of the channel lands both of the plaintiff and defendants are situated in a proprietary estate According to the plaintiff a river channel supplied the means of irrigation for the lands of the parties and other ryots who had lands alongede the stream A branch leading from the main channel passed through the lands of the defendants Nes 1, 2 and 3 and then the fourth defendant's land and, according to the plaintiff, afterwards reached his own land Defendants Nos 1, 2 and 3 are alleged to have blocked up the channel at a point higher than the fourth defendant's land They contended that the channel never arrigated the lands either of the fourth defendant or of the plaintiff, and that it stopped some where near their own lands Tho fourth defendant did not confest the suit

The facts found by the Lower Appellate Court, as we understand the judgment of the District Judge, are -that the channel in question continued as a definite water course, up to the fourth defendant's lands, and that the water of the channel flowed ever the bunds of the fourth defendant's fields and joined another channel which irrigated the plaintiff a lands

The District Munsif held that the plaintiff was cutifled to the flow of the channel water along the fourth defendant's lands to the channel which was the direct source of irrigation for his land, and that the contesting defendants were not entitled to interfere with ADDARANA the flow. On appeal the District Judge held that, as the water of the stream did not flow direct to the plaintiff's land in any RAMEDU defined course, it must be taken that it was not intended to SULDARA supply water to the plaintiff's land He regarded the water as AYLABALD SADASIVA it flowed from the fourth defendant's land over his lands as more AYYAR JJ surface drainage and was of opinion that the plaintiff could not claim any legal right to it. He, consequently, dismissed the plaintiff's suit

> The question argued in Second Appeil is whether the plaintiff is not entitled to the customary flow of the water of the stream A-1 along the fourth defendant's field until it joined the channel which supplied water to his own field. There was, according to the finding of the Appellate Court, no definite water-course across the fourth defendant's field, the water course casun, to have any definite bed and banks after it reached the fourth defendant's field. We must also take it on the findings, that the water in the stream was not always sufficient to irrigate the lands of the fourth defendant or to supply a flow to the plaintiff's channel But this we regard as immater al such is the case with many streams and channel in this country. It is also immaterial that the water of the stream flowing through the fourth defendant's land did not reach the plaintiff's land direct but joined another channel out of which the plaintif got his water If the water of the stream supplied a racios of irrigition to the plaintiff, if is immaterial whether it did so by directly reaching the plaintiff's land or indirectly by flowing into another channel

The substintial question for decision is whether the fact that there was no defined channel across the fourth defend into held but that the stream spread itself all along the held and overflowed the bands to reach the plantiff a channel puts the plantiff out of Court | The question is one of considerable importance in this country. It was stated by the learned vakil for the at pellint, and we believe with good reason that irrigation channels to not always go direct to every field neighted by them and that the water often flows from one field to another, either through cuts made in the luml of the fill or by overflowing the bund | And he submitt it that it would be disastro is if it should be held that the owners of helds on the 1 other sile of channels could not support the right to the waters of the chancels in the abs ace of a confined passage along each hell nrighted by them

The respondents' pleader contended, on the other hand, that ADINARANA no claim can be made by anyone to a flow of water except to water flowing in a definite channel, and that all water which disperses itself over a field without a definite water course must be regarded as drainage and surface water which the owner of the field over which it passes is cutitled to appropriate or divert as he pleases

BAMUDU ALLAR, JJ

After full consideration we are of opinion that the respondents' contention should not be santuned. It is no doubt true that no claim can be made, either as a natural right or as an easement by prescription except to water flowing in a definite course and that no such claim could be maintained with regard to what should be regarded as surface water or surface dramage in the proper acceptation of those expressions. But if this principle be understood correctly, it cannot, in our of mion, be held that the right to the water of a stream ceases when it ceases to flow in a confined water-course. If the stream has exhausted itself as a stream and merely soaks into a field, then, no doubt, no right to the water so sosking can be sustained in the same in inner as no right can be recognised to water falling on a field from the sky overhead or oozing from the coil underneath Water of any of these descriptions cannot be the subject of any right mutil it again begins to flow in a definite course. The reason why no right to such water on be recognised is explained in virious decided cases. In Acton v Blund-11(1) the question grose with regard to water flowing in a subterraneous course and supplying a valley, which was drained away by a land owner who carried on mining operations in his own lind in the usual manner. Indiat, C. J. explaining the ground and origin of the law which is held to govern running streams, observed as follows -

"The ground and origin of the law which governs streams running in their natural course would seem to be this that the right enjoyed by the several projectors of the funds over which they flow is, and always has been public and notorious that the enjoyment has been long continued-in ordinary cases indeed time out of mind-and monterrupted each man knewing what ho receives and what has always been received from the higher lands, and what he trensmite and what has always been transmitted to the lower" The right to use such water the

He has the power, still further, of debarring the owner of the land is which the spring is first found, or through which it is transmitted, from draining his land for the proper cultivation of the soil and thus, by an act which is voluntary on his part, and which may be entirely unsuspected by his neighbour, he may impose on such no hbour the necessity of bearing a heavy expense, if the latter las erected machinery for the parposes of mining, and discovers when too late, that the appropriation of the water has already been made "

In Rawstron v. Taylor(1) the reasons why no right could be Adivariana obtained over surface water were pointed out. The judgments of the Court throw light also on what should really be regarded as surface water. PARKE, B said "This is the case of common surface water rising out of springy or boggy ground, and flowing in no definite channel, although contributing to the supply of the plaintiff's mill This water having no defined course, and its supply being merely casual, the defendant is entitled to get rid of it in any way he pleases" Martin, B emphasised the right of every land owner to onjoy his land as he chooses He said "The proprietor of the soil has privid facie the right to drain his land. He is at liberty to get rid of the surface water in any manner that may appear most coovenient to him , and I think no one has a right to interfere with him, and that the object he may have in so doing is quite immaterial" FLATT, B observed "The plaintiff could not insist upon the defendant maintaining his fields as n more water table" In Broadbent v Ramsbotham(2) which also related to surface water, the grounds of decision were the same. The plaintiff claimed four sources of water which he said sapplied the Longwood Brook on which his mill was situated One of the sources was a swamp of 10 perches Alderson, B observed that it was merely like a sponge fixed (so to speak) on the side of the hill and full of water "If this overflows it creates n sort of marshy margin adjoining, and there is apparently no course of water, either into or out of it on the surface of the land As to the subterranean courses communicating with this swamp, which must no doubt exist, it is sufficient to say, that they are not traceable, so as to show that the water passing along them ever reaches Longwood Brook" It will be observed that the learned Judge considered it material that there was no course of water into the swamp. The judgmont of Lord HATHERLEY, L C in Grand Junction Canal Company v Shugar(3), is also important as throwing light on the nature of surface water Ho observed referring to Clasemore v

In Broadbent v Ramsbotham (2) which also related to surface water, the grounds of decision were the same. The plaintiff claimed four sources of water which he said supplied the Longwood Brook on which his mill was situated One of the sources was a swamp of 16 perches Alpessen, B observed that it was merely like a sponge fixed (so to speak) on the side of the bill and full of water "If this overflows it creates a sort of marshy margin adjoining, and there is apparently no course of water, either into or out of it on the surface of the land As to the subterrancan courses communicating with this swamp, which must no doubt exist, it is sufficient to say, that they are not traceable, so as to show that the water passing along them ever reaches Lougwood Brook' It will be observed that the learned Judge considered it material that there was no course of water into the swamp. The judgment of Lord Hatherier, L C in Grand Junction Canal Company v Shugar(3), is also important as throwing light on the nature of surface water He observed referring to Claser wife v Richards(4) "Mr Justice Wightman there laid down the law very plainly in giving the opinion of the Judges upon the subject, and the distinction was there drawn-and I should have

We may refer also to the observations of I and Watson in M'Nab v Robert on(1), " water, whether falling from the sky or escaping from a spring, which does not flow onward with any continuity of parts, but becomes dissipated in the outh's strita and simply percelites through or along those strata, until it issues from them at a lower level through dislocation of the strate or otherwise, cannot with my promitty be described as a stream ' It is impossible to apply this descript on to the water of a stream flowing into it and afterwards pissing out of it after ningating it, though without making a cutting for itself, over any marticular portion of the field | The true test of the existence of a common right is explained in Angell on "Witer-courses," secti n 108 (o), page 137 The levined suff or says "It is to be observed that it is only when the flow of water on one per on's land is identified with that on his neighbour's, by being traceable to it along a distinct and defined cour o, that the two proprictors can lavo urtimal relations with each other in respect of it, can a lete 1 is the subject of separate existence on the tro in is do not possess this mitty of churacter, they are in the same citegory as fish and birds, etc., and are only in er lent to, and form part of the produce of their re pective seils, while ictnilly resting upon them, no proprietor can make chim to water in such condition before it arrives within his own borders. ally, making land spongy and wet, and squandering itself over the surface, has no public character whatever, although it ultimately finds its way to, and feeds, a stream, and therefore, before Allas Ann it arrives at any defined natural channel, it belongs solely to the owner of the land which it covers, and he may deal with it exactly as he thinks fit, while he is making a reasonable use of his own land Such, also, is the case with water which per colates through the perous basin of a pend, or everflows the edge of a well, or which passes or runs off the surface of the soil. before, in either instance it makes itself some natural channel And, clearly, water sovered from all other water, as in a nond or tank, and resting solely on the proprieter's own ground, must be in a similar plight" When the flow of water on one person's land can be identified with that on enother, there is no reason why a right to such flow should not exist althours the water may flow along an intertening piece of lind more right of a drainage over the general surface of land is very different from the right to the flow of a stream or brook across the premises of another ' Farnham in his ' Law of Waters and Watercourses,' vol III, page 2556, observes when water appears upon the surface in a diffused state.

with no permanent source of supply or regular course, and then disappears by percolation or evaporation, its flow is valuable to no one, and at must be regarded as surface water and dealt with as such In Crautord v Ramb (1) it is said that surface water is that which is diffused over the surface of the ground derived from falling rains and molting snows, and continues to be such until it reaches some well defined chain I in which it is accustomed to, and does, flow with other waters whether ders od from the surface or springs and then t become the rouning water of a stream, and ceases to be surface water In each case the question whether or not particular water is surface water is one of fact to be dotermine I by to circumstance attending its origin and continued existence. If the water is spread out and flows sluggishly over the surface 1 mg itself by

percolation and evaporation, it is surface water although it has its source in springs But the more fact that the water spreads

RAMUDU SUNDARA DAY SERVA SADASIVA ATTAR JJ

ADINARATANA out at some places, and flows singuishly without sufficient force to form a channel for itself, does not make it surface water if the flow has sufficient force to maintain itself, and it is subsequently gathered together into a channel so as to form a water courso The chief characteristic of surface water is its mability to maintain its identity and existence as a water hody

But marsh lands through which overflow water from a lake reaches a natural stream are not governed by the rules applicable to mere surface water" Well defined existence arising from an ascertained course appears to he the real test in coming to a conclusion against any body of water heing regarded as merely surface water See Parnham, page 2556 Augell refors to a case which throwe light on what is really necessary to make n water course. For seven rods the stream descended rapidly in a well defined course to a piece of marshy ground where it spread so that its flow was slight ond not eufficient to break the turf but was generally sufficient to form a continuous sloggish curront nlong the surface in a natural dopression to a watering place within the plaintiff's land Thie was adjudged to be n water course within the meaning attached in law to that term Domat states the rule of Civil law as follows "If waters have their coorse regulated from one ground to mother, whether it be by the nature of the place, or hy some regulation, or by a title, or by an ancient possession, the proprietors of the said grounds cannot innovate anything as to the incient course of the water Thus, he who has the upper ground cannot change the course of the watere, either hy turning it come other way, or rendering it more rapid, or making any other change in it to the prejudice of the owner of the lower grounds '

It is quite clear that the water of the channel in dispute hotween the parties in the present case when it entered the fourth defendant's land could not to regarded as surface water came from the channel in dispute Ite origin is not on the fourth defendant's land, nor did it come upon the surface of his and through the pores of the earth | The channel did not, according to the findings, "lose it alf" and get mixed up with the cirth of the fourth defendant's land but continued its course along his The Hentity of the atream was preserved when it passed out of the held It may be that the fourth defendant could if he chose, restrict the rassage of the stream alorg his land by confining it to a chaunel, occupying only a small portion of his ADINGERIANA field It was not, however, the fourth defendant that obstructed the course of the stroam, but defendants Nos 1, 2 and 3, and the obstruction was made at a place before the atream reached the fourth defendant's land They had no right to do so Dudden v Guardians of Clutton Union(1) the water from a spring flowed in a gully or natural channel to a stream on which was a mill The apring having been out off at its source and the water received into a tank as it rose from the earth, by the license of the owner of the soil on which the spring rose at was held that an action would he against the obstructor by the owner of a mill who used to receive a supply of water for his mill The obstruction in this case, according to the finding, was at a place where the channel undoubtedly existed as a regular water course In our opinion, it did not cease to be suchhefore it reached the channel which directly irrigated the plaintiffs' land It did not become surface water on reaching the fourth defendant's land

He never appealed against this order, not did he obey the direction to mend his petition It was accordingly rejected. Ho put in the present application after the period allowed for amendment had clapsed but before the previous application was rejected He made his claim in the prosent application on the same basis as in the 13th application. The District Munsif held that he could not do so On appeal the District Judge held that the plaintiff was not bound to adopt the made of calculation previonsis adopted erroneously in the Judge's opinion We oro of opinion that the order of the Munsif on the 13th application holding that the plaintiff was not entitled to claim a larger omount on o new basis must be held to bar the contention that he is entitled to do so. The order was a judicial adjudication that the plaintiff was not entitled to calculate the omount due to him ou a certain basis. The plaintiff was cortainly entitled te appoil against it, if so advised, and he failed to do so The ground in which the District Judgo has held the contrary view is that the order was passed without notice to the defendants and could not therefore be regarded as a decision between the two parties. In our opinion this view is wrong. The plantiff's petition for execution was a proceeding between him and the defendants and the order decided the question of the plaintiff's right is against them. The foct that the defendants were not called on to appear and answer the plaintiff's claim is immaterial Suppose a suit is dismissed as barred by limitation without notice to the defendant on the ground that the plaintiff's own allegations show that the suit is barred. It would be impossible to hold that the plaintiff could no again on the same cause of action. In execution proceedings orders may be passed without notice to defendant. If any such order is against the defendant and further proceedings in execution are subsequently dropped by the plaintiff and afterwards commenced again, the previous order against the defendant would not bar him from setting up any defence that may have been educatcated on without notice to him. This is not on the ground that the former order was not one passed between the parties, but because an ez parte order cannot bind a party against whom it ne passed without his naving an opportunity to make his defence But the har of former adjudication cannot be avoided by a party who had such an opportunity The learned valid for the respondent has relied on three cases in support of his contention that the former order is not conclusive against his client Hıralal Bose v Dwya Charan Bose(1), Bholanath Das v Prafulla Nath Kundu Chowdhry (2), and Delhi and London Bank, Lamited, v Orchard (3), but none of these is in point In Bholanath Dass v Prafula Nath Kundu Choudhry(2), the indgment debter put in n counter petition stating that the plaintiff's application for execution was berred Both parties failed to oppear on the date fixed for the hearing and the Court dismissed for default both the potition for execution and the counter petition. When the plaintiff again epplied for excention the defendant again set up the plea of limitation and the Court held that the former order did not bar his plea as the dismissal of the counter-petition was not based on the merits of the plea In Hiralal Bose v Diona Charan Bose(1) also the previous application for execution was struck off without may judicial determination on the question of limitation which was set up in the subsequent appli cation In Delhi and Lowlon Bank, Lausted, v. in fact, is not disputed by the learned valil for the respondent. Section 77 says, "At any time after an arrear of rent has become the laud-holder may, in addition to any other dna remedy to which ho is entitled by this Act, in respect of any arre ir of rent which has accrued due within the next preceding twelve months, distrain upon his own responsibility the moverble property of the defaulting root " There can be no doubt that the plaintiff is not a ryot within the meaning of the Estates Land 1ct But it is argued that sections 73 and 74 of the Madras Local Boards Act give power to a zamindar to recover arrears of cess as arrears of rent, and that, since the zamindar has cot power to recover arrears of rent from the reat by distraint, he has similar power as against intermediate toure holder from whom he is outstled to recover arre its of coss paid by him. The argument is prima facis untenable Section 78 says " . . . Provided that in all cases where a person holds lands with or without a right of occup mey as an intermediate land helder on an underticute ereated, contained or recognised by a laudholder, it shall be lawful for the land helder to recover from the intermediate land holder the whole of the tax paid by the landbolder in r spect of lands hold by the intermediate land holder less one half the tix assessible on the emount of any kattubada, Jodi, porupped or quit-rent pigable by the intermediateland-helder to the land holder," and section 71 says that 'every land holder (or intermediate land holder is the ca e may be) shall, in collecting or recovering the portion which may he due to him" under the proviso referred to "be entitled to exercise the same powers as may, under any Act or Regulation which now here is, or tereafter may be, in force, he exercised by any land holder in " The barned the collection and recovery of rent pleader for the re pondent wants us to say that every fand belder is entitled to exercise in collecting a cess the same powers as those which any land-helder may pos oss is regards rent such power of a land-holder mu t be considered with reference to the person against whom the power is to be exercised. There is 10 Act or hegolation which authorises the landlord to lovy distraint upon the projecty of a tenure littler for recovery of Section 77 of the Estates Land Act, as we have jointed out, only authorises a limiterd to lesy distribut upon the moreable property of the root. Thus, even if we read the word

"any" as meaning any one of the class of land holders vested with the largest possible powers for recovery of ront it is not shown that any land holder has got power to lovy distraint upon the property of a person other than a ryot. But we may observe that the vords "any land holder" in section 71 of the Local Boards act possibly mean such land holder. We are of opinion that section 77 of the Estates Land Act does not apply. The result will be that the district will be declared to be illegal and will be set aside. We must therefore ask the District Judge to enquire and find what damages, if any, were sustained by the plumtiff by reason of the distriant complained of Furtler evidence may be taken on the point. Under the Regulation of 1802, the Government did not enter into any engagements with the landholders to supply water. The circumstances under which the permanent sanada were granted preciade may such congresses

In the case of new zamindaris created, there may be cases in which the Government reserved to themselves the control of water convers

Act VII of 1865 was intended by the legislature to refer to all rivers and streams in those syntware districts where no mirass or any corresponding right provatiod, and the words "rivers belonging to Government' do not apply to rivers running through or by zamindaris. The Act was not intended to effect any change in the substantive law but to enable Government to lary a conon account of the large expenditure meanred by Covernment in the construction and improvement of irrigation works. The ryotwars lands were assumed to be Government property, and all rivers running through my twart tands were accordingly treated as belonging to Covernment. But it does not analys the Government to lovy a nator cess where the landowners use the waters of rivers in accordance with the rights they had before

The exemption clause in section I of the Act-" Where a zamindar or mamdar by virtue of engagements with the toversment is entitled to irrigation free of separate charge, no one under this lot shall be amounted for water

Even if the section with the exemption clause applied, the 'cognogement to be implied is one to allow the proprietors to irrigate all their lauds with in the ayacut which could be irrigated without any fee and without any clarge

Mill 11, J - The learned Advocate General argued only two onestions at the hearing of the appeal-

- (1) Whether the suit is barred by limitation and
- (2) Whether the water-cess was properly levied by reason that the Vamsadhara river is a river belonging to the Government.

As to the first question, it is not denied that if the suit is a suit to establish a periodically accurring right, a suit, that is, to which article 131 of the second schedule of the Limitation Act 1877 is applicable, then it is barred, but it is contended that that article does not apply and that a cause of action arises on each occasion on which the cases a demanded

This contention is supported by Sriman Mathabish. Adamma v Gojisettis Naraganaraemy Naidutt) and the case therem referred to, Gojidalaru v Perrajut2), in fact, it seems to me that if those cases are rightly decided the respondents' contention must provid the Advocate General sidence in actisfying one that Srivan Wadhabbash, Ichamma v Gopisetts Nirajinasaemy Naidutt) can be distinguished Following that case I must hald that the suit is not furrol.

Mr Nagabhushanam presented for our consideration some ovidence as to the repair and control of the Mobagam channel by the Urlim zamindar. That evidence, it seems to me, does not affect the case, it might perhaps be evidence in favour of the zamindari of a contract with the Government, but does not help the plaintifs, who do not allego any contract with the Government for the supply of water.

I would allow the appeal and dismiss the suit with costs in noth courts

SANKARAN NAIR. J.

SANKABAN NAIB, J -This is an appeal by the Secretary of State for India in Council from the judgment and decree of the District Judge of Ganjam, by which it was declared that the Government are not entitled to levy any mater cess from the plantiffs for having cultivated their lands with the waters of the Vamsadhara river and the Mohagam channel The plaintiffs are the inumdars of the village of Varahanarasimhapurain paying a quit rent to the Zamindar Their case is that the lands in their villago were nrigated by the Mobigam channel which convoyed water to their lands from the \amsadbara river They alleged that they have been cultivating their lands from time immeniorial with this water and that the Government have illegally collected from them since 1891 water east under Act VII of 1865 for the water from this channel used for converting dry lands into wet and for raising second wet ereps on lands which were ilready under wet cultivation. They therefore prayed for a doclaration of their tifle alleged and an injunction to coforce such declaration, and also for the recovery of the amount illegally collected from them - The Government pleaded that the Vamsadhara river is a Government s urce of irrigation and that the Mobagam channel is the property of Government. They also pleaded that a right to the free use of water supplied from a Government source cannot be nequired by inni emorial user but can be required only by virtue of an engagement with Government and that there was no such engagement with the plantiffs The defendant also meded that the payments made by the plaintiffs were voluntary and not therefore recoverable and that the suit was barred by limitation. The District Judge held that the payments were not voluntary and there was no limitation bur, on the merits, he held that the plaintiffs have failed to prove that the Moharum channel was constructed by . their uncestors as illeged by thom, and that before 1203 it was the menerty of Government but that m 1803, whon the Urlam estate was granted to the predicessor in title of the present Zamundar, the Mobigam channel was also grunted to him As to the Vamsadhara river he found that the Government had fuled to prove that it was tidal and navigable, and lo was further of opinion that, over if it was a tidal and nasignblorisor, that would make no difference with reference to the climis advanced by the plaintiffs. On the questions of law which were raised, he held that the plantiffs were only ontitled to claim any rights relating to the irrigation of the lands which were recognized by the title deeds and occording to them their right to irruration must be limited to a single wet crop on the wet He also held that, even if the plinatiffs had acquired n rescriptive right to the use of water is against becomment, this would only debut the Government from interfering with the supply of water but would not affect the right of Government to charte water rate for net crops, as he was of opinion that such right is only limited by any engagement with Government under let VII of 1560, and the title deel showed no such engagem at in the case However, on the hading that neither the Vam redhere river nor the Mobagam channel was a Governor t source of supply he decreed the plantiffs' claim . Learnst this decree the Secretary of State uppeals

The appeal was first argued before Messe, J., and repail by the then Advocate General, Mr. Sivaswami Ayyar. The questions of law in this case were argued before me and Abour Secretari RAHIM, J., in another Second Appeal by Advocate General Mr Napier and finally the alpeal was again reheard by MILLER, J and myself when the Advocate-General Mr Rosario argued the case on behalf of the appellant

OF STATE JANAKIRA MATYA. SANKARAN NAIR J.

As to the voluntary nature of the payment, I cannot help expressing my regret that the Government ever put forward the plea that the plaintiffs are not entitled to recover the amount paid by them and which would have been collected from them by the Revenue Officials by coercive processes if they had not paid, even if they establish their title alleged by them and the illegality of the demand on the ground that it was a coluntary pryment It was given up in this Court as the question had been decided in Kandulur: Mahalakshmamma Gara, Proprietor Urlam v the Secretary of State f r India(1) following Sriman Medhabush Achamma v Comsetti Naray inaswamy Nardu(2). I also hold that the suit is not barred by limitation I now niceced to consider the main question

I he facts found by the District Judge were scarcely disputed in appeal by the Advocate General on either oc askin, and as to the questions of law reliance was placed upon a lecision of this Court in Kandunure Mahalahshmarima Giru, Proprietor Urling the Secretary of State for India (1) The suit out of which that ap peal arose was also tried by the same District Judge. It hid reference to the claims of certain proprietors to irrigate lands from the ameriver and channel, so the Vamsadhara and the Moba gam, at d if the corclusion therein irrived at is right, it is conceded that this judgment under appeal cannot be supported. As no further arguments were adduced on bohalf of the Crown in support of those conclusions than those contained in that judgment, I shall at its briefly the grounds of decision in that case The learned Judges therein pointed out that under section 2 of Act III of 1903, subject to casement and natural and customary rights of lan lholders, all stand nor and flowing waters which are not the property of any one el e are the property of Government \ \am sadhara river being undoubtedly a ratural str am and the waters of that river in their opinion not belonging to any one else, it followed that the body of water forming the river is the property of Government and from that it followed that the river itself belongs to the Government

They found on the evidence, agreeing with the District Judge on this point, that when the estate was granted to the predecessor in-title of the pres nt Urlam zamindar the beds of the channels were not reserved by Government but passed with the lands to the proprietors to the same extent and in the same way as tank beds, village sites and other porambeke lands passed, but the non-reservation of the beds did not show anything more than that Government fixed the revenue with reference to the extent of land then under cultivation and is no evidence of any agreement in any particular case to permit fice irrigation from Government source of water supply They further found that the fact that there was ne water cess charge | until the year 1901 is not evidence of a lost grant, as in this case before the Settlement in 1803 the Government had the full rights of owner apart from the rights of ryots, if any, and the sannad itself does not give the inamdars any right to take water free of any cess, and as they were of opinion that the Government are entitled nucler Act VII of 1865 to charge water cess if water is supplied from a river or channel belonging to Government and there is no ongazement between the parties that the irrigation is to be free of a separatu charge, they held that the Government were entitled to impose the cess.

It will thus be seen that in appeal the question was decided on grounds very different from the owhich were urged in the Court below, and if we are now to reverse the decree of the Lower Court in fivour of the Government and justify their action in imposing the associated, it will be on grounds very different from those on which such assessment was imposed by the Government on the plaintiffs and by reason of an Act 111 of 1905, which was passed subsequent to the institution of the suit.

If the Acts III of 1905 and VII of 1-65 en the the defendant to low n water cass when the water of a natural stream is used by a zamindar or other lands I repristor for irrigating his lands, in the absence of any suggest in with Government to the contrary, then the facts that the frowerment had no such rights before, that the proprietor was entitled to use such water for irrigation without the feate of the two seniors, and that the Government promised not to levy any cass, nuless such promise Secretary amonoted to an engagement, would make no difference In order to decide the questions in issue it appears to me necessary to state the facts in some detail. Vanisadh ir i river rises in the Jeypore zamiodari and after leaving the zamindari it flows through ryotnari lands for a very small portion of its course It passess then through the Urlam zamindari, and the Mobagum chancel takes nif from its left bank in the village of Mohagam in the Urlam estate. It has a course of about 7 miles and passes through eight or nine villages It irri gates about eleven villages It has a total ayacut of about 4,000 acres, of which about 500 seres are ryotwars lands. Four of the villages belong to the Urlam zamindar, and there are seven mam villages arrighted by this channel Of these seven villages, Varahanarasımhapur im belonging to the plaintiffs is one. The plaintiffs' village as well as cirtain other villages, mainly ryothari. arn irrigated by channels which take nff from the Mobagam chan-One of such chancels is Merakabatti It takes of from the Mobagam main channel within the limits of the planatiffs' main village and after partially irrigation it, enters the Government village of Madapam This Merclabatti chaonel has oo head sluce or regulator and its control, as well as the title of the Scorotary of State in it, is found by the District Judge to begin ouly at the point where it esters syntwait land, and the Judge finds that the Secretary of State has nothing to do with this chaonel from whose it takes off from the main Mobagam channel to where it enters the ryotwari village of Madapam This finding has not been attacked before us in appeal Mobagam channel has a head sluice which was constructed in 1892 by the zamindar of Urlam, and the Judge finds that there is evidence to show that sums have been expeeded by the Urlam zamindari from time to time on the changel He also finds that the Reveone officials never exercised any control over the distribution of water from the main channel and that no money has been expended towards its uplcop There is another channel, Lukulam, which al o takes off from the left bank of the Vamadhira river from what is now a ryotwara villago. Its head sluice is under the control of the Government, the Lukulam channel and the four branches which take off from the Mobagam channel to which I have already

The policy of the Eist India Company's Government at that time wis to take away from these chiefs or zamindars the rights which according to the western ideas should be excreised only lyn ruling sovereign and to leave to them all such rights as could be exercised by a private proprietor. There were some of ums which apparently did not fall clearly within the scope of the one or the other and they were dealt with hy name It was necessary that there should be no doubt on the question and great cure was therefore taken to enumerate the rights which were till then evereised by the rajas and which should no longer be exercised by them for instance, all salt and salt etro rovenue, duties of every description by sea or land, tax on liquor and intoxicating drugs, all taxes personal and professional, all taxea and lands for Police establishments nore expressly excluded in the saunads (See the fourth clause of Lord Chyo's Permanent Sunnads-uppendix to the Standing Orders of the Board of Rovenue, and Fifth Report, page 321) Waste lands were especially referred to as having been granted to the zumindars There were claims which were generally included in the name Sayar understood to rofer to taxes generally (See Fifth report, page 321, paragraphs 13, 11, 15 and 16) As already stated, it was not inlended to deprive these rains of has rights which this were it that time exercising as the proprietors of those lands And looking to the items which were by name resumed and the purpose of the regulation and the words in the permanent sannad, there is very little doubt that they were confirmed in the excise of those rights other than those which were enumerated, and to the cases of z imindars of Government creation those rights were pranted to them unless specially reserved. In my opinion, speaking generally, whenever the Government conten I that these camind irs are not entitled to exercise any of the rights which are capable of private ownership and that such rights are vested in the Crown, it lies on the Government to prove that su h zamindars were deprived of thom either extressly or ly necessary implicit on under the sanuals granted under that regulation, the new zan indaris were intended to be placed on the same foot rig. It now remains to consider how far these views may be acted upon in cases of water-supply In considering what title to waters passed to those to whom sannads were granted, it is desirable to bear in mind all the different forms of water-supply for the cultivation of lands Except on the western coast, throughout the Presidency the rainfall is moderate and insufficient for the satisfactory production of rice, the crop which is most abundantly cultivated, so that the country depended a good deal upon the supply of water otherwise than by rain. In many districts there were tauks for the conservation of water which depended for their supply mainly on the rains. They even now exist in vast numbers throughout the Presidency for the irrigetion of lands. Most, if not all, of them are of old native construction though some few of them have been kept under repair by the British Government It can scarcely be suggested that, where these tanks are situated in zamindari lands, it was not the intention of Government ontirely to part with their contiol to the zamindars. There were also groups of rem-fed tanks connected with such other for cultivation by means of channels There is very little doubt that in their case also, whenever this group of tanks was situated in a zamindam, the control completely passed over to the zamindars. Some of these tanks are lerge reservoirs which contain a good deal of water, and the supply of water therefrom can be safely relied upon after the monsoon had commenced The water supply, however, of a grent number of these tanks is very precaucus, and the cultivation often suffers from water not being sufficiently supplied and does not attain the general standard which it secured from other sources Greater dependence is placed therefore upon tanks supplied by river-water. Many tanks are supplied not only by the runs but by the high freshes of rivers by means of channels unconnected with any dams. But in the majority of cases the level of the river is lower than that of the adjoining fields and it is usual to put up an ament or masonry dam right across the river bed in order to store water and raise its lovel. Generally, except in the cases under Government supervision, the dam consists of a row of granito posts of the necessary height, with the interstices filled with turf earth -often a wall with the same materials being put in front of the posts, which is washed away during the mensoons leaving the posts alone standing. The water whose level is thus rused rasses into the channels | Prom these channels water is taken or distributed for cultivation. It is also stored in reservoirs and rendered available for purpe as of arrightion often by channels from those reservoirs. The area of land that can thus be urn grited according to the costomary methods is called the agacut of the river, a well-known reconnectories which is thus defined in the Standing Orders 1820-1865 of the Board of herenue " Avacut -The total area of 1 and in a village, when applied to prigation estimates, it means the find that can be watered by the tank or channel referred to " Garden land is often, if it generally, cultivated with water by cittle power or manual power. With reference to the channels conveying waters from the river for irrigation and liver fed tanks, it cannot be denied that the ancient chiefs who afterwards became zamindars and r sannads were exercising every form of control subject only to the claims of the ryots, if any The Central power seldem interfered with such exercise of control Lyen when the Muhammadan rulers considered that such an interference was necessary, it was don by dopriving the old chiefs and mirasidars of those rights and triusforing them to their Governors and other off cirls who took their place who were also constituted zimindars by the I'ast India Company, Agriculture and the wealth of the country depended upon the water supply, and it was scarcely likely that they ever moddled with it. After the grant of permanent sanuads the supply of river-water continued to be as necessary as before, for the cultivation of those lands which depended open river-fed channels there is nothing to indicate that the Covernment ever desired to interfero with what was believe to be the ancient osige Liverything tends to show that the amundars and the ryots were allowed to exercise rights of owner-him and to use the river water as before. When the shiring syste i provide lit is po a ble that a Melvaram lar or Government did not take the trouble to casure the nice ary supply of water. But a Pen ament Settlement with personal erec by the it to the Governnent pre-supposes the contains see of the usual water supply the lin le did not receive it, to werms at thould not lavor xpected the zamire's to pay The welftle account the in insulacourous s also er agenerie by the amuders with the ryots Such engagements for payments of rent show that the zamindari ryots Secretary were entitled to get the required supply See also paragraph 37 of the Fifth Report, page 320 The zamindars and the ryots therefore must have continued to receive the supply obvious that in the zamindaris the Government did not under take to, and did not, supply water. The landholders therefore must have continued to tuke the water as before for irrigation from the rivers There is absolutely nothing in the volumes of papers relating to the revenue settlements to show that there was any restriction placed upon them in using the waters of the rivers or exercising any right as before, assuming that it was open to the Government to restrict it. The presumption is that they allowed at The Government contemplated the cultivation of the waste lands-see page 324, paragraph 27, Fifth Report That is unlikely unloss the right to take waters from the rivers was con coded Any increase of revenue due to such increased oultivition was certainly not contemplated any more than if such cultivation had been carried on by water from wells or tanks constructed at the expense of the zamindur. If such an increase is claimed on account of the right of Government to take a share, it could be cluimed quite us well in the one case as in the other We see in the ryotwari district the Government actually taking u share of the produce when waste lands are brought under enltivation

The Regulation and the sannads granted thereunder make it quite clear that the object was to give security to property, there is no scenity if at the pleasure of Government any assess ment not regulated by law, not under the control of the Courts, may be imposed for the use of what is a necessity for cultivation The sangula declare that the assessment on the zamindari lands should "never be liable to change under any circumstances ' An unlimited power to tax a commodity indispensable for cultivation is undoubtedly against this solemn assurance

I now refer to the one difference which was recognised in the case of Havelli lands which places this question in my opinion beyond all reasonable doubt. I stated in a previous part of the inlyment that besides granting the e permanent samuals to the angent chiefs the Government also came to the resolution of transferring the property which was at their disposal like the Havelli lands in the north For that purpose.

they had to divide the Havelli lands into various lots, such division being made with reference to the facilities of watersupply In the case of these lands, unlike the case of ancient zamundaris, the tanks and the water courses belonged to the Government It was open to them to transfer them to the now zamindars or to retain the control in their own hands, it was however distinctly stated then that the constitution and repair of tanks and water courses were to be left to the zamindars except in those cases where there may be works of great general importance to the country or too extensive to be entrusted to the charge of individual proprietors or where there may be other reasons to make it advisable for Government to reserve to themselves the right or duty of looking after those water sources See page 331, paragraph 59 of the Pifth Report. It will be noticed that the Government evidently did not consider it necessary to point out that in the case of ancient chiefs they proposed to transfer such rights or obligations to them or to reserve any control to themselves as obviously such right of control was not with the Government and the zamindars were entitled to it the case of these zamindaris formed out of Havelli lands, therefore, there may be cases in which the Government reserved control of the water courses, but that has to be made out by Government, where the Government do not prove that any such central was reserved there is nothing to distinguish the case of these new zamındanıs from that of the old-see paragraph 60, lifth Report, page 331. This appears to me to he decisive of the question in the case of old zamindarie as well as in the case of the zamindaris formed out of these Havelli lands The water courses are generally of no use without the supply of water from the river

If we look at the usage and practice that prevailed, it also tends to the same conclosion. In no ctate from the time the permanent sunned was granted up to 1865 when the Cess Act was prassed is it the fact that the Government over necrosed the land revenue—there was no law outstling them to claim a charge otherwise—on account of water being taken from any natural stream, or imposed any separate charge from the camindars for taking water from the rivers thouselves.

In the ryotwari districts, if a 130t used water from the river for other than the usual cultivation, they levied an enhanced revenue. If a second crop was rused with additional water, SECRE CARY there was a second crop assessment If a well was sunk within the ayacut of a river and cultivation carried on with the water of that well, it was usual oven for years after the passing of Act VII of 1865 to impose additional revenue on the ground that he had had the benefit of the river water. In the case of the zamine daris no such demands have ever been made. I am not aware that in cases of ancient zamindaris any head shuce has ever been rotained under Government control Whenever the Government wished to interfere with any such sloice for the henefit of their own lands, it was, as in the Vaigor case-Ponnusaumi Terar v. Collector of Madura(1)-with the consent of the proprietor. Most of these zamindaris were at some time or other under the Court of Wards The Court of Wards, so far as I know, never recognized such a claim on behalf of Government The decisions till within the last few years assumed and, where necessary, held that where there is no limitation in the grant itself the provinctor was coulded to unlimited water supply Secretary of State for India in Council v Perumal Pillai(2)

I now come to the change in the law introduced by Act VII of 1865. In 1802 and for some years afterwards, it was not the policy of the British Government to embark upon ney irrigation The progation works of the Caovers river and of the Godavari and the Kistna rivers to the Godavari and Kiston districts were completed before 1855, whom the general survey and settlement of the Presidency was undertaken They entailed an onormous exponditure and the Government looked to increased revenue to recoup them So far as the ryetwari lands were concerned, they could got over the difficulty by mereasing the land revenue on those lands which profited by these irrigation works. and it oppears that, when lands were permanently irrigated from such sources, a consolidated ossessment was imposed leaving it to the root to occupy or throw up that and If only a temporary use of such water was made, a water-rate was added to the dry land rate and the aggregate formed the revence demand

In the erse of zamudaus and mams to which water was supplied, it was open to the Government to impose conditions before supplying them with water But the Secretary of State

suggested for the consideration of the Madras Government, in considering their proposals for a general survey and settlement. whether a separate water rate might not be charged when water from these sources was used or was permanently available so that the profits derived on account of these irrivation worls could be ascertained At that time British Government hoped to attract British capital and enterprise to India in the construction of irrigation works as in Rullway undertakings Madras Irrigation company started in 1858 was the result of this policy. It was given up only some years after the passing of Act VII of 1865 If British capital was to be attracted to India it was necessary to recognize the principle of a separate charge to he levied for water supplied in order to realize this If therefore water cess was to be amposed and levied senarately from land revenue, legislation was necessary to recover it in the same way. I have referred in some detail to the proceedings which led to the passing of Act VII of 1860 in my judgment in Kapilesuaraupram Zamindar v Secretary of State(1) They show in my opinion beyond all doubt that the object the Government had in view was to obtain return for the cost incurred by the Government and not to realize increased revenue where none was incurred and where the ryots and the zamindars were only utilizing such facilities of irrigation as existed before This return was to be obtained out of the increased profits which would naturally be derived by the They show further that when the Government interfered with any pic existing source of water supply, they supplied water free of charge from Government sources See in particular 6 0 No 101, Revenue, dated 16th January 1861 and GO No 986, Revenne, dated 11th May 1865, which contain ' the drafts of a bill and of rules for the levy of a water cess in localities where the Government may see fit to adopt that mode of realizing the rovenue from works of urr gation in preference to levying ? consolidated assessment"

The present to of Act VII of 1865 joints out that "large expenditure out of Government funds has been and is still being meurical in the construction and inaprocessing of the country and drainant to the grout advantage of the country and of

proprietors and tenants of the land," and then states that " it is right and proper that a fit retern should he made to the Government on account of the increased profits derivable from the lands arrigated by such works" So far the preamble makes at quite clear that under the Act what was intended was that there must be works of arrigation or dramage constructed or amproved by the Government and that there should be increased profits derivable from lands arrigated by such works. There was no idea that, where water was taken as before by a zamindar or root without having recourse to may such works, any revenue was to be imposed Then section (1) empowers the Government to levy n cess in certain cases, under section 1 of Act VII of 1865 it is a necessary condition that the "water is supplied or used for purposes of irrigation from any river, stream, channel, tank or work belonging to or constructed by Government" The question for decision is whether these words "river, stream helonging to Government" apply to natural streams like Vamsadhara A " river" is composed of bed, banks and water-"Angell," pages 3 to 5, "hnraham," volume 11, pages 1462, 1557. The bed of the river is the part between the banks. The hanks are the elevations of land which confine the water to n definite course. He is therefore the owner of the river who owns the bods, the banks ned the water. It follows therefore that in zamindaris whore the zamindars own the hade and banks of rivers, as in Jeypore and Urlam, they cannot be called "rivers belonging to Government" It his been contended that all tidal and navigable rivers, and they only, belong to Government I do not think so, as such an interpretation will exempt from the operation of the Act miny natural streams to which the Act is evidently intended to apply and also, as the Indue rounts out, intherto no difference has been recognised so far as arrigation rights are concerned between tidal an I navigable tivers and others The English law when the Act was passed was laid down in Embrey v Owen(1) "Flowing water is publics tures, not in the sense that it is a bonum earans, to which the first occupant may acquire an exclusive right, but that it is public and common in this sense only, that all may reasonably use it who have a right of access to it, that none can have any property in the water itself, except in the particular portion which he may choose to abstract from the stream and take into his possession, and that during the time of possession only . each proprietor of the adjacent land has the right to the usufruct of the stream which flowe through it ' It is possible that the words "river, stream belonging to Government" were used in the section to indicate only this kind of ownership I am satisfied it certainly includes that right. The river therefore may be said to belong to Government when they have got the proprietary interest in the bed or adjacent land which gives them access to it and power to exclude others limits the ownership to the part of the stream adjacent to the land and excludes therefore rivers and streams in zamindaris and mans or advacent to them But I think the section includes other claims as well. The riparian right above referred to depends upon vicinage and consequent right of access. This power does not generally vest in the Government or zamindars It vests often, perhaps generally, in the ryots. Moreover this riparian right will not entitle Government or zamindar to use the water for the cultivation of tenements not in the vicinity while it is undoubted that they have been doing so from time immemorial. The oustomary law of the country may throw some light

So far as the old customary law in the Madras Presidency is concerned, the question appears to he clear. In the deeds of conveyances before the days of British rule and in conveyances oxecuted even afterwards, at least in the early years of the century, by micrasidars and landed proprietors like zamindars, inaudars, etc., which have come before the Courts it is generally stated that the linds are conveyed with the eight incidents of ownership.

"The eight incidents of ownership in land are stated in the following verse --

1 2 3 4 5 6 Nulls nieskepa jaskanam siddha edilhya jaldnirilani

Acsl my' agami' sam juctam ash ta-bhoga samanwilam

1 Treasure trove 2 Property deposited in the land not claimed by another 3 Mountains, rocks and their contents, mines, minerals, 5c 1 All land, 5c, yielding produce 5. All roduce from such land, etc. 6. Rivers, tanks, wells and all other waters 7. All privileges actually enjoyed 8. All privileges which may be conferred, these are expressed by the general terms Ashtabhoram, the eight rights enjoyed by the owner of land" See Mirasi papers, page 206. These papers were compiled and the translation made by Mr. Bayley, who was a member of the Board of Revenue, and they were finally corrected by M: W. Hudleston, secretary. It will be noticed that the convoyance carries with it "Jalam," 10, "rivers, tanks, wells and all other waters." These rights were possessed by mirasidars and other proprietors of land. The deeds, printed in Mr Hudleston's Milasi papers were executed by the mirasidars. The various water sources are therein mentioned in some deeds separately and also under n general term Where the landed proprietors known by different names like mirasidars and others in different districts were dispossessed of their nucient rights by Hindu and Muhemmaden Chiefs and Governors, such rights were vested in these letter But when lands were granted to favourities, eto . hy rulers, those rights were conferred upon them. In a cese reported after this case was heard, a grant in 1708 by the Tanjoro Rajah under which the properties were held till recently was produced contening the same words, "Total of 6) velies of land including wet and dry lands, water, trees, stones, Nidhi, Nicshepa (Treasure), Siddha, Sadhy i (whatever is and mny be brought into existence) present and future patta all bank and all Kana with all Samudanams with water poured from the hand " See Jeeyamba Bui v. The right to writer was therefore treated as a proprietary right and ownership in it was recognised as in land, treasure trove, etc

The ownership ceased when the water left the land. There is no reason to think this rule was discarded. The right which the proprietor has to use the water for agriculture is obviously not the right of easement as there is no dominant or severent tenement. Nor is it, as already pointed out, the natural right of a riparan proprietor. Both the covernment and the zamindar claim and concede in this case the right of lands olders in no way riparan proprietors, to the use of river water. The right

claimed by Government is not to prevent the zamindar from using such water but to impose a water cess, even if he is entitled to use it for irrigation and this is the right upheld by the District Judge SANFARAN

In the ryotwar districts, villages which are not adjacent to the natural stream use river water for irrigation. The right to prohibit such use has never been recognised

If I am right in my view of the customary law of the country that the preprietor of the land is the owner of the water thereon, then those rivers or streams of which they own the hed and the hanks on either side helong to Government Except on the west coast where the cultivation is dependent upon the runs, not river water supplied by Government, and in those few and dwindling places in the eastern districts where the mirrisr right is recognised, the Government have asserted their claim to all waste and poramboke which include river hed and the banks, and any channel therefore could be constructed only by Government or with their leave. I have therefore little doubt that the Legislature, which only carried out the behests of the Executive Government, intended this section to refer to all rivers and streums in these ryotwori districts where ne mirasi er any corresponding right prevailed For the same reason, it did not apply to rivers running through or by zamindaris

Further, if the words "rivers helonging to Government" apply to zamindaris, it will be open to Government to imposo water cess on zamundari lands in the exercise of their natural rights for irrigating their lands with river water as hefere the permanent settlement This is clearly against the Regulation of 1802 and, as the amount of the water-cess is not even to dis enssion in the Civil Courts, practically repeals the Regulation and caucels the sannads in this respect and involves such gross breach of futh that the Courts should not, if possible, adopt a construction which will have that effect. But to e-cape from this consequence, reliance is placed on behalf of Government on the exemption classo. It runs thus "where a zamindar or mamdar by virtue of engagements with the Government is entitled to irrigation free of separato clarge, no cess under this Act shall be imposed for water supplied to the extent of such right and no more". It will be noticed that under section (1) the water cees may be imposed when water is surplied or used, but the exemption applies only to cases where water is supplied, Skerkering of course, by Government These terms have been explained in Venkatappayya v. The Collector of Kestna(1), followed in Krish navva v Secretary of State for India(2), and since the amendment of the Act in 1900 on account of those decisions retained this word as before, the judicial interpretation may be taken to have received legislative sanction. This exemption therefore does not apply to those zamindars and proprietors who themsolves take and are entitled to take the water for irrigation from the rivers and streams in their zamindaris without its being "supplied" to them by Government In their cases you cannot imply a demand

Moreover, if we are to presume an engagement to "supply" water by reason of the grant of permanent Sanuad then the Government are bound to supply the zamindais with water, but such as clearly not the case I am therefore unable to accept this argument. It is only advanced to meet the natonable position in which the Government find themselves in asserting that a river like the Vamsadhara is a Government source of irrigation for zamindaris. That the exemption clause does not apply is conclusive to show that the section itself does not apply to such rivers

If however the word "supplied" only means "used and the section with the exemption clause applies, I am clearly of opinion that the "engagement ' to be implied is one to allow the proprietors to irrigite all their lands which could be irrigated, i e, all those comprised in the syncut without any fee and without any charge There is nothing to suggest in any Government papers that the unqualified power which the old zamindars had to cultivate waste lands with river water was taken away and such right was confined to the cultivation of those lands then under wet cultivation. The usage till 1865 tends to the same conclusion The object of Act VII of 180 was only to collect n cess for water supply d from Government works Further to hold that the "ong igement" was to dlow water for the cultivation of lands then under wet cultivation is to ignore the history of the permanent settlement. In some cases a comparatively small peshoush alone was fixed as a pledge of submission to Government without any reference to assets-Arm, for instance, a jaghir of ancient days. It was a complaint of the Famine Commission in 1880 that, receiving substantial benefit from Government works, the proprietor declined to contribute and could not be compelled by law to pay any cass See Madias section of the Report, page 104, section 61 In a few others the peshcush was simply an equivalent for the inlitary services formerly rendered by them without any reference to their assets. The great zamındarıs of Venkatagırı, Kalabastı and Karvetnagar are among these Their peshcush was a proportion of the cost of the zumindar's military establishment inclusive of amarans and kattubadıs less the revenue from salt, abkarı dues, etc. Some were settled without any enquiry into their resources ganga is one of the most important of them. A few of these estates, when they passed under British rule, had to pay a certain proportion of what they were paying to the old Rulers-Kangundi for instance

In all these instances the obvious intention of Government was to leave it to the zamindar to exercise all the proprietary rights as hofore. The extent of wel cultivation or the assets hadnothing to do with the pesheush. The conditions under which the pesheush was imposed rebut any other presumption.

In the district of Ganjam, with which we are now immediitely concerned, no proportion of the jamma was adopted, but the peakeush was in each case in point of fact fixed by the Board of Peakeush at their discretion on a consideration of all the circumstances and necomits before them

When the Act was presed the Government had these facts before them, because about that time another important operation to afford stemily of title was going out—the onfranchisement of mains. The Inam Commissioner, the Board and Government had to consider the cremestances under which every estate was held to decide whether they had the right to the reversion and therefore to enfruchise the roams therein. It also appeared at that time that the accounts on which the settlements of some armindaris like Rumaid may have been based were lost in the Government offices. How is it possible in all these various cases to assume that the word "engagement" in the overaption clause in section 1 of Act YII of 1865 had reference to the "wet land" at the time of the permanent settlement when it had either nothing to do with nesets or it was not possible to find out whether it was so In some of the important zamindaris like Pittapuram the peshcush was fixed on certain accounts taken by the circuit committee between 1776 and 1786 Are we to ignore the very probable increase in cultivation between 1786 and the Sannad? It seems to me to raise a strong presumption that the extent of wet cultivation was not the determining factor. In those other cases, where the peshcush was a proportion of the fixed assets, it was the average of certain years before the per manent ettlement that was adopted Is it then seriously contended on behalf of the Crown that a zumindar like Urlam was entitled to cultivate wet land to the average extent but must pay cess if he cultivates lands of the larger extent cultivated in the other years? No zamindan was then surveyed. The wet area was never localized If the zamindar is now made to pay cess for the excess area, he cannot now localize the area, if any, then under cultivation so us to demand their contribution from the tenants of the excess area, and where the wet area, if any, adopted as the basis of the settlement is less than the actual extent of wct cultivation before the settlement as it well might happen on account of the average area laving been adopted it would be impossible for the zamindar to localize the wet area I am therefore unable to accept the view that the zamindar was entitled to cultivate only the mamool net free

I am therefore of opinion that under the Act as it stood un affected by the subsequent legislation (Act III of 1905 to which I shall presently refer) it was not competent to the Covernment to levy any cess for any water taken from the Vanradhara river, of course, without the aid of Government works. I make this reservation to exclude Lukulum with reference to which I express no opinion.

We have now to consider the plantiffs' position as mandar-The village was granted to their predecessors in-title in 1704 by the zamindar of Parlahimah. When the Havelh lands along with this village were grunted under a deed of permanent Sannad to the predecessors in-title of Urlam, the quit rent was included in the assets. The Sannad is not before me but if the general practice was adhered to the reversion was in the Government, and accordingly the Crown enfranchised the man Secretary of ctate v. Janaeiramayta. Sankaran Nair, J, niterwards. As I have pointed out niready, the evidence is not clear as to the circumstances under which the Mobagam channel was constructed, but as it was in the Havelli land at the time of the permauent settlement it may be presumed to have belonged to Government. The inamdar was undoubtedly irrigating his lands from the Mobagam channel at that time as it was his source of irrigation. The general policy of the Indian Governments was against any restriction on irrigation as they shared in any increase in produce. There is no reason to suppose that this inamdar was entitled to use only a certain quantity of water or to irrigate only a certain extent of land. INNES, J, rightly states the principle applicable to such cases: "where a channel has been constructed by Government acting as the agent of the community to increase the well being of the country hy extending the nearlit of irrigation and in pursuance of that nurnose a flow of water is directed to the villages designed to be benefited, it becomes simply a question upon the circumstances of the case whether there has not been a conveyant to such villages in perpetuity of a right to the unobstructed flow of water by the channel. Looking at the permanency of such works and to the permanency attaching to the object, that there was a transfer in perpetuity would seem an almost necessary conclusion, unless there were other circumstances to lead to one of an opposite character. It might of course be capable of being shown that the privilege was granted as a mero hoenso and that before the water was allowed to flow to the villages, it had been left open to Government by arrangements then made to obstruct the flow at will at any future period "-Ponnusaumi Terar v. Collector of Madura (1). Any arrangement between the zamindar and Government at the permanent settlement cannot prejudicially affect him. After the enfranchisement, it is said that he is only entitled to irrigate the land then declared "wot." But we cannut imply an engagement between the Government and the mandar, as the Mohagam channel and the Merakab itti channel which takes water from it to irrigate the mam pro not under Government control and they cannot control the distribution of water therefrom. The fact that the Government has control over the Merakabatti channel only after the title deeds or proceedings to show that the mamdar is only entitled to cultivate with channel water those lands entered as wet free of charge and that even thuse lands are entitled to exemption only for the first crap Neither in the despatch from the Government of Madras'to the Secretary of State, Revenue. dated 9th August 1859, with the enclosures thereto giving full information of the intended proceedings to enfranchise mams. nor in the final report of Mr Blur on the operations of the commission, dated 30th October 1869, the proceedings of the Madras Government and the despatch of the Socretary of State thereon, dated 10th August 1871, nor in the mass of records relating to the enfranchisement of mams, is there any indication that it was the intention of Government to advance my claim on account of any excess cultivation or that the mandar's mont was confined to the wet area mentioned in the title deeds. If it was so, the Government could very easily prove it without asking the Courts to upset a practice upon theories The avail able records support the contrary conclusion, when water was supplied from Government uniout works, no cess was levied on the mamool wet presumed to have been under wet cultivation at the time of the permanent settlement or the enfranchisement of the mams, but cess was levied on water taken for the irrigation of the rest. That the claim was so restricted to water from Government works is not without significance The copies of the main title-deeds show that the main is only ' claimed to be of acres of dry land and acres of wet land All information had to be given in the registers as the assessment was fixed at the discretion of Government, no inference can be drawn therefore that any fact therein mentioned was the basis of nny contract. In asking the Government to cancel their order that mams limited to a hunted number of lives should not be interfered with, the Inam Commissioner said ! "It is superfluous to add that in all such sottlements overy care is taken that the interests of Government do not suffer A fair addition is made to the present value of the village on account of the prospective suprocement from the cultivation of waste lands"

The Government accordingly cancelled then Order No 945, Revenue, dated 3rd June 1864 This seems decisive See a so the SECRETARY

Commissioner's order quoted in my judgment in Secretary of State v Ambalavana Pandara Sannadhi(1)

Further the mandar as such as only entitled to Government revenue. The title deeds have been declared by legislation not to interfere with the intrusidars or ryots. Any engagement would probably have been with them. I am there fore of opinion that in each case it is for the Government to prove that the right of cultivation is limited as alleged by them, otherwise the so called engagement will be taken to be in accordance with usage or with the conclusion arrived at hy Innes, J, already referred to

After the passing of the Act, the practice continued the same as before, the Government claiming a cess only when water was taken from Government works The first note of dissatisfaction was that of the Famine Commission in the report presented by them to the houses of Parliament in July 1880 They pointed out what they deemed to be an abuse, that the zamiudari lands. which on the introduction of canal irrigation were in the enjoy ment of any means of arrigation bowever inferior and precarious. were supplied with canal water without any additional charge. with the consequence that the zamindar gets a continuous and unlimited supply for the whole of the area he had ever brought They thought there is no reason why this under oultuation henefit should be conferred The Government supplied this water in consequence of their having interfered with the zamındar'a channels Many of these channels supplied him with river water. His right to irrigate with such water was thus assumed From this time began the efforts ever since continuously maintained to carry out the above augicistion Among the suggestions were that the proprietors should be required to prove with reference to every field that it was being fully irrigated to entitle them to claim Government canal water. that they must prove what extent they were cultivating according to the permanent settlement accounts, which were in Government custody and which they are not bound to produce and which the Government condomned as maccurate when they were against their contention, see GO No 844, Revenue, dated 18th September 1902 Au Irrigation and Navigation Bill was introduced in 1884 (No I of 1884) which assumed the law as I have stated it. The local officers continued the old practice. In 1886 the Collector stated the mage correctly when he directed his Assistant Collector that no cess should be levelered for water taken from rivers by hits or by channels day and repaired by private proprietors (Exhibit XIV). In 1889-90 there was an inquiry, and the Revenue Board came to the conclusion that, as nothing was spent on the channel by Government, the Government had nothing to do with the regulation or distribution of water in the Mobagam channel—Board's Proceedings No 3014, Miscellaneous, dated 29th July 1890. That this was the opinion entertained till then appears itso from the records and the undgment in the Full Bench Case decided by the Ciner Justice.

prevailing I may now refer to the Urlam andgment-Kandukura Mahalakshmamma Garu, Propisetriz of Urlam, . The Secretary of State for India(1) It holds that, as the Government owned these lands before conversion into zamindai is, the sannads must expressly or by necessary unplication convey the irrigation rights claimed, otherwise they must be taken to coutinue with the Crown This is perhaps so in the case of ordinary Crown grants But, as I have nointed out, these are sannads granted under a Regulation with a particular object and it was intended with one possible exception to place the new comindaris in the same position, as the old gamindars who had full proprietorship before the grant No distinction so far as I know has even been recognized between the two classes. It is stated in the indement that it was "not contended that the water is their property'-10, of those who own the banks of the river. and "it follows it is the property of the Government," but "water" is their absolute property for ordinary uses It is limited property for extraordinary uses. It is further pointed out that as the water is Government property the stream also is Government property and the explanation to section 7, Easements Act and M'Nab . Robertson(2) are referred to. The explanation throws no light on the question before us. It is intended to show that permanency or tidality is not an indispensable element. It says however there must be a "known course" which implied definite bed and banks. The case cited illustrates thus. There a lessor let two ponds to a tenant "together with right to the water in the said ponds and in the streams leading thereto," and the question was whether the word "stream" was used in the ordinary sense of a rivulet or course of running water or any water which found its way into the poud even by percolation through marshy ground The majority of the Lords held in favour of the former view. The decision had nothing to do with the question before us. The word "stream" no doubt is also used to indicate water in motion But this use is exceptional Lord HALSERRY who took this view says it ordinarily means definite stream within definite hanks. In Act VII of 1865 it is used after the word "river" to mean a little "river"; if it means anything else it has no bearing on the case as Vamsadhara is a "river" and not a stream. It is assumed in the judgment that the assessment was fixed with reference to the extent of land under irrigation at the time, not with a view to any possible extension of cultivation, as a genoral proposition applicable to all zamindars and mandars, this is obviously incorrect as I have already shown. The Permanent Settlement accounts are with the Government. They seek to alter the existing practice. It is for them therefore to prove that the assessment was so fixed I seriously doubt whether the Government will be able to prove it, as my experience is that, where the assessment was based on the assets, it was the average demand and the average collection for a series of years that formed the main element in the consideration of the question. No Court is justified in raising a presumption or proposing a theory to upset a usage that has prevailed for a long time propor function of a theory is to explain or to find a legal origin for a long-standing practice; it should not he used to get rid of it and to unsettle the claims which have long been deemed to he well established. This must be done, if at all, by logislation.

he well established. This must be dono, if at all, hy logislation. The pleader in that case appears to have given up the ground on which the District Judge based his judgment that Mobagam channel was the source of water-supply. For these reasons, I am unable to follow that decision on these points.

It is contended, and the Urlam indement decides, that under Act III of 1905 all flowing waters which are not the property of any one else are the property of Government and therefore the waters in the Vamsadhara river and consequently the river itself belong to Government I am clearly of opinion that if under Act VII of 1805, as it stood before this Act III of 1905, the Government were not entitled to impose any water-cess, this Act coupled with the other Act does not give them the right to do Act III of 1905 was passed in prevent encroachments on Government property, and it is not permissible to construe the water cess Act in the light of the provisions of this later Act unless there is some special provision to that effect In Nairn v St Andrews University(1), the House of Lords decided that such a construction is not justifiable, under nn Act of 1863 the right to vote was given to "persons" which primd facie would include women, but it was held on occount of the usage that had prevailed till then that the Act confined the franchise only to men . the orgument was that n loter Act of 1899 token with the Act of 1868 had the effect of conforming the franchise upon women too With reference to this organient the Lord Choncellor stated "It proceeds upon the supposition that the word 'person' in the Act of 1868 did include women, though not then giving them the vote so that at some later date an Act purporting to deal only with education might enable commissioners to odmit them to the degree, and thereby else indirectly confer upon them the franchise It would require a convincing demonstration to satisfy me that Parliament intended to effect a constitutional often are" It also appears to me that the words of the Act III of 1905 dn net support the contentions. It only declares that the water is Government property, but the river does not thereby become ee Again if the water or the river must be considered Government property always by the provisions of that Act, there is no reason why we chould go back only to the Act of 1865 and not in the Regulation of 1802 It appears to he clear that the Government must have conveyed all their rights including the water and the river within the boundaries of the properties in the sannad Such a construction was not till now adopted as the Government did not own them Inither the Act preserves natural rights and rights by casement. There is no natural right to appropriate and consume entirely or to some extent another's property. The proper construction therefore to be adopted is that, in so far as the riparian proprietor has any property in water or any person has any customary right, it is not Government property. Any other construction would ouable the Government to levy a cess when a person to oxercising his natural rights and chould not, therefore, bo adopted It will be an interference with the Permanent Settlement, Regulation and the Saunads Moreover, if I am correct in my view, according to the customary law flowing water in a river belongs for certain purposes to the owner of the bed and hanks, and the act does not interfere with vested rights for these reasons I disallow this contention

As to the reported cases, Ponnusami Tetar v. Collector of Madura(1) shows that the cannidar was using the water of the Vaigai for other than riparian villages, that the Government got his consent to orect a -luice in the channel to convey water to rotwari villages and the Government claim to interfere with the flow of water so far as the samindar was concerned was not recognized, while it was recognized so far as rjotwari tenants were concerned.

I am unable to agree with some of the dicta in the Permai dam case which deal with the right of Government to regulate the distribution of water in zumindaris. It is stated therein, usee Fischer y The S cretary of State for India(2)—"We are projected to hold that the paraments right of Government under the law of this Presidency is independent of the owner-ship of the bed of the stream. We also think that no distinction can be drawn between cases where the interest said to be affected is that of ryotwari tenants and whose the interest which is said to be affected is that of holders of proprietary estates." No authority is cited in favour of this proposition. It is really ussupported by any authority. The Government have, I believe, a right to regulate the distribution of water among ryotwari villeges without causing majory to any of them. But they have clearly no such right in zamindaris. The reason of the thing is against it. Because the zamindar is at least under the same obligations to his ryots as the Government are town distinction. To assume such a right is to ignore the history of the Permanent Settlement, the conduct of the persons concorned and their legal consciousness, common law is the offspring of such consciousness and conduct and in India particularly it is nusafe to rely upon anything else in opposition to it. A Royal prerogative is presumed when it is in public interests to do so, but not for revenue purposes, and any such prerogative is entirely against zamindars' and zamindars ryots' interests, in whose case Government have no nower of remission of revenue

Secentary of State y Janaeira hayya Sanearan Nair, J natural streams for the cultivation of all lands that lay within the syacut of the streams subject to the claims of the ryots

While the sannads deprived them in express terms of some of the powers they were exercising, there was no interference with their claim to use the waters of natural streams

There is no evidence whatever to support the suggestion that the zamindars were entitled only to cultivate lands then under wet cultivation free or that the Government reserved any right to themselves to increase the reveaue if waste land was brought under cultivation or additional or different crops were raised on the land. This suggestion that part of a zamindari alone was to be nader permanent settlement is inconsistent with probabilities and against the policy of the permanent settlement.

Usage disproves the suggestion. The Government imposed revenue when waste lands in ryotwari estates were brought under cultivation but never claimed any revenue from zamindars for cultivating waste lands. Similarly they claimed calunced revenue when river water or water from well sunk at ryot's expense within the syscut of a river was used by ryots but not from zamindars when they used such water.

The ground on which the contention for the Government is based, that the pesheush was generally fixed on the basis of a certain area under cultivation has no foundation in fact. It is disproved in a great number of instances

River water is indispossable for the cultivation of the lands that lay within its vaccut and any prohibition of its use either directly or indirectly by the imposition of a cess or increase of land revenue is improbable

The Government were precluded from recovering any charge for water as land revenue by the terms of the permanent sammad and there was no law entiting them to recover it otherwise any restriction placed upon the use of water either hy prohibtion or imposition of any assessment, at the pleasure of Government, is a breach of firth destructive of the security of property which it was the object of the permanent settlement to create

The new zamudans created by the Last India Company were placed on the same footing as the old

Act VIII of 1865 was not intended to effect any charge in ambitantive law. It was only intended to enable Government to recover water-cess for native water, to recoup themselves for the expenditure incurred for the construction of irrigation works, or when a ryot used the water in a natural stream owned by Government

Under the customery law of the country river water belongs to the owner of the estate through which it preses subject to the claims of the proprietors below.

I would therefore confirm the decree and dismiss the appeal with costs.

SECOND APPEAL No. 573 OF 1911.

SANAARAN NAIR, J - The appellant is one of the Nuzvid Zamindais whose judicial history will be found in Raja Fenkata Ran v Court of Wards(2) and See Rojah Venkata Nurasimha Appa Row v Sia Rojah Rangayya Appa Puic(3) The Zamindar alleged that the infendant the Secretary of State, constituted in 1863 the Libre Canal to carry the arient water through the Zamindari and thereby obstructed the flow of water mie one of his tinks Voida Cherova, from his other three tanks, and since that time the Government have been supplying him with water free of charge for the enlistation of his lands, about 507 acres 14 cents, which depended on these tanks for their irrigation - From 1889 they allowed water appply free of charge only for 427 acres 31 cents and on his appeal from such reduction if was still further reduced to 202 acres 67 cents He praye for a declaration of his right to the supply of water as before and for certain reliefs consequential on such declaration. The Government filed their written statement and issues were framed which covered all the unestions of fact relied upon by the plaintiff. But without taking any evidence, the question whether the plaint discloses a cause of action was first argued and deciled against the plaintiff.

The Subordinate Judge held that no express "cuts.smint' under Act VII of 1805 having been alleged, all lands irrigated by bliors canal water must jay cess. The Judge in appeal held that a promise by the Government in 1803 to supply water may perhaps be implied in the plaint, though the issues according to him show that the nlaim was based an a letter of a Deputy Collector of May 1891, which, it may be remarked, however, is not referred to in the plaint. He was of opinion that unless there was an express agreement, the Government are entitled to levy water-cess at pleasure.

The dec sions of the Lower Courte go beyond the claim set up by the Government, who concede the plaintiff's right to water free of charge for 200 odd acres in their written statement. The Subordinate Judge states that the plaintiff's pleader in argument before him relied on a contract with the Government and the Judge states that the plaint apparently implies it Issuee Nov 1 to 4 nere neces sary only if an implied ogreement formed the basis of the claim. They certoinly In these circumstancease the avidence had not been taken and the plaintiff re'ied only on the facts alleged in the plaint and rised by the issue, an amendment of the plaint setting forth that the plaintiff relied on an "capagement" with Government should have been allowed if necessary. I do not rinok too omission to mention it to fatal to the suit. However to remove any difficulty we have allowed the plaint to be so amended. The question whether the facts set forth disclose a cause of action has been fully argued before us. As the plaintiff relies upon un "engalement" in 1863 with the Government in the sense in which that term is used in Act VII of 1865, it is necessary to refer to the events which led to the passing of that Act. We assume that the facts on which the plaintiff relice are true. When it was proposed in 1856 or thereebouts to undertoks o general corney and reascessment of the lende in the Madras Pressdency, the question cross how those lands arrigated from the Godavari and Kistna enicuts were to be assessed. Till that time the practice in the Persidency when weter was supplied from strigation works was to charge a consolidated wet essessment when water was permanently available and to levy a water-rate only when it was temporarily required for coltivation. The lands were chiesified as either ' irrigated " or " non-irrigated ". The Secretary of State suggested that this classification of lands according as they were copable of irrigation or otherwise from the Government sources should be abolished and all land should be classified with reference to ite soil and productiveness without unication, a nuter-rate being charged when water to used or permanently available.

After a long correspondence which showed that different views were put forward and various difficulties pointed ont, among them the practical impossibility of fixing the ass. sament in which the land which has been long under wet cultivation would be liable as unsurgated land, it was finally resolved to accept the suggestion of the Secretary of State and orders were issued by the Government of Madeas on the 12th March 1853 that "a water-coss calculated with reference to the additional strigation canal communications, drainage and ambankinents is to be levied invariably on all lands ringated from the Godavari an ! Kistua chaunels from the second year of irrigation, without any reference to whether they are Government land, lus in Linds or belonging to proprietors, and if in the latter two cases the Acting Collector (Masuhpatam) has neglected to take engagements and opposition is made, he is forthwith to stop the supply " These instructions received the sanction of the Secretary of State, and one of his reasons was that this would be the easiest and most equitable mode of obtaining a fair contribution from the Asminders towards the re payment of the expenditure incurred in the construction of " drainage irrigation and other works undertaken by Government and benefiting the lands of those proprietors as well as of Government." This is how the term "engagement" (ere provise to section 4 of act VII of 1865 of which the draft bill was then under consideration) was need, to far as I know, for the first time.

These instructions were communicated to the Revenue Read and officials to be carried out.

From this the following conclusions mey be deduced

From the the following Commissions may be necessed. Water rate was intended in no payment of the cost of those irrigation works which applied the water. It was not intended to assess lands which received their supply from sources, as in the case, completely ander the zamindare control with which the Government had nothing to do. No "ongagements" with ryots were contomplated obvjoosly for the ressent that it could be included in load revenue, the only node at that time aff eccepting the water charge from proprietors as distinguised from ryots of Government Lands was to enter into suggest ents with them, and if they relead the do so, the remedy suggested to stop the supply of water. It is clear that the zamindar was not bound to enter into any ongagement with Government to take water when he was the owner thorough a which it was conflicted in these or reservoirs or as rufue of his raparan or essentivity in the control rapara from doing so. The Government were not in those cases supplying him with water, are could they therefore stop the supply.

It is probable therefore that where the Government continued the supply it was under some segagement

With reference to these two classes there was no difficulty. In the first class of cases is which the irrigation was carried on without say cost to Gorgmant and in exercise of the propriotors' rights of casement by vicinas, a of countries of the control of the claimed. In the second class of cases where irrigation was carried out with after supplied from the amounts and only by means of forerament; irrigation words, chaineds etc the Gorgmant were entitled took, that their references for the supply of the control of the countries of the countries of the supply. The result was that, between the construction of the singer and the pastin, of the Act of 1565, water was applied to the propristers on strong

there were however other cases which it was more eitheult to deal with Inams were exempted from permanent saneds and the manys mains were inregated from Governaçent contess. Similarly where there were samulataries qualit dues formed out of Hardell hands in which water sources were recommend under Government control would be useful which were string but from Govern ment sources. In they were critical to Government water, the following, rule for water axes remoted was peaced for their benefit on the -8th October 1801.

"Lands tranted as maple mame and fully irrigated accordingly at the Government cost will not be charged with water zee, smeat." The same rule was applied to zamindary

There was a fourth class. Water from the Government amount works was often carried to the Trotwan I unds by mans of the claif clauses within based through amountaines and wore for that party one uniproved calaxyed an I extends by the Government. The namedar who lithrained his water through these channels naturally claused the ancient water which flowed through his channels. Some of the Government channels do need it rough the tanks or reservors.

which were same property, and the samenism was thus deprived of his tank water. Some channels, as the kilore canal in the case before us, cat off the supply to the tanks on which the cultivision of samindari lands depended. It is obvious that the samendar in all these cases had a just grievance. The Government however considered that the water-samply before the days of the anicut was preceives and irreguler and they issued the following rule on the 26th October 1861—

No 12 "Such nama Inama sa were formerly imperfectly irrigated and have stuce been felly supplied with water from the anicut works, will be charged at half the above water-rates" The rule was made applicable to zamindaries also. There was a proposal sometime efferwards that even the rule which allowed the full sapply without any charge should he eltered to allow half rate on the ground that there was never any adequate supply before On account of the strong pretest of the Board of Revenue the Government altered the ball ratern'e and allewed water free of charge oven where the half rate had been leved on lands which " owing to the construction of the several enteut channels and other works connected therewith were found to here lest wholly or partially their pre-esisting sources of supply." See GO. No 101, Revenue, deted the 16th January 1864 For determining what lands lost their sources of Supply, the order states "the real criterion is the rets of assessment which the eccounts show the land is hable to ' This order further says, "If this indicates the title of the lend to water or if other reasonable proof can be adduced, then no charge should be made for irrigation, as the engagement to supply weter monifestly implied a full and not on imperfect supply "

There is only one further order to be referred to The Secretory of State, in considering whether a cultivator should have the of tion to refuse Octarament water, said the 16th Jenuary 1864" with reference to your question, 'whill ir the ryot should be allowed the accuraty egamet an excessive charge which the option of deciding, by a stated period of each year, whether he will have water or not will give him," I am clearly of epinion that such option should be permitted There is little ground for apprehension that the ortion would be exercises by the cultivator in the way of declining to use the means of irrigation when they are so plied to him at a moderate price, and the possession of it would in no respect limit the right which the Government, acting on your own behalf or on that of the Irrigation Company, must retain, the right of declining to supply any particular tract of country with water, nuloss the cultivator should be prepared to enter into engagements to take the water at the stipulated rate in such numbers and for such terms of years as might wanted the required outly Although few would probably reject the opportunity, yet no compulse a to take the water must be exercised towards the dissenticuts, and they must in no way le disturbed in the possession of their lands, to long as they desire to hold them, and continue to pay the ordinary rate of assessment."

This despatch in ske at clear that the Secretary of Sinte wanted to give the rych earner sprion of taking solvent water as the zamindars and mandars had thus eler was communicated by the Madria. Government to the other a concerned solit was pointed out by the Government that 'as regards lands witch have been effect for fringation by the owners and have settedly been trajected for at hast the segment many family be held that such preparative.

In forwarding the draft Act to the Government Pleader, the Government asked his opinion whether it was necessary to specify zamindari and inam lands in order to enforce the spincial case " on land newly irritated from Government sources at Government expense The apparent of the Government Pleader was in the affirmation and he drafted the section in these terms estend to all lands held, by gamindars or mamdars for the irrigation of which water may be, after the passing of this Act, newly supplied or used from any such river, stream, channel, tank or work as apecified in acction 1 " On its being pointed not that this might preclade the lavy of any water rate for irrigation newly supplied to such lands since the construction of the unicut but prior to the passing of the Act and which ampply may heremafter be continued, the Governmont modified it by nmitting the words ' after the pessing of this Act, nowly" and the section then ran in the form in which it wer finally passed by the Legislativn Conneil thus "This Act shall extend to all lands held by zamindars, mandara or any other description of landholders for the irrigation of which water may to supplied or used from any such river, stroam, channel, tank or work as as specified in section I, a royaded always that whore a zamindar or mamdar by virtue of engagements with the Government is entitled to irrigation fron of separate charge no cose under this Act shall he imposed for water supplied to the extent of such right and no more '

In the case hofore us the water is supplied to the lands in suit from a Government source, to wit Fliere Conal and Government eniont works, and thorofore unless the pleintiff proves the 'engagement' that he sets up the Government ere entitled to lawy water tax Tho word 'engagement' in the section is no doubt used in the arms scase in which it was used in the proceedinge to which I have already drawn attention. Now, what was the stite of things when the let wee passed? When the Government intercepted the flow of the water from the other three funks mentioned in the plaint into Voddicherurn, they undoubtedly inflicted an injury upon the plaintiff, and if the plaintiff had enforced his claus in a civil coort he would have obtained a decree for compensation payable to him for such interference, which would probably have been a direction to supply him with thet water which his tank was usually getting before the suterruption or some equivalent compensation. Now, it is not to be presumed that the Government did a wrongful act if the facts are consistent with any atter supposition. The enteral presumption is that they compensated him in some form We find that the Government hel issued orders that where there springation works lad interfered with a pro-cristing source of supply, water was to be supplied from Un sen hern timen was such interference and the consequent free supply. The orders also show that mather cases water was to be supplied to ramindars under engagements to pay at certain rates. We see here no such payment received or deman led. We further find that even as to the rootward lands the (sovernment proceedings directed that engagements should be entered into aid that the Government presumed that, when the ryo a prepared their lands for errigal or an i received water from such irrigation sources an on-a oment might be implist a ler these circumstances, urless the free sapply of water from bod sarilained by towarnment, it appears to me thapresimption, not only natural but almost arresutable, is that there was an implied engagement between the parties f r ti o free austir of water. The Judge stabily observes a "the Act was an embodiment of the Government Order", but he builds that "it was for the samindar to have entered into an engagement with Government as to the scatter of irragation to which he was entitled. In my opinion he is wrong in holding that an express agreement is necessary. That the plannish was irrigating the lands in not with Government water free of charge is clear endonce that he was entitled to water sufficient to irrigate them either because they we then being irrigated with his tank water or could have been so irrigated or it was only on those conditions that he permitted any interferences with his property The Government Pleader contends that, though there may be an engagement. it is only to the effect that the samundars are entitled to receive from the Covernment water necessary for the old customary arrigation of their lands, that is to say, they are only entitled to water sufficient to irrigate that area which is entered as wet in the permanent settlement accounts, and, in the absence of any allegation in the plaint that the land for which they claim free supply of water is land so entered as wet in the old accounts, the plaintiff is not entitled to maintain the suit. If the argument is that the 'engagement' in 1863 with reference to this cetate had reference only to the old nettlement accounts to the knowledge of both the parties, it is open to the Government to plead it and prove the same That would be an express igreement. Otherwise it cannot be used to limit the plaintiff's olsim based on the state of things in 1863. For, the zamindar may have improved the capacity of his tank or increased the erea of his wet cultivation since the sanad and the sopply of water most have been made to compensate him for his less then sustained If the argument is that an engagement' referred to is to be amplied from the conditions that existed at the date of the permanent sanad, it is not an answer to the plaintiff's claim, because, if the facts imply an engagement in 1863 when the supply was obstrocted that there was another engage ment in 1802 or afterwards when the permanent sanad was granted unless it is shown that that is the only engagement which is inteeded by the Act of 15: 5 is not material. The section itself is not restricted to any engagement at the time of the permanent settlement. And I have no doubt it was open to the parties to enter into any engagement at any time they liked. The plaintiff may be entitled to say that if the old Gudient wet area according to the Dermancot settlement accounts entitled him to more land than what he cow claims then he should be entitled to the free cultivation of lands to that extent in addition He may also be entitled to say if he was getting water sufficient to cultivate more lands than the area he now claims he is entitled to such quantity of water and cultivate more lands with it as it is reasonable to presume that the Govern ment could not have intended to deprive a man of his property without compensation. This is apparently the effect of GO No 2MG, 17th Jane 159a 'where the manual wet areas to be allowed are found to be in excess of the highest recorded areas under wet cultivation in the village concerned the maximum area arragble should be allowed." It is nanecessary however to consider this question as he makes no such claim in the plaint. The rules, already extracted. in force at the time the Act was passed, support this conclusion. He is entitled to exemption if his pre-existing source of anpply is interfered with or if the accounts show a manu assessment or if the title-deed supports the claim. The one is not exclusive of the others. Thin Act, as rightly pointed out by the Judge being only an embodiment, so far as this matter is concerned, of the pre existing rule, an engagement will be implied if may of these grounds exist. The tanks, if any, in the samin undoubtedly belonged to the asmindar. The Government law no claim to them. It is not probable that there was therefore any engagement by the Government to supply water for the progration of such lands under those tanks. From where could the Oovernment supply such water? Not from these tanks with which they had nothing to do, and it is not shown there was any other source of water supply No engagement can therefore be implied. An engagement can only be implied in those cases in which it was in the power of the Government to stop the supply of the water claimed or when they undertook to supply such water themselves. Otherwise I see no reason for any unil ed contract so far as the lands arrigated with any pre-existing source of supply which did not belong to the Government are concerned For these reasons I am unable to accept the Government Pleader s argument that the engagement tybe proved has reference only to the wet area as shown in the permanent settlement accounts. It, however, it is necessary to prove what the area was so entered, then, the fact that these lands were under cultivation from 1863 to 1889, and it is not shown by the Government that the lands were brought under cultivation only some time after the permanent sansil was granted, would be evidence to show that they were mampl wet even at the date of the permanent settlement. The permeent settlement accounts are with the Government and if the extent to wet cultivation under these tanks is referred to in those accousts, it is for the Government to produce them if it is material. The only case that has been cited in argument before as is against the Government Pleuder's contention. Secretary of State v. Komesiaramma(1) was a similar case and the learned Judges, Bassov and Mittas, if, stated the question in these torms. The question of of docusion in this appeal is in effect what, is the estant of land in the village of Ravipad which was irrigible from the irrigation works existing before the construction of the Godavan amout irrigation system. I calified agree It appeared that various accounts showed the various extent of lands under collisation bet they adopted the greatest are trigited which no doubt showed those hands were expalled of trigitation works before the days of concut. They did not jut the plaintiff to proof of what the settlement area was I am therefore of opinion that, if the facts relied upon by the plaintiff toe proved, a case of actions is shakeded. If a Judges it therefore directed to return findings on the issues in the case. It will be of on to him to direct the Budgest hands.

Antar, J.

Singuists Attar, J-I concer in the decision just now pronounced by my learned brother, and if ladd a few words in my own language, it is mixely on account of the importance of the questions involved in this case. This is one of the accessance of the concentration of the forestions involved in this case of the content of the content of the content is not of the content in the following and hintended and other works counciled therewith in the Goldram and hintended of certain land likely or interfered with this flow of water to the tanks which formerly only fined water for irrigation to such lands. The Proceedings of the Board of Revenus, date it he lith Peturusy 1803, contain the following —

"When it e system of smeat irregation was introduced into the Godarsri and histon leltas Government allowed free irregation from the anicuts, to all lands which, owing to the construction of the several amout channels, and other works connected therewith, were found to have lost, wholly or partially, their pre-careting sources of supply (G.O. No. 101, Royenne, dated 18th January 1864).

This shows that about 1864, the Government offered to allow free irrigation from the amounts to such lands as were deprived of their former sources of supply The owners of such lands who did not enter into litigation with the Government in order to prevent Government from interfering with the old sources of supply and who took the water applied by the Government from the Government amounts must be taken to have accepted the offer of Government as saturfaction of their claims against Government. The fourth paragraph of the plaint in this case says that the Government supplied the plaintiff's land with water from the year 1863 to fash 1900 and that the plaintiffs accepted such water. There was, in my opinion, therefore a clear, completed engagement between the Government and the plaintiff set out in the plaint and hence the plaint shows a good cause of action. Similar suits to this were instituted by the proprietrix of the village of Pavipadu, the proprietor of Chinchineda and by two other proprietors in 1902 in the District Court of Godsvar: Mr Hemnett, the learned District Judge who decided those suite. acted upon the Government Order of 1864 and found on unplied engagement between the Government and the proprietors of those ostetes and gave effect to that engagement as against the Government On appeal to the High Court by the Government, it was contended as the very first ground in the appeal memorandum [see the appeal memorandom in Secretary of State v Kemeswaramms(1)] that the District Judge erred is law in finding that there was an implied contract between the 1 laintiff and the Government to allow free irri getion for the extent of land, the progration source of which had been cut off by the anicut works. The learned Judgee (Ranson and Mitter 1J) who decided that appeal and connected Appeals Nos 183 and 184 of 1904 any nothing in that contention and begin their judgment at once with the sentence "The question for decision in this appeal is as effect what is the extent of land in the village of Ravij ad which was irrigable from the arrigation source a existing before the construction of the Godsvari amount arrigation system ' bollowing the decision in those appeals, we must in this case set aside the electatons of the lower Courts which held that the plaint discloses no cause of action. I may add that in Secretary of State v Kamern aram ad (1) it was assumed that if there was an engagement between the Government and the proprietor that engagement was to supply water free of tax on the extent of land which was irricable from the irrication works existing test before the construction of the Godayurs anicut trrigation works, and not merely on the lands which were arrigable as wet lands at the tans of the permanent settlement. The contention of the karned Government Pleader before us that the engagement in utioned in Act VII of 1865, section I (a) relates to the engagement at the time of the permanent settlement cannot be accepted in the face of the decision in Secretary of State v Kamesuaramma(1) It seems unreasonable to bold that after a landholder has improved his samundars and brought between 1502 and 1564, a large extent of land under wet culturation by improving his irrigation sources, when the Government by their new anicut system out off the

STAIR BENSON AND SUNUARA

Onore -To enable us to decide this appeal satisfactorily, we consider it desirable to allow the parties to address further evidence on the following point -Secretary (1) What, if anything, passed to the grantee under Exhibit XX under the words besides perembake, and whether she obtained a right to the channels conveying water to the tanks prigating the lands of the Lakkamdidi village or to these tanks themselves? ATYAS JJ.

The lower Court has not dealt with this point in its judgment, but eppeare to heve assumed that the Government did not reserve the channels and tanks at the time of the Inam settlement

We request the District Judge to take the additional evilence that the parties may adding and to autimit the same together with his opinion on the effect of such evidence within one month after the re opening of the District Court after the recess.

In pursuance of the above order, the District Judge of Ganjam took edditional evidence, both oral and documentary. As regards the oral evidence be found that it was of very little use. The accounts given by the witness mucht be set aside as of little value in coming to a conclusion on the question whether the mandars of the plaint village of Lakkamdida were entitled to the beds of the plaint bellsmanchili channel and its sub-channels so fur as those beds lay within the limits of the Inam village of I akkemdidi

As regards the documentary evidence he found that the plant village of Lakkamdidi was one of the villages in the Chicagole Havels. Before 170d the Havely belonged to the Mogal Lanteror. The Emperor granted the management of the Circurs to the last India Company, which leased the lands in Chicacole to one Sharam I as. The latter granted Lakkamdidi to Kannepille Hamavadhauniu for subsistance It was hekabogha Agrahar up to 5th February 1561 on which date the bolder of the village died leaving Kannepilli Venkatarati amma,-his children young widow (sea Recitals in 1 thibit 10) llavel, lands were resumed by the towersment from the temperary I sees and seld in lots in 1503 and 1804 to the lighest bidders on permanent settlement. Twenty proprietary estates were formed by the sale of the Chicagole Haysh lands in 1403 One of them was Jarjangs. The plaint Agrahamam village of Lakkamdidi was with a Jarjanai. The proprieters of those twenty estates were entitled to get only latitudade. The Government seemed to have nearred to themselves the reversionary right in the inam tenures included in these propertiesy estates (See page 149,) xhabit >) There would be no doubt that Lakkamida was an

Yekahboga Agraharam (whole willage usum) enjoyed by Brahmun manudars Bendes the major whole village usums there were minor mama which related to grants of defined extents of lands as contrasted with grants of entire villages (see paragraph 29, page 155 of Exhibit N)

A reversionary right to resume the mam on failure of direct lineal heirs seemed to have been always asserted by the Government [Gunnasyan v hamakchi Ayyar(1)] In 1854 the Government wished to give up their rever- Ayyan, JJ sionary interests in the Whole village mams and similar mams situated in the zamindens after fixing a permanent quit rent. The Deputy Collector as Inam Commissioner, being appointed to fix such values, prepared the register for Lakkamdidi (Exhibit 16) The whole village of Lakkamdidi was an Yeka bhoga mam till the middle of the 19th Century. Then one tenth of the village area seemed to have passed to Ravi Janikiramayya by a court suction sale and nine tenths was enjoyed by Kannepilla Vonkataratusmum. Two title deeds were usued to Venkataratnamma and Janukiramayya in 1867. Neither of these is forthcoming now. The form of grants then obtaining in respect of whole village mam title-deeds appeared from Exhibits K, K 7, K-10, K 11, L-1, 2 (a) and 2 (b). The form in the first page first set out the grantee's present title and was then followed by the Government proposals to give no their raversionary right in consideration of a quit raut. Then on the second page, the conversion into free hold in favour of the grantee was entered as the grantee had agreed to pay the quit-rent damanded. The form in page 1, paragraphs 1-3 was as follows -

- 1. On behalf of the Governor in Conneil of Medras, I acknowledge your title to the stretterm village of loaned to be of conneil of dry land and acres of welland and acres of welland bendes pormabole
- 2 This inem is subject to a jodi or quatrent of . . . sud is hard-ditary, but it is not intherwise transferable, and in the event of failure of lineal lines to the lines to will large to the setate
- 3. Ou won' agreeing to pay au sunual quit-rent of . inclusive of the jods already charged on the hand as above said, your man tenura will be converted into a permanent free hold

Yeukairarianama got her title-deed in this form (dry and wet hands "besides porsimbles") It had to be osserted that in the case of minor inama, the title deeds issued about that time did not contain the measurery additional words "besides porambeles" Act VIII of 1869 mode clear that only the rights of Government were intended to be pranted and that no proprietary right in the soil (which did not atready saist in any patieular mandar) were it tended to be newly given About 1898 Ventataratanama wanted a renows of bor last title-deed of 1867. Exhibit 20 was issued to her on 20th Jane 1893. Although this title-deed spring from that of 1867 in some patienalars, it followed the old form including the insertioned the manurery words, "therefore particular particulars of the first title-deed of these words of the manurery nords," one very important entry oppared in Exhibit K-2 (the Lukulem Register of 1862). The Issue Commissioner first mentioned the spatial axtent of the lands in Lukulam for purposes of visition.

Then he made this important note "The agrahamandars have nothing to do with the bed of the river," that is, he denied their titles to the steps marked (a) and (b) above not of the peramboke stems but he did not say that the agraharamdars had an right to the other paramboke arcus, itoms (b) to (f), (h), (e) which included the channels (e) and tanks (h). The Government must have intended by the insertion of the words "besides toramboke" in the major mam title deeds issued between 1863 and 1867 to acknowledge the trile of the mamders to the peramboku lands along with the cultivated dry, wet and parden lands. The insertion of the words could not mean that only the Government right to revenue from porambole land was given to the mumdar, because peramboke lands were not assessed to revenue. The interpretation of the words as meaning "escluding permuloke." or " the Government reserving to itself the por imboke " was to may the lesst, far-fetched By the words "besides the paramtoke" the Government acknowledged the title of the mandars of the whole mam village to the channel hads, and tanks in dispote

This Appeal coming on for Shel hessing, after the return of the finding of the Lower Court, and the case having stood over for consideration the Court delivered the following:

JUDGMENT

The District Judge (Mr Sadsaira Ayrar) has submitted the frish evilence sildaced both by the plaintiff and the Government and I as expressed his of thion that by the words ' besides poramboks' in the insin title-died, Exhibit XX tiven to the insimilar - providetor of the village -the Covernment acknowledge ! the title of the mander to the channel beds and tanks in dispute. The classe of the Government to water cost cannot be maintained ucless the water arrigating the village flows directly or indirectly from any river, stream, channel, tank or work belonging to or constructed by Government. According to the former District Judge's finding the Garebulagedda which irrivates the lands in the village takes its rise in the Parlakimed; samindart and does not pass through any Government lands before it irricates the plaint village; and the Government las not exercised any control over the golds. But it was contended at the former houring of the appeal that, although there is no crudence that the channel or stream and the lanks irricating the village belong to Garrisment it must be presumed that the ownership thereof is vested in it by virtue of section 2 of Act III of 1905 (Madras I and Eucroschments Act) which cusets (we quote only the necessary portion of the section) that" the Led of the aca and all larbours and creeks below high water mark and of rivers, streams, lakes and tanks and all car a'a and water-courses and all standing and flowly gwater and all lands wite rever astunted, and in so far as the name are the property (a) if any samudar, policar mittadar jagbirdar, abrotriemdar, or ham lat or any pers n claiming through or I loing under any of them . . . are and bereby declared to be the property of Government, except as may be otherwise provided by any law for the time being in force, sobject always to all rights of way and other table rights and to the natural as I casement rights of atler land-owners and all customary rights legally subsisting.\(^{1}\) It was contended for the planetiff, the inaméer that the section does not really after the law as previously under stood and that the cleanels passing through the whole man village cannot be presumed to be the property of the Government. We considered it desirable to call for a fading on the question whether by the gravet of the main to the neamdar the title to the chancel irrigating the village belonged to the mandar.

The original main titlo-deed which was granted by the Government in 1867, has not been re-inced. It is stated to have been destroyed. A fresh title deed which was granted in 1898 has been produced and is marked as Exhibit XX An extract from the luam register, Exhibit XVI has also here produced. It appears from it that the leam was uriginally granted in 1767 to one Kanneralli Ramavadhanulu as personal heroditary mam by Sitaramraz Sitaramraz was the brother of Viziaramrez the thon Zemendar of Vizianagram. He was a renter under the Eest India Company which had obtained a Firman from the Meghul Emperor greeting the management of the circurs to the Company The rillage to question was accluded in the Chicago e Haveli in 1802. The Governmeet sold its Haveli lands in 1803-04 to the highest hidders on permanent settle ment and 20 preprietary estates were formed by the eale of the Chicacole Havels The village to question is situated in oos of the asmiedaris so formed enmed Jersegs Tho mam villago was excluded from the permanent settlement of the January Estate The proprietor of the estate was centiled only to get the Latinbuds fixed so the village, the right of resumption of the mem being reserved by the Government The Government subsequently recognised the mam granted by Sitaramaras and settled the mam with the mandars and granted a tatta to them The seam register Exhibit XVI dees not show that the Government actended to exclude any portion of the mam which had been originally granted ie 1707 I zhibit XVI shows the mode in which the quit-rent payable for the village was fixed, the perumbokes consisting of channels, taoks villa e sites vattis, burial grounds, bills as well as jungto and pasture lands together amounting to 116 acres wes excluded from the total acreage of the village. The assessment was fixed on the cultivated dry and wet land Lxhibit XX. the main patts of 1898, shows that the Government schenwledged tha titla of the mandats to the whole village It states "I acknowledge your title to a personal many consisting of the right to the Government revenue of land claimed to be 108 38 acres of dry 218 53 of wet and 13 acres of garden and situated in the Jarjangt proprietary shrotriam portion of the village of Lakkimdidt of Chicacule, district of Ganjam " The words " besides porsubose " are main al in the margin, the extent of this porambeks being as appears from Exhibit AVI, 116 acres The District Judge assumes that the original title deed must fave also acknowledged the mander's title to the shrotriam village and to more ist if a certain extent of dry and wet land besides persuabole. This secure ; is base ton the form of grants assed in respect of who'e village mains asset to ing from the title doeds granted by the Government for other villag # 1 on behalf of the plaintiff It is unnoccessary to consider whether this a t on was safely made It is contended on behalf of the Governmen. object of the Inam title deed was only to recognise the manular's Government revenue or melveram of the village and measurable of enfranchised to bito up the Government's right of team place, melvaram was levied or payable on porambokes there could have been no intention to recognize the marndar's title to any poramitoke by the grant of title deed We do not decide in this case that the more insertion in the majorn of the titledeed of the words "besides poramboke" must necessarily be taken to be an scinowledgment by the Government of the mandar's title to all kinds of poram boke. It was held in Narayanasuams w Kannsappo(1) by this Court that such is not the necessary effect of the insertion of those words. The question in that case related to the bed of a stream. The main there was granted by the British Government in 1602 in licu of certain lands held as emploments of the office of Natturer which had been resumed by the Government No boundaries were stated in the documents relating to the grant and no montion was made of the river or river bed. The Court held that notwithstanding the insertion of the words "braides personboke" in the margin of the title deed the documents in the case showed that it was not intended to acknowledge the mandar's title to the bed of the stream In Ambelarana Pandara Sarnadhi v Secretary of State for India(2, it was held that a grant of villago " with all wells, tanks and waters" within the boundaries did not pass to the grantee an artificial water-course then naisting which irrusted the village granted and other lands. There was no meetion in the grant of the channel although the existence and importance of channels as acparate entities was present to the mind of the granter and although tanks and wells were separately mentioned. It was held that the emission of the channel was intentional and that from that circumstance it was clear that it could not have been the intention of Government to recognise the mandar's title to the changel or its bed. The effect to be given to the insertion of the words "besides peramboke" must depend on the cridence available in each case and the circumstances attending the grant. In this case it is extremely unlikely that when the whole of the village was granted in 1767 by Sitaramras it was not intended to convey to the grantes all the waste and perambekes in the village. The British Government accepted that grant and recognised the manidar's title under it. The channel was not one which passed through any Government property before it reached the villace of Lakkimidlds. It is apparently not a large stream consected with any system distriction maintained by Government and as found by the former District Judge the channel was not controlled by the Government to any appreciable ratent. There was no intention on the part of Government at any time to deronate from the grant made to 1767. Noth of the Iraned District Jungia who dealt with the case proceeded on the footing that the channel and other poramloke in the vitaen belonged to the mandar. On the whole we see no reason to dissent from that conclusion. It has therefore not been rived that the water regioning the village belongs to Government. In the result, we dismiss the at peal with coats. The in-morandize of objections has not been argued at the also diamlesed with costs.

He states that a natural stream Hannmanadhi which takes ite rise in the Western Chats flows through his village that he has been taking the water of that river to his tanks, six in number at certain seasons of the year when it was required for the irrigation of his lands , that in order to divert the water into his channels he had to put up a dam across the river-bed sa the river is on a level lower than that of the channels and water could not flow into them when it was knee deep or less than that and that he has been done so. according to him from time immemorial. The dam consisted of a mesonry anicut with interstices between the vertical stones which he filled up when necessary with mud or palmyia leaves. The plaint states that the mesonry ament in some places was damaged and he had therefore, to put up a temporary mud dam in front of it, for diverting the water into his channels. The first defendant the Government, recently levied an assessment from him for taking the water into his tanks. The other defendants are the ryota of some of the neighbouring villages who also deny plointiffs right to take water as claimed by him. He therefore scoke a declaration of his right to take the water of the stream to his tanks by diverting it into the channels and for that purpose to put up a dem acrose the river bed, and also a declaration that the Government had no right whetever to levy any tex on him for teking such water. The heat defendant who is the Secretory of State for India in Cooncil denies that the river where it passes through his village belongs to the plaintiff. It is separted that the river belongs to Government and that the plaintiff at the time of the mam grant did not acquire any rights claimed in the plaint to the use of the water It is else denied that the suicut belongs to the plaintiff or that he is entitled to put up any dam across the river or to take water as he alleges through the channel for purposes of progation. The Government also allege that the plaintiff cen only take weier to irrigate the lands which were under wet cultivation at the time of theiram grant and that the assessment was imposed because he utilized the water of the stream for the purpose of reising name crop on lands on which at wes not mend to raise before. The other defendants also deny the plaintiff s right. They allege that if the plaintiff is allowed to take water as claimed by 1 im arretrievable loss and injury would be caused to the defendants who lold lands below. anicut being now in disregair the plaintiff has put up n mud-dam in front of it to divert the water. At some distance below that snicut the river hiforests and at or near the point of infercation the plaintiff has put up a mud dam to prevent the flow of water elong one of the branches and to make it flow into the other, that is the castern brench that he might take it into his Uramali tank

The 1 lanuaff's case is that this eyetem of teking water into his tanks has been in existence from time immemnial. The subordinate jodge has found that the anicut across the bed of the river was built by the plaintiff's predecessors within the limits of the Adangarkulam village, that the river Hannmanadh; ran through the village both the banks of the river belonging to the plaintiff He also found that he was a reparam owner of the mam village. The question whether he was a riparian owner was raised apparently with reference to the plaintiff's claim as an mamdar. On the question whether the plaintiff was critifled to take this water he found that the plaintiff as a riparian proprietor was entitled to take the water for the irrigation of his own lands without caosing any material injury to the other meaning proprietors and that the method he had adopted of constructing amouts for the purpose of damming the river was in the circumstances of the case, the only reasonable method of enjoying his right. Ha slie found that no material injury was thereby caused to the other riperian proprietors. He also came to the conclusion that the plaintiff's predecessors-in-title had been potting up the dams to question end thereby diverting the water of the stream into his channels for a very long time probably from the year 1803 and certainly for more than 30 years. He was therefore of opioion that even if the plaintiff's natural right to take the water as a reparish proprietor has not been proved be has proved a right by prescription to take the water and he was slee of opioion that to the circumstances of the case there is a presumption of a great by the Government in favour of the plaintiff. He further held that the first defendant was not justified in imposing penal assessment on the ground that the planetiff had put up a dam and that the plaintiff as a riparian owner was coulded to the ose of his stream to irrigate his main village to soy extent provided he did not thereby interfere with the rights of the other riparian owners either above or below him It was also held that it was only when the plaintiff used Governmeet water for the arrigation of any laods in excess of the original area that the Government had a right to raise any revenue on that account and that this was not Government water in that sense The other questions which were argued before him and decided are not material for the purposes of this Second Appeal lie eccordingly passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff declaring his right to put np s dam in the river

In appeal it is first controded before us that the finding of the Judge that the dam crected at A in the phase across the bed of the river to take water to the five tanks in within the plantiffs willage of Adeagarkulam is wrong. The Survey plan of the man wilage of Adeagarkulam on the west of the river and of Thanakulam on the east of it, shows that the bed of the aream is welnded within the limits of Adangarkulam. The river at that place is called Adangarkulam river in the Fymash accounts and is described as the boundary of another wilage, Kelyenskham also on the eastern side ($\Lambda$). The Government Revence accounts of 1803 treat the bed of the stream adjoining it as part of the Adangarkulam village (Exhibits E, R. 1, and N-2). These are the reasons given by the learned Subordinate Judge for his finding,

The Advocate General however states that though the village is recognized as belonging to the plaintiff and the descriptions of the boundaries and the Revenue accounts of the village may show that the river hed is included within its limits, yet unless it is expressly stated that the -iver had is conveyed it will not pass and he relies upon the decision in Narayanasi ams v Kannsappa(1) and in Kondappaneni hotoyia v Ganqueri Seshayya(2) That was a case of a grant on shrotriem tenure an lat is stated in the judgment that the object of the grant was to make a provision for an nificual whose nifics was no longer necessary and "what was regarded was the land as pro lucing an income " In the case before na there is no grant produced. There is therefore nothing to inbut the inference drawn by the Subordinate Judge from the facts above set forth. It also appears that the plaintiff and his predecessors have been exercising acts of ownership in the bed of the stream by putting no atone pillars. Moreover when the plaintiff epplied to the Inam department of the Revenne Board office that the poramboke in the village may be ordered to be expressly jucladed in the Inam patta he received this reply, " It is not the practice to enter the extent of peramboke lands too in the pattas issued on the Settlement of the whole village. The term entire village includes the persuaboke and all niber faods which are within the four boundaries and comprised in mam patta Hink The mamdar, therefore, may enjoy in any way he pleases all the lands within the boundaries of each village, There is no necessity to pay separate tax to Government for it " (Exhibit S). I uphold the finding of the Subordinate Judge un this question

It is next urged by the learned Advocate-General that the plaintiff's claim to erect a band or dam up a river is nareasonable. The plaintiff is a riparian proprietor be bas a natural right to use the water of the stream for irrigating the lands of his Adangarkulam village provided by does not thereby came any material injury to the other riparian proprietors. What quantity of water be in entitled to take and how he is to take it for irrigating the lands must depend upon the circumstances of each case. Freeting a dam or band across the bed of a river when it is low to raise the water to a sufficient height to divert it into an artificial channel for irrigation is one of the common methods in this Presidency of using the water of a stream by a riparion proprietor. That o dam may be erected when it is reasonably required for the use of stream water is recognised by the Judicial Committee See Miner v Gilmour (3) and Dabi Pershad Singh v Jounath Singh(4) The Subordinate Judge in a careful indgment finds that, when the water in the stream is only knee deep or below that level, the erection of bunds in raise the level to divert the water into channels is necessary for purposes of irrigation. He finds that the holders of land above and below have been similarly creeting bungs to take water in their lands. Six permanent unicuts above and two below were erected by the Government to divert stream water into irrigation channels In 1873 1874, 1852 and 1889 the existence of the dam and sts prejudicial effects on the cultivation of Government ryotwars lands was brought to the notice of the Government and they recognized the plaintiff's right to take water by the erection of dams (Exhibit O) It is difficult to believe that, if this had been nansual, it would have received any recognition. There is therefore strong evidence to support the conclusion of the Subordinata Judge that the areation of bunds at certain seasons when the water was only knee deep is reasonable and in Second Appeal we cannot interfere with that finding

AMBALAYAN PANDARA SANNADHI BANKARAN NAIR J The Subordanate Judgo also finds that no material migray has been caused to the defendants by the erection complained of We therefore uphold the decision of the Subordanate Judgo that the plaintift has it eright to erect dams which he has created to onjoy his natural nights No objection has been taken to the dimensions of the dam or to the time of its eschool

The Sabordante Judge goes further and finds that even if material injury was caused to the other reparam preprietors they are not entitled to complain as the plaintiff has accurred a right to take water to his tanks by prescription. He finds that even if the masonry ament was put up for the first time only in 1872 or 1872 the plaintiff has been damming up the etream to take water through his channels to his tanks for irrigation by putting up mud or sand dams across the bed of the river long before that time. He finds from the documentary and coral evidence adduced in the case that these channels have been in asistence as apply channels for his tanks from before the year 1803. He discredits the defendant's evidence that they were only marketly or disninge channels. This finding is supported by evidence and we see no reason to interfers with it, and on the finding also the plaintiff is entitled to the declaration that he has obtained

It is contended on behalf of the Government that the plaintiff was not entitled to take water to raise wet crops on lands on which hitherto it was only oustomary to raise dry crops, on the ground that it must be taken that the plaintiff was only entitled to receive so much of the water of the stream as was conceded to him by the Government when the village was granted to him in mam, and if he takes any more water he is hable to pay any assessment that may be unposed under the Madras Act VII of 1865. The Subordinate Judge disallowed this olarm on the ground that the river did not belong to the Government under section I of that Act as he had found that it ran through the plaintiff's village the banks on either side belonging to him and size on the ground that he is a ripsian proprietor. It is however urged by the learned Advocate General that under Act III of 1905 whatever might have been the law before it must now he taken that the water of the stream belongs to the Govern ment The provisions of this Act were not considered by the Suber limit, Judge as the sort was restricted in 1904 before the Act was passed. In reply to this it is arged before us by the respondent's pleader that first of all, the Act did 106 interfere with the rights which existed before and the riparian rights of the plaintiff are preserved and secondly that neither the water nor the stream belonged to the Government It was also niged that on the facts found in this case there was an engagement be ween the plaintiff and the Givernment by which the former was entitled to irrigation free of charge. It is not contended that the plaintal has taken more water than he has been taking before. It appears that he has taken water from the river only to fill the traks as he has been doing bitherto. The carrying capacity of the clannels is not said to be greater now than before 1 or 13 it said that the tanks have been widened or deepened 10 order to take in more water than fitherto. The plaintiff is clearly entitled to arrigation of such land as it is an his power to do so with the water which according to the hadings he is entitled to take from the stream. The right that is proved as the right to take the water until the tanks are filled. It is not shown that he has taken more water than that We must therefore disallow the contention on this ground. The Second Appeals are dismassed with costs under section 32, Crivi Procedure Code. We allow a period of three menths for payment of costs. ADDER RABIN, J.—I agree

At the time of the suit the lands were in the possession of the second defendant. The original demises, tho first defendant, assigned his rights to one Krishnan Nair in 1894 He subsequently in 1901 attorned to one Kodalur Namhadri who claimed the lands as the property of a temple Kizhuthir Lovil Davasyam The secood defeodant subsequently, obtained an assignment of the rights of Krishnan Nair The second defendant demed the plaintiff's right to redeem the mortgage and set up the right of the Devasyam to the lands and his holding nuder the Re denied the genuineness of the demise sued on , but both the lower Courts have held it to he genuine of the findings of the Appellate Court at as unnecessary to refer to certain other contentions raised by the second defendant the kanom deed, Exhibit VII, the lands in question are described as belonging to the temple and the counterpart Kychit, Lxhibit A, provides that the annual rest should be paid at the Devasyam Office

Both the lower Courts have found that the lands helong to The District Munsif gave the the Kizhuthir kovil Devasyam plaintiff a decree for possession He said, "I find that the plaint properties are attached to the Kizhuthir Loyd Devasyam proper ties and belong to the plaintiff and that they are held under the plaint Kychit, Exhibit A He was of opinion that the second defendant who was an assignee from the assignee of the original kanomdar was estopped from denying the planutiff's title to recover the properties and was bound to surrender them One of the two defendant's contentions was that it had been finally decided between the plaintiff and Kodalur Nambudri that the latter was the trustee of the temple and not the former, but the District Munsif decided this issue in the negative in plaintiff's favour

On appeal, the Subordinata Judgo held that the plaintiff's claim to the trusteeship of the temple was negatived long before the suit and that he was not the present trustee of the temple He also held that as the lands were demised by the plaintiff's father as the property of the temple and as the plaintiff was not BENEGY AND the present trustee thereof he could not claim to recover the land and dismissed the suit Tho District Munsif's judgment is rather confused. While holding that the lands belong to the temple, he also observes that they might have been kept apart as property belonging to the plaintiff's family when the temple itself was made over to the Kodalur Nambudri in 1848 by a member of the plaintiff's family It is not quite clear whether he intended to decree the lands to the plaintiff as the private property of his Illom or as the property of the temple His judgment must he regarded as based on his finding that the second defen lint was estopped from denying the title of the plaintiff from whose father the Lanom was originally obtained by the first defendant It is quite clear that if the lands still belong to the temple and if the plaintiff is no longer its trustee, the principle of estoppel would not apply masmuch as the demise was made by the plaintiff's father as trustee of the temple. The temple heing the

Mr T R Ramachandra Ayyar, the learned vakil for the appellant, contends that the temple itself is treated in the demise as the property of the demisor and that thursfore the plaintif's father must be treated as having demised the property rs his own This proposition clearly cannot be upheld. Even assuming that there is foundation for the appellant's argument, that the temple was a private one in which the public had no rights, it is quite clear that it was still trust property though the beneficiaries might be only members of the Patharkara family The lands demised would also be trust property attached to the private temple. It is argued the stipulation for payment of rent at the temple office merely described the place where the rent was to be delivered and did not indicate the ownership of the temple over the lands but taken dong with the clear description of the lands in the kanom deed as belonging to the temple, we have no heatation in confirming the finding of the Suberdinate Judge that the lands in question wore demised by plaintiff's father as the trustee of the temple Ne attempt his been made at the hearing to dispute the correctness of the finding that the plaintiff at the date of the suit had no right whatever over the temple It would therefore follow that the decree dismissing the suit must be upheld

Mr Ramachandra Ayyar urges two contentions in support of his argument that the plaintiff is entitled to recover the property First, that the right of the temple and of the Kodalur Nambudri as trusted thereof to the property is extinguished by limitation and that the plaintiff has acquired a right thereto by adverse possession secondly, that assuming the property to have been originally temple property, it ceased to be such in 1848 and that it has sloce remained as private property

It will be convenient to deal with the latter contention first The second defendant in his written statement stated that, in 1814 at a division between the thon karnavan of Pathatkaramana and an adopted son of his, subsequent to the birth of a natural born son. the temple was assigned to the adopted son and that this person sold the temple with its properties to the Kodalur Nambuda in 1848 The denuise in question in this suit, it will be remembered. was in 1866 by the Pathaikar, Numbudri subsequent to the transfer of the devasyam to the Kodalur Numbudri The argu ment is that the temple being a private one in which the members of the Pathaikaramana alone had any beneficial rights, the trust ceased to exist when it passed away to the Kodalur Nambudri in 1848 To begin with, this argument is based on the assumption that the temple was a prayate devasvam and not a public one The District Munsif no doubt observes in paragraph 11 of his judgment, "It is admitted that the Devasvam was a private property of the plaintiff's mana ' But the Subordinate Judge says, There is no admission of the defendants on record that the Devasyam was a private property of plaintiff's mann and set apart to an adopted son after the birth of a 'natural' son as stated by the District Mausif in paragraph 11 of his judgment" Evidently the defendants demed in the Court of Appeal that they made any admission regarding the private character of the We cannot, in the circumstances, proceed on the assumption that the temple was a private institution.

assuming that it was such, we cannot assume that the trust cea ed to exist when the Kodalur Nambadri obtained a transfer of the temple Admittedly, there were disputes about the temple the Pathauaramina and the Kodalurmana regarding the right of management of the temple, and the question was finally decided in favour of the Kodalurmana. This is not reconcilable with the cossation of the temple as a religious institution with properties attached to it. Even in this soit the plaintiff contended before the Mussif that he was the manager of the temple. After the transfer to the hadalurousna the presumption would be even if the temple was a private one, that the numbers of the Kodalurmin; it least would all be entitled as beneficiaries, to the temple and its properties. The temple would still continue to own the lands attached to it though the benenciaries might have changed by the transfer to the Redelur It is not shown that the plaint hads ceased to belong to the temple by their being severed from it hy any valid act on the part of the trustee The demised property must therefore still be recurded as belonging to the temple and vesting in its trustee uple-s the right of the temple has been extinguished by limitation It is therefore necessary to deal with the contention that the plaintiff has acquired a right to the property by adverse pos ession Ur Ramichandra Ayyar argues that as the plaintiff and his father have always continued to remain in possession of the lands the temple has lest its right under the statute of But the demise in one tion was made by the limitation plaintiff a fither as the representative and trustee of the temple In 1866 when the demise was made the demiser was evidently claiming to be the trustee and the higgation which negatived his right ended only in 1894 We must hold that the demisor numorted to deal with the lands as trustee of the temple As a matter of fact, he has been held to be not trustee now He never succeeded in acquiring the right of trusteeship by adverse nossession But when a person purports to hold the property as a trustee, he cannot by such possession acquire a right to the property by pre-cription for hunself against the beneheraries In determining what right adver o posse sion would confer on the holder the ansenus presidends is the decisive factor. The character in which po session is held must determine the right which the possession would confir Thus a person who has

In Secretary of State for India v Krishnamoni Gupta(3), the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council held that if a person is in possession as the tenant of another of land which really belongs to bunself he would lose his right by continuing to hold as tenaut for the statutory period because, in reality, his possession is that of the landlord Kernaghan v M'Nally(4), it was held, in a case where wrongful possession was neld by a person as cestur que trust under a will which did not divide the property, that his possession would be regarded as the possession of the trustee and would mure to the benefit of all who would take if the preperty had really been demised to him. "A person purporting to act as trustee cannot be allowed to say for his own benefit that he bad no night to act as trustee and is estopped from taking advantage of the lapse of time" In Lyell v Kennedy'1), this principle was affirmed by the House of Lords There a person was managing certain land as the agent of a life tenant After the death of the life owner be continued to receive the rents and pay them into the Bank as ho was doing before, not informing the tonants in actual occupation by stating to several persons that be was acting as agent and receiver for the true owner whoever he might be, after the expiration of twelve years from the death of the life tenant he claimed the property on his own account. The assignees of the heir brought an action against him to recover possess on of the land, and for an account of the rent and profits. The House of Lords held that the agent could not claim any right by virtue of his possession as he purported to hold on behalf or the true beir whoever he might be Lord Selsonne regarded the principle es well established Atter referring to the earlier cases-Rackham v. Siddall(2) and Life Association of Scotland v Siddal(3)-His Lordship observed, "The principle of those decisions, as stated by TURNER, LJ, in the latter case, was, that n person who had assumed to be a trustee 'could not be beard to say, for his own benefit that he had no right to act as a trustee Mr Lewin, in his learned and accurate treatise upon the Law of Trusts, thus puts it (sevouth edition page 191 If a person, by mistake or otherwise, assume the character of trustee when it really does not belong to him, and so becomes a truste de son tort, he may be called to account by the cestus que trust for the mouses ho received under colour of the trust ' In Soar v Ashuell(4), the same rule was acted upon by the Court of Appeal Lord Bowen says, referring to the case of Life Association of Scotland . Siddal(3) "This extension of the doctrine is based on the obvious view that a man who assumes without excuse to he a trustee ought not to be in a better position than if he were what he pretends " KAI, L J, said. Limitations cannot be set up as a defence. Amongst these are the cases where a stranger to the trust has assumed to act and has acted as a trustee"

It is clear from the abovementioned cases that the law will not permit the planutiff in this case to say that he held in any character other than that of trustee of the temple It is not alleged that at any time subsequent to the demise he repudiated the character of trustee and claimed to hold the land for his own Mr Ramachandra Ayyar arges that he did not apply the rents of the property for the benefit of the temple but took them himself, but this cannot better his position. It would only have the effect of making him hable to account for the rents which he, having collected in the character of trustee, misappropriated for his own benefit. It was observed in Shaw v Keighron(1), "I think it is necessary to go beyond the mere circumstance that some one not entitled to the rent has received and kept it. The section requires not only that the rent should have been received by a person other than the person rightfully cutitled, but that it should have been received under some claim of title and that a wrongful one For example, if rent were received by a person falsely pretending to be agent to the rightful owner and who never accounted for it this would not bar the rightful owner."

We must therefore hold that the pluntified do not acquire any title to the property by adverse possession as against the temple. The right to the property most go with the right to the trusteship See Gnanasambanda Pandara Sannadhi v Velu Pandaram(2) also the judgment of this Court in Ambalam Pakliya Udayan v Bartle(3)

Bedson and Sadasiva Aytab, II JUDGMENT —The plantiff is the appellant before us in the Second Appeal As karnavan of a Malabar tarwad he brought this suit for the recovery of tarwad money (Rs 3,000) which the defendant (a junior inember of the taiwad) has been withholding from him (the plaintiff), the defendant having doined the plaintiff's title to recover that amount as tarwad money from the 6th November 1906 to the plaintiff's knowledge. The cause of action is stated in the soventh paragraph of the plaint to have accrued on the 6th November 1906. The aut was brought on the 30th September 1909.

The facts have been found in the plaintiff's favour by the lower Comits and the only question we have to decide is whether, on those facts, the suit is harred or not, the lower Courts having dismissed the suit as barred.

The lower Courts have held that either article 61 or atticle 81 of the second schedule to the Limitation Act applies. Atticle 61 applies to a suit "for money payable to the plaintiff for money paid for the defendant". The plaintiff in this case did not pay any money for the defendant (to any creditor of the defendant or otherwise) but claims money belonging to the plaintiff which the defendant had all along admitted to be tarwad money till November 1906. Neither does article 81 apply as the plaintiff was not a anrety and the defendant was not a principal debter in respect of the taiwad money in the hands of the defendant. The lower Courts seem to us to have been misled by the nature of the provious transactions which resulted in the defendant (a junior member of the plaintiff's turwad) hecoming possessed of the tarwad money in 1904 If neither article of nor article 81 applies, what is the proper article to he applied to the facts? The plaintiff's (appellant's) valid contended before us that articles 49, 60, 145 or the general article 120 applied. Article 49 iclates to suits "for specific moveable property or for compensation for wrongfully taking the same ' We do not think or detaining that a suit for money or for compensation for wrongfully detaining money can be brought under this article, as money is not "specific moverble property" Money has been held to come within the phrase "moveable property" in article 89 (" by a principal against his agent for moveable property recoived by the latter and not accounted for "), but it cannot he held to come within the meaning of the phrase "specific moveable property" Specific property is property which is recovered in specie, i.e., the very property itself, not any equivalent, substitute or reparation In a suit for money specific coins or notes are not claimed, only coms or notes of a certain value Order XXI, rule 31, of the Civil Procedure Code uses the expression "specific moveable" Rule 30 which precedes rule 31 relates to the execution of decrees "for the payment of money" and rule 31 to decree for "specific moveable" thus showing that the words "specific moveable" cannot include "money"

Article 60 is also mappheable as the plaintiff did not make any deposit of money with the defoundant but the defendant got the tarwad money into his bands from the person with whom it had been deposited. Article 145 is likewise mappheable as the defendant was not a depositary or private. The last article relied on by the appellant is the residuary article 120, but it should be applied only as a last resort [see Sharoop Dass Mondal v Joggessur Roy Choudhry(1)] if no other article is applicable and we have therefore to see it really no other article applies. We are of opinion that the correct view is that the defendant received the money for the use of the plaintiff as representing the tarwad. In that view article 32 is applicable. The application of this article is fully dicussed in Mahomed Wahib v Mahomed Amer (2). As observed in Blackstone's

Commentaries," volume III, page 162, an action has " when one has had and received money belonging to another, without any valuable consideration given on the receiver's part for the law construes this to be money had and received for the use of the ouner only, and implies that the person so receiving promised and undertook to account for it to the true proprietor And, if ho unjustly detains it an action on the case lies against him for the breach of such implied promise and undertaking, and he will be made to repair the owner in damages, equivalent to what he has detained in such violation of his promise. This is a very exton sive and heneficial remedy applicable to almost every case where the defendant has recoived money which ex rano et bono ho ought to refund" In the present ease, as in Mahome ! Wahib v Mahamed Ameer(1), the money was received by a co sharer of the plaintiff and it may be said "These words very aptly describe the present case the defendant has received monies belonging to the plaintiff which ex a quo et bono he ought to refund . the plaintiff's cause of action therefore is for money had and received to the plaintiff a use, and the money is none the less received to the use of the plaintiff because the defendant uninstly detains it for his own benefit" In Subanna Bhatta v Kunhanna Banta(2), article 62 was applied where money was received by n benamidar for the plantiff See also the decision of the Privy Council in Suad Lutf Als Khan v Mussamat Afzalunissa Begum(3)

The period of limitation under article 62 is three years from the date of receipt of the money (1904) and this suit is therefore barred

We therefore dismiss the Second Appeal with costs

It was not contended in the lower Court that the consideration for the promissory note was anything different from what is stated in Exhibits A and B The agreement to pay money evidenced by the promisssory-note appears therefore in bo clearly illegal The learned vakil for the respondents contends that, as the complainant would also in law be entitled to claim damages for the injury caused to Gonala Reddi, the claim to damnges must also be taken to be at least part of the consideration for the promissory-note But this case was not set up in the lower court, and no evidence was given in support of any such allegation, I must take it therefore that the consideration was merely the compounding of the criminal Mr Govindaraghava Ayyar has drawn my attention to Sheikh Nubbee Buksh v Mussamut Bebes Hingon(1) Whether in that case the claim to damages was also part of the consideration for the document in question, I cannot say, but if the learned judges meant to lay down that, oven though it may not be proved that such was the case, an agreement to pay money in consideration of compounding a criminal affence could be supported on the ground that the party who executes the agreement would also be hable for damages, I am unable with all deterence to follow that It is also argued that, as the executants of the pro missory note would be liable in a Civil Court for damages, the ends of justice do not require that this Court should interfere do not think that this Court as a Court of Revision has any power to consider justice apart from such justice as the law recognises I believe there are some cases where Courts have gone to the extent contended for by Mr Govindaraghava Ayyar, but, in the absence of any decision of this Court binding on me, I am not prepared to hold that I can refuse to interfere on the ground that moral, as opposed to legal, justice is a ground for refusing to interfere in zersion. An doubt, mere errors of procedure or technical defects not affecting the legal justice of a case will not be encouraged by a Court of Revision, but when the law prohibits an agreement and requires that effect should not be given to it, I am of opinion that I am bound to interfere. WALLIS AND AYGING, JJ JUDGIEST.—This is an apped from the decision of the Lower Courts refusing specific performance of a contract of side entered into by the first defendant. The suit is brought in gainst the first defendant who is the managing member of the family and against defendants Nos 2 to 4, his major sons, and detendants Nos 5 to 8, his minor sons, who appear by their guardian the first defendant. The Lower Courts have both found that this contract is not binding on defendants Nos 2 to 8, and the question which we have to decide is whether specific performance should in these circumstances be granted or not

We have been referred to a decision in Kesurs Ramaraju v Indury Ramaingami(1) in which it was decided without specific reference to the provisions of the Specific Relief Act that the proper course in such cases as this would be to give a decree for specific performance of the whole contract against the first defendant leaving it to be settled in future litigation what massed under the converance

Another case to which we have been referred is Stimulas Reddi v Swarama Reddi(2) in which similarly a decree was granted directing the first defendant to sell the whole land without determining whether such a sale would bind the second defendant. In that case the provisions of section 15 of the Specific Rehef Act were referred to and it was observed that "sect on 15" of the Specific Rehef Act would be applicable only if the first defendant had no interest in any portion of the property agreed to be conveyed as in illustration (a) or is mable to convey such portion as in illustration (b) to that section."

In Poraha Subbarams Hedds v Padlamuds Seshachalams Chelty(3) the Court considered it unnecessary to express any opinion as to the correctness of the observations that we have push cited, and refused in that case to grant a decree for specific performance of the whole contract distinguishing the previous case on the ground that the contract before them was one entered into on behalf of the minors as well, but gave the plaintiff the benefit of the latter provision of section 15 of the Specific Rehef Act

Naglah P Venrata-Bama Baetrulu.

In Gounda Naichen v Apathsahaya Iyer(1) these cases were Wallis and again considered and Srinitasa Redli v Suarama Reddi (2) was distinguished from the case before the Court and was explained as proceeding on the ground that an undivided father has an interest in every portion of the undivided property, and that therefore section 15 of the Specific Relief Act does not apply To us, however, it appears that the consideration that an undivided father has an interest in every part of the undivided property in no way takes the case out of the operation of the section which runs thus "Where a party to a contract is unable to perform the whole of his part of it, and the part which must be left unperformed forms a considerable portion of the whole, the is not entitled to obtain a decree for specific performance" We think the words of the section apply where a member of an andivided family agrees to sell part of the joint property in which he has only a share, and the present case is a particularly plain one, because according to the plaintiff's own evidence the . first d fend int agreed to get the other members of the family to execute the sale deed Further the contract has been decided in the present suit not to be binding on the other members of the family, and to decree specific performance against the first defendant only would be merely encomaging uscless litigation We may ald that Barrelt v Ring(3) is no authority on the

The plantiff does not claim the benefit of the latter part of section 15 of the Specific Rehef Act and we dismiss the Second Appeal with costs

The essential fact which residers to dia transaction by a minor is that some agreement by the minor is nece sailly an examinal part of the transaction. But when a contract by the minor is not a necessary condition for all holding his right in property, his right should be markfained.

uncle, and that it was subsequently sold by the third defendant. the plaintiff s fither, as if it belonged to the family of which he and the plaintiff were members Defendants Nos 1 and 2 claim under the sale by the thirl defendant. The contention on the Spreece JJ ments in the Lower Courts was that the purchase in the name of the minor was really b sams for the third defendant or the family, and that therefore the plaintiff has no exclusive right to the property, and the silo by the third defendant was valid

MUNIA PERUMAL

On the finding of the District Court that the purchase was male by the maternal uncle for the benefit of the minor, the sale by the third defendant cannot be upheld and defendants Nos I and 2 have no title It is c atended that on the finding that the sale was for the benefit of the minor, it must be held to be a void transaction as a minor is incompetent to purchase property The answer to this is substructively what is given by the District Judge viz, that the minor was not a contracting party in the transaction of purchase by Ramaswami Konan, although the minor became the beneficiary owner under the deed of purchase This case is on all fours with Kulla Panlitlan v Ramayi(1) decided by Munro and Sankagan Nair, JJ In that case a person executed a deed of sale of certain property in the name of his wife, and when sho sucd for the recovery of the property, t was contended that the sale was void. The learned Judges answered this contention thus "The decree is right, the contract being found to have been between the plaintiff's father (s e . father of the wife) and the appellant (se, ber husband) " We might be content to rest ourselves on the authority of this case, but out of deference to the arguments that have been urged on behalf of the appellant we shall state our reasons a little more fully

According to the Indian Contract Act, a minor is incompetent to make a contract | The judical committee of the Privy Councal decided in Mohors Bil co v Dharmodas Gho (2) that a contract by a minor must, according to the Contract Act, be regarded as yord and not merely vordable. The case before their Lordships was one of a mortgago made by a minor Of course a mortgago by a minor is a contract by him to pay a sum of money which he borrows on the security of certain property transactious resulting in the erection of rights over property arise out of contracts, and when a minor enters into any such transactions where a contract by him is an essential condition preliminary to the transaction or contractual obligations on his part flow from the transaction, it must be regarded is void.

In Kamta Prasad v Sheo Gopal(1) the decision of the Privy Council was followed and a mortgage by a minor was held to be void. On the other hand in Ulfat Rai v Gaurt Shankar(2) it was held that, where money is already due to a micor beceficially hy his trustee on accounts between them, o conveyaoce by the trustee in favour of the miner for the amount so due was valid That case perhaps is not quite reconcilable with the decision of this Court in Navakotti Navayana Chetty v Logalinga Ol etty(3) There in answer to a soit for possession of certain property, the defendant, a minor, set up a claim to the right obtained under a eale deed Benson and Krishnaswami Ayyar, JJ, beld that the sale was void. It is there pointed out that the creation of a right in the property by a sale must necessarily he proceeded by an agreement between the minor and the vendor and the minor boung moapable of ontering into the agreement the resulting transaction, the sale must also be held void KRISUMASWAMI ATTAR, J. points out that even where the consideration money is already due to the migor and is used as consideration for the sale, it is necessary in order that the sale may be upheld, that the minor should enter into an agreement that the deht niroady due to him should be appropriated as consideration for the sale and he being incompetont to enter into such an agreement, the sale must be void But, in all these cases where a transaction by a minor has been held to be word, the essential foct which rendered it yord, was that some agreement by the minor was necessarily an essential part of the transaction. Now it cannot be denied that a person may purchase property and hold it as a trustee for a minor no reason why he should not create a trust by purchasing it in the name of the miner No contractual obligations are undertaken by the minor in such a case Any personal obligations arising as between the vendor and the vendes would have to be discharged by the party contracting with the vendor, as, by Ramaswami Kooan in this case If there are obligations enforceable against the property purchased, no doubt the property in the hands of the miner would be liable for the satisfiction of such obligations. We can see no reason for holding that when a contract by the minor is not a necessary condition for upholding the rights of the minor in the property, Spaces, JJ his right should not be maintained. In Meghan Dube v Pran Singh(1) where a mortgage was taken in the name of a minor but for the benefit of the joint family of which he was a member. BANERII and RICHARDS, JJ , observed that "the contract in this case was made by persons of full age (10, adult members of the joint family), but the person in who e favour the mortgage deed was executed was a minor The question of the validity of the mortgage dees not in our onmon arise "

For the reasons mentioned above we are of opinion that the decision of Lower Appellate Court is right

The finding of the Lower Appellate Court on the merits was also attacked by the learned valid for the appellant but we are nusblo to see any legal objection to it. The Second Appeal is diamissed with costs

R. Srinicasa Ayyangar for the respondents

WHITE, CJ K V Krishnasuami Anyar for the second respondent
WHITE, C J —The agreement which is sued on in this case was entered into between the pluntiff and two of the relatives of one Cellayappa Chetty The effect is clearly stated in paragraph 5 of the Indgment of the Subordinate Judge

"The agreement was that the planniff's daughter should be marned to Cellayappa's eon on the 18th January 1903 and should be given usual jewel and streedlanam, etc, in the usual manner, and that in exchange Cellayappa Chetty'e daughter, apparently then too young to be married, should be given in marriage in three years from the date of the plaintiff's daughter's marriage, i.e. on or hefere January 1906, and that in default of other, the plaintiff to accept that girl or of Cellayappa's relations and the defendants to give her in marriage, the defaulter, i.e. the plaintiff or the defendants, is the case may be, should pay the other R. 5.000 in case of the plaintiff's default, with interest from 1906 January, and in case of the default of the defendants and Cellayappa Chotty's pirty, with interest from the date of the plaintiff's daughter's marriage, i.e., the 18th January 1903"

The plantiff's daughter was narried to Cellayappa's son but died soon afterwards. The plantiff thereupen took back the marriage presents. After the expiration of the three years, the plantiff made a formal demand with defindants that Collayappa's daughter should be given in marriage to his son. This was not done. Hence this suit. The Judge beld that in law the agreement was not against public policy and could be enforced, but he held on the facts that the carrying out of the contract had been abandoned by agreement between the printes. As regards the question of abandonicut I am unable to agree with the learned Judge. The defendant's evidence that the plantiff had stated that he did not desire that the agreement should be erried out is not supported by the witness whom be called fibe Judge appears to have reliad to some extent on a suggested pratuce or mago that, the return of the presents indicated that the parties did not intend that the agreement DEVARAGE should be carried out This practice or usage was not pleaded Muitualean and was not proved On the evidence I do not think it can be WHITE C.J. held that the agreement was abandoned

There remains the question was the contract enforceable? It was argued that this was a family agreement lawful in itself, and this bing so an agreement that the party who declined to fulfil his share of the I rgain should compensate the other party was not contrag to public; olicy The conclusion at which I have arrived is that the contract is not enforceable. It is time, as the Judge puts it that no money is payable as bride pince" to anybody But it is a case in which third parties have a necumary interest in a marri ge being brought about. If an agreement between A and B that B's daughter shall marry A's son on payment of a sum of money by A to B is continny to public policy, it seems difficult on principle to say that an agreement between A and B that Bs daughter shall marry A's son and that if she fails to do so, B shall lay a sum of money to A is not equally contrary to pul he policy In each case B has a pecuniary interest in bringing about the marriage. In one case if the event takes place be receives money In the other case, if the event does not tal a place he has to pay money A contract to marry betwe in parties who are each six generis of cour e stands upon a different fo ting I it I ero the contract is between third parties The effect of the contract as I have said as to give the parties a pecuniary interest in the marriage taking place. The contract as my learned brother put it in the course of the argument, is a trafficking in marriago There appoirs to be no case, Luglish or Indian where a contract like this has been held to be youl, but as it seems to me to full within the mischief of the rule. I am prepared to hold that the contract is not enforceable and I think the rule applies none the less in a stite of society where the marriage of children a contract made by their parents and the children themselves I ave no volution in the matter. The deer ion of the Court of App at in Her amay Clarker e rin (1), shows that in England the Courts are prepared to extend rither than to restrict the class of cases to which the rule is applicable. It is now well established, at any rate in this Presidency, that a

DEVARANAN contract to make a pryment to a father in consideration of MUTTERAMAN firs giving his daughter in marriage is opposed to public policy within the meaning of section 23 of the Contract Act. (Woulder

White, C.J. Within the meaning of section 23 of the Contract Act. (Ventala Kristinayya v Lakshini Narajana(1) In Purshotamdas Tribhovandas v. Purshotamdas Mangadias(2) it was not suggested that the conusact was against public policy, but there the plaintiff was hunself a party to the contract of mairings. Irene Fanny Colquboun v Fanny Smither(3) has very little bearing on the question before us There it was held that the principle of Quinn v Leathem(4) was applicable in the case of a contract to marry and that an action was maintainable against a person for inducing a party to a contract of marriage to break that contract

On the ground that the contract is not enforceable I think this appeal should be dismissed with costs

JUDGMENT .- This is n suit by a Hindu widow for arrests of maintenance against her father-in law and his sons. The The first defendant originally lad some ancestral plaintiff was married to a deceased son of the first defendant, the Arras, JJ father in law property plong with a brother, but he reluignished it at the partition letween himself and his brother's sons, re-erving to himself only a waste hailding site. This relinquishment was before the plaintiff's marriago, and his sons including the plaintiff's husband nover took exception to it The Lower Courts have dismissed the suit on the ground that the first defendant was not in possession of any ancestral property although he was possessed of considerable property acquired by himsolf as an officer in the service of Government

It has been contended on plaintiff's behalf in Second Appeal that the partition deed contained a clause that the first defendant's brothers and sons should thereafter make no claim to the properties in the first defendant's po session which they admitted by the terms of the dead to be his salf acquired properties, that it must therefore be taken that the release of their right or claim of right to those properties was the consideration for the first defendant's reliaquishment of the rights of himself and his sons to a half share of the ancestral properties, that in effect the first defendant exchanged with his brother's sons a half right in the ancestral property for their claim of a half share in the MEGNAKSHI properties which he asserted to be his self acquisition and that she is therefore entitled to maintenance out of his self acquired property But en a reference to the partition deed we are unable to give any such effect to it. It does not appear from it that the first defendant's brother's sons laid any claim to als self acquisitions On the other hand it merely records an admission on their part that the properties in his ressession were his own acquisitions and that they had no right to them The reason for his not enforcing his right to an equal share of the ancestral property is stitled to be his sympathy towards them There is no clause in the document that could be construed as a release or relinquishment in the first defendant's favour of any claim which his nephews had in the properties which I e alleged to he his own We cannot therefore see any equitable considers tion for fastening on the first defendant's private acquisitions an obligation which would attach to ancestral property in his hands

It is next contended that the first defender that realised the amount due to the plantiff's husband on a mortgage bond executed by a third party, but both the Lower Courts have found that though the head steed in the name of the plantiff's husband be was only a benamidar for the first defendant and had no heneficial interest in it. And this finding we see no reason not to accent in Second Appeal

The next point urged is that the plaintiff would be entitled to some maintenance, at any inte, as the first defendant was still in possession of an uncestral paramh. Admittedly no income was derived from it. This is the ground on which no maintenance was allowed to the plaintiff as derivable from it. It is argued on the plaintiff's helialf that she is entitled to make the paramba profitable and to derive maintenance out of it or to have the paramba sold to provide for her maintenance. It is not necessary to consider the exact mainer in which her right with respect to the paramba could be legally enforced ignaist the first defendant as the learned wall for the respondent is willing that the plaintiff should have a decree for Rs. 50 in her of a fifth share of the paramba to which her hisband would have been entitled if a partition had taken place between him and the defendants

The main contention in Second Appeal is that the plaintiff was ent fled to maintenance against the first defendant as her husband died in commensality with him even though he was not

Law, it is argued, a person is bound to maintain his daughter inlaw even if 1 os cesed only of property acquired by himself is not desired that the established principle according to the decisions of all the High Courts is that ordinarily a widow is entitled to mantenance from the survivors of her husband's undivided tunily only if the family pos essed joint ancestral property during her husband's life time. The contention is that there are some exceptions to this jule which proceed on the special obligation to maintain one's very closu relations. We may at once ob eave that even if there were such a rule accord ang to the Hindu Law we would not be bound to give effect to it The rules of Hindu Law are binding on the Court only where it is necessiry to decide any question regarding succession, inheritanco marriale or casto or any religious usage or institution ' In so far as a right to maintenance is a charge on the inheritance of any person according to the Hindu Law, the rules laid down by it would be enforceable. But where maintenance is claimed against a person not on the ground that the property coming by inheritance to him is burdened with the maintenance of the person claiming it, but on the ground that the Hindu Lawgivers have placed such a duty on the defendant, the Hindu Law, as such, has no obligatory force. The Court would have to decide the question in according with equity, justice and good the rules and precents of Hindu Law givers might often be cutified to are it respect in deciding the rule of justice in such cases But the weight due to them would depend on the circumstances of tich case including the conditions of modern society and the conceptions of equity and just ce which the Court considers it right to give effect to Wn do not find, however, that according to Hindu Liw-givers a person is bound to maintain his daughter in law even through he has no ancestral property in his hands. Our attention has been drawn to some observations of Subranana Allar, J. 10 Rangarii aly Lehn irial(1) This question did not arise for deer ion there as the suit was by a daughter in law against her mother in law who had inherited the property of the father in-law and the property itself was found to be ancestral property in the father-in law's hands while he was alive, having been inherited by him from his maternal grand father The learned Jedge observed, "In

been summarised in the passage cited above from West and But the difficulties in apholding the contention in Buller favour of the hability of the father in law or any other member of the undivided family of a widow are equally, if not more, We cannot but have grave doubts, about the desirability serious of fettering the inducement to acquire property by burdening the acquirer with the maintenance of persons who take no part in the labour of acquiring. It is natural that we should find conflicting views taken on the question by Hindu Law givers It may also be that in practice many Hindus take the responsibility of muntaining widows whom they may not be bound in law to support But when we find that so early as the time of Vijnaneswara the view prevailed that there should be no obligation on a person to support any one except h s closest relatives, namely, parents, wife and infant children out of his own self acqui itions or by his own labour, we do not think it will be right to lay down any broad rule that a Hindu is bound to give maintenance to his daughter in law out of the fruits of his own industry There may be special circumstances which may make it equitable and just in a particular case to uphold such a claim, but, in the present case our attention has not been drawn to any such circumstances not appear that the plaintiff's bushand was a minor when he was married to her It is not shewn that the orroumstances under which the marriago took place were such as to justify us in holding that the first defendant is responsible for the plaintiff's The partition between him and his brother's sons maintenance was before the plaintiff a maritage 1 be plaintiff herself is not a min and is not shown to have been a minor at the time of her hisband's death. Sho left her father in law s house soon after her husband's death and did not try to establish a claim upon the first defendant by hving with him as a member of 1 is We must hold that, in the circumstances, the Lower Courts were right in refusing to inde birst defendant liable to one ber maintenance out of his self acquisitions

We modify the decrees of the Courts below by directing defendants Nos 2 to 4 (the first defendant having died lending the appeal) to pay Rs of the appellant out of the assets of the deceased first defendant with interest at 6 per cent from this date till the date of payment. We further modify them by directing that the parties do hear their own costs throughout was executed by the defendant alone, it was stated in the document that the lands were being enjoyed in equal shares by the defendant and the defendant's divided elder brother, and that they had been purchased out of money belonging to them severally. The defendant agreed to have the proposed sale deed executed by himself and by his brother on his own account and as guardian of his minor son.

The District Manual found (1) that both parties knew full well at the time of execution of the agreement to sell (Exhibit A) that one half of the land belonged to Ramasamier and his soo. and (2) that the agreement fell through owing to the default of both parties Referring to illa tration (a) to section 15 of the Specific Relief Act and to section 17, he decided that this was not a case in which specific performance of a part of the contract could be enforced, masmuch as the defendant was not compe tent to transfer the half to which he did not possess a title and as the plauntiff made no offer to purchase the defendant's own balf paying the price agreed upon and waiving all right to compensation for deficiency or for loss The District Judge did not agree with the Dr trict Munsif upon this point. He was unable to see that there was soything to debar the plaintiff from asking for a sale deed for the whole land to be executed in his favour by the defendant as stipulated in Exhibit A, the plaintiff heing allowed to take the document for what it was worth Judge further remarked that he found no reason for declaring the agreement unenforceable on general grounds He declined however to give the plaintiff a de-ree on account of his delay of three years in instituting the cuit

In a case of mioor, when a suit was brought for specific performance of a contract of sale and the contract was found to be not binding on the minors this Coort, in Poral a Sulbarania Reddy v Vadlamuds Seshahalam Chelly(1) observed "If the contract is indivisible under section 17 of the Act what then is the relief to which the plumbil is entitled." Wo are used by the appellant to give him a decree for the whole against the first and fourth defendants on the authority of Sinitzsa Redds(2). This we are unable to do."

In that case the appellant expressed his willingness to take a conveyance from the first and fourth defendants of all those

Kosuri Ranaraju v Iralusy Ramalingam(1) and Srinitasa Atyan and Reddi v Sti arama Reddi(2) were both cases in which a managing Speaces IJ member of au undivided family contracted to sell undivided property without the concurrence of other members Without determining whither the sale by the manager would bind the other members, it was considered that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for specific performance Section 15 of the Specific Relief Act was not applied for the reason given in the liter decision, viz , that an undivided father has an interest in every portion of the undivided property But when the family is divided as hore. section 17 distinctly prohibits a Court from directing the specific performance of a part of a contract except 10 accordance with the preceding sections Even in cases where the conditions of section 12 are fulfilled the use of the word "may" indicates that the granting of a decree for part performance is discretionary with the Court and we should hold that whom there has been groat delay in attempting to enforces contract and ercumstances have greatly changed either from a rise of prices or other causes in the interval the Courts would be justified in refusing to give leval effect to un inequitable arrangement

Now the plaintiff in the present case wouts the Court to compel the defendant to execute a deed of sale for the whole property and if he refuses, to issue one in his name under the seal of the Court, and to allow him to make what he can out of the title thus conveyed Such a request is quite madmissible. A sale is a transfer of ownership in exchange for a price (section 54, Transfer of Property (ct) The defendant has nothing which he is earable of transferring in the moiety of the property of which he is not the owner and is not in possession. It is impossible to sever the execution of the deed from the transfer to be effected thereby and to treat them as separate acts of the same person | The Court will not lend its sanction to a transaction devoid of legal effect See Darts' " Vendors and Parchasers," pages 1072-'3, "Fry on Specific Performance," paragraphs 1000 and 1001, "Banerlee on

S. Subram min Ay far for the petitioner.

Dr S Swammathan for the respondents

JUDGMENT —This is an application by the plantiff in Small Cause Sait No 97 of 1907 in the District Court of Nelloie to revise the indement of the District Judge. The suit is to recover from the defendants a sum of Rs 349-8-0 on a promissory note executed by them in favour of the plaintiff in 1306. The defendants pleaded that there was no consideration for the note, that they had instituted a suit, Original Suit No 281 of 1907, in the Distric. Munsif's Court of Nellore, for the cancellation of the note, and that the suit was therefore not maintainable. It appears from the B Form Diary that the sait was adjourned pending the decision of the Munsif in Original Suit No 281 of 1907, and that after the Munsif's decision of the suit declaring the promissorynote not enforceable against the defendants, this suit was dismissed. The judgment of the District Judge states "Both parties represented in this Court that they would abide by the decree of the District Munsif of Nelloro in Original Suit No 281 of 1907 on his file in regard to the question raised in this case " The question referred to in this sentence seems to he whether the promissory note vas uneutorceable on the ground that it was not supported by any consideration. Un fortunately, there is no written accord of the representation by the parties except what appears in the judgment. Nor arn the parties agreed as to whit exactly the representation was The plaintiff says that the agreement between the parties was that the question in dispute should be decided in accordance with the final judgment of the matter in Original Suit No 281 of 1907 on the ble of the District Munsit of Nellore which was capable of being carried up on appeal to the District Court and finally to this Court | The defendants, on the other hand, contend that the decision of the District Munsif in Original Suit No. 281 of 1907 was to be accepted as binding hetween the parties in the Small Cause Court In the view we take of the case we think it unnecessary to decide which of these statements is correct lt may be noted that the decision of the Munsif in Original Suit No 281 of 1907 was reversed by the District Court on appeal and the promissory-note was held to be binding on the defendants, and the Second Appeal against the District Judge's judgment was dismissed by this Court.

The question argued in this revision petition at the hearing MILLER AND was, assuming that the plaintiff had originally represented that the case might be decided in accordance with the decision of the Munsif in Original Suit No 281 of 1907, he thereby disentitled himself to ask subsequently and that it should be decided by the District Judge on the morits We are not at present concerned with the question, what legal effect, apart from any agreement between the parties, the judgment of the Munsif in Original Suit No 281 of 1907 or the final appellate indgment in that case would have upon the controversy in the small cause sur. We have come to the conclusion that the defendants were not entitled to maist on the representation originally made by the parties as a bar to the plaintiff's right to the trial of the small cause suit The agreement in question cannot be regarded as an adjustment of the emblect matter of the suit hy a lawful agreement or compromise The agreement did not settle the dispute but postponed the settlement and purported to authorize the Court to settle it in a certain manner A compromise has been defined as a mntual agreement between two or more persons at difference to put an end to such difference upon certain terms agreed upon (Burrill's Dictionary, quoted in 8 American Cycloprodia of Law and Procedule, page 501) It must be an agreement which one of the parties can insist on the Court enforcing against the will of the other

Can it be eard in this case that one of the parties could insist on the Court postponing the small cause suit till the District Munsif's decision in Original Suit No 281 of 1907? We think not The ordinary rule is that, when the Court is "seized" of a case, it has jurisdiction to decide it in the manner prescribed by law, and that parties have no right to interfere with its authority to do so There are, no doubt, well understood exceptions to this rule, but where the exceptions do not apply, the rule must prevail. Notwithstanding the pundency of a suit, the parties may settle their disputes as they like by any lawful arrangement, and the Court is then bound to give effect to the settlement Again, they may ask the Court to refer the questions in dispute to in arbitrator, in which case though the decision of the cause is primarily again is subject to the control of the Court

transferred to another tribunal, the Court still retains some control over the proceedings The parties may also enter into an agreement making the oath of one of them conclusive evidence of all or any of the facts in issue between them

VENEATAGIRI CHINTA ATTAR JJ

The present case does not fall within any of these exceptions Our attention is not drawn to any rule or principle which would compel a party to adhere to any agreement hy ham that the suit may be decided in a manner different from that prescribed by For instance, we do not think that if a litigant agreed that the Judge might decide the suit in the minner that a certain individual might advise, such an agreement would bind him In Rukhanbhas v Adampi(1), BEAMAN J, held that an agree ment that certain disputes relating to the accounts between the parties in the case should bodecided by the Assistant Commissioner in a summary manner without going into formal evidence beyond the accounts, objections and surcharges filed before him, was not The learned Judge observes that it did not amount to an adjustment or compromise and that the agreement not being in writing would not constitute a binding reference to arbitration Ho elaborately discusses the quostion whether in egreement to refer to arbitration and to be bound by the award passed by an arbitrator can be treated as amonuting to a compromise, and ox presses his disinclination to accept as sound the decisions cited before him in support of the position that such an agreement would amount to an adjustment or compromise when an award has been passed by the arhitrator Wo consider it unnecessary to express any opinion on this question, as it is clear that the agreement in the present case cannot be treated as a reference of the disputo in the small cause suit to the arbitration of the Munsif who was trying Original Suit No 281 of 1907 In Moyan v Pathukutti(2), an agreement by the plaintiff to take a certain oath and to have his suit dismissed, if he failed to do so, was regarded as not binding on him. We hold that the agreement in quostion in this case did not deprive the plaint if of his right to have the suit decided on the merits

We therefore reverse the decision of the Judge and remand the suit to the District Munsif of Nellore to be disposed of by him according to law as a regular Original Suit The costs of this petition will abide the result

Indian Contract Act (IX of 1873), on 30, 55, 53 and 73—Breach of contract to delever goods at a particular tense-Damages, measure of Time at which damages should be computed.

A contract to deliver goods within a certain period is broken by non-delivery before its expiry, in the absence of an agreement butween the parties to extend the time for performance. The measure of damages in such a case is the difference between the contract rate and the market rate at the expiry of the period agreed upon as the time for delivery is the contract.

Per White, O.I.—Section 63 of the Contract Act does not entitle a promises for his own purposes and without the consent of the promiser to extend the time for performance which had been agreed to by the parties to the contract. Nor does section 55 easife him to keep also a broken contract in the hope of being able to recover heavier damances for its breast.

Fer Arting, J.—Section 63 deals only with concessions on the part of the promises advantageous to the promiser, and cannot be myoked to support an extension of time by the promises for his own bouefit

Section 55 read with section 2 (i) means nothing more than this on the promiser's failure to parform within the contract time, the promiser loss the power to enforce the centract, that is to 'chim any advantage due to binned I thereunder. The promises has the option of enforcing it or not as it may such him, and if he elects to enforce the contract be on, nuore section 73, obtain only him, and if he elects to enforce the contract be only though a from the branch or the parties knew, when they made the contract, to be likely to result, which cannot include any signs stum of damages caused by the promises's action or finaction subsequent to the breach.

date with reference to which damages should be assessed in an White, C.J., action for breach of contract The facts are these. On the 12th of May 1909, the plaintiffs and the defendant entered into a contract for the debvery by the defendant of 6 candies of cotton at an agreed rate within 60 days of the date of the contract. The defendant failed to deliver within the 60 days which expired on or about the 12th of July On the 4th of September the plaintiffs wrote a letter to the defendant in which they reforred to the agreement and intimated that if the defendant failed to deliver the cotton within one week after the date of the letter he would be liable for the loss that might befall the plaintiffs according to the market rate at the date of the letter. The defendant took no notice of this letter On the 3rd October the plaintiffs wrote to the defendant another letter in which they referred to their previous communication and gave notice to the defendant that as he had failed to deliver the cotton after the notice given, he was hable to the plaintiffs on the footing of the market rate at the date of this second letter and they demanded payment on that footing. They then sued the defendant The Subordinate Judge by way of damages gave the plaintiffs the difference between the market rate prevuling in October, that is at the time the second notice was given, and the contract rate. I am unable to agree with the Subordmate Judgo that the plaintiffs are cutified to damages on this footing. The Judge refers to section of of the Contract Act, which employers a promises to extend the time for the performance of the promise. Of course it would have been open to the parties to extend the time by agreement, but there is no ovidence of any consent by the defendant to any extension of the time and this is not a case in which it can be said that silence gives consent. In my opinion, it is clear that section 63 does not entitle a promisee, for his own purposes and without the consent of the promiser to extend the time for performance which had been agreed to by the parties to the contract. The view of the learned Subordinate Judge was that at the time the suit was instituted the contract of May the 12th was a subsisting contract. In support of this view

MUTTHAYA MANIAGARAN U LEERU REDDIAR WHITF C.J

Mr Seshagiri Ayyar relied strongly on the terms of section 55 of the Contract Act. He contended that under that section the contract was voidable at the option of the promises that is the plaintiffs, and as they had not avoided the contract, they were entitled to treat it as a subsisting contract at the date of the institution of the suit.

Now, in my opinion, section 55 entitles a party to a contract. where time (as in this case) is of the essence of the contract, to say if he is sued upon the contract 'lime is of the essence of this contract, you have failed to comply with the stipulation as to time, I repudiate the contract " It does not enable the promisce to say "I elect to keep alive this broken contract in the hopes that I may hereafter recover heavier damages for the breach of the contract than I should be entitled to recover at the time of the breach of the contract ' Mr Seshagiri Avvar contended that the only way by which a promisor who had broken his stipulation as to time could protect himself if the promises did not avoid the contract would be to give notice that the contract was at an end It seems altogether unreasonable to place any such obligation on a promisee when ex-concensus the contract bas been broken with reference to a matter which goes to the root of the contract The object of section 55 is to protect the promiseo and is analogous to section 39, as shown by the illustration to section 39 This illustration is the statement of a case in which the promiseo would be at liberty to put an end to the contract, so, under section 55, where a stipulation entered into hy the promiser as to time, which is of the essence of the contract, is broken, the promisee is entitled to repudrate or put an end to, or avoid the contract No doubt section 55 deals with the effect of a breach of a stipulation which is of the essence of the contract and does not deal with the question of damages, but the plaintiffs would only be entitled to damages on the footing of the market rate in October on the assumption that the contract was a subsisting contract in October The contract in this case was broken in Julyand, in my opinion, came to an end in July and there is no evidence of any agreement to extend by the parties

The cases to which Mr. Seshigiri Ayyar refers are clearly distinguishable Ogle v Earl Vane(1) turned on the question whether there was a new centract to which the Statute of Frauds MUTTHAYA applied. The Court held there was no new Centract but an ex- MANIAGERAY tension of time by agreement Lusa, J, said "I see no reason why, after a breach of contract by non-delivery at the proper time, the buyer should not wait at the express or implied request WHITE, C.J. of the seller, with an understanding between the parties that if the huver should wait, he would still he entitled, if the seller turned out ultimately unable to deliver, to do that which he was entitled to do in the first instance, namely, go into the market and buy at the then price" Here the right of the buyer to go into the market and huy at the "then price" is based on the express or supplied consent of the seller

In Ashmore & Co v. Coz & Co (1) there was an agreement by the defendant to sell hemp to the plaintiffs, the elipment to be made between certain dates The agreement contained a prevision that if the goods did not arrive from loss of the vessel or other unavoidable cause, the contract was to be avoided It hecame impossible (in a husiness sense) for the defendants to ship the hemp between the specified dates They shipped hemp on a later date (in September) and on October the 27th declared against the centract. The plaintiffs refused to accept this declaration and returned it to the defondants who in November wrote that it was the only declaration they were in a position to make. The plaintiffs brought an action and it was held that they were entitled to damages with reference to the market price in November when the defendants netified their inability to make a declaration in accordance with the contract this case the defendants by making the shipment in September and hy declaring that shipment against the contract intimated that they treated the contract as a subsisting contract and having done that they could not be heard to say they were not hable for damages on the hasts of the market price when they finally notified their inability to make a declaration in accordance with the centract

In Ni koll & Knight v Ashton Edridge & Co (2), where the defendants had failed to perform their contract within the timo agreed upon, the Court held that they were protected. by the terms of the contract and were not lable MATTHEW, J. MOTTHATA MANIAGARAN LEKRU HEDDIAR WHITE CJ however dealt with the question of the measure of damages as if the plaintiff had been entitled to recover. In that case the event which rendered the contract impossible of performance occurred in December 1899 and in that month notice of the fact was given to the plaintiff The contract was for the delivery of goods during January 1000 With reference to the question of damages, MATTHEW, J, observed "It appeared that towards the end of December the plaintiffs might have obtained another cargo at the thon market price which was much lower than the price at the end of January. But it was insisted for the plaintiffs that they were entitled to wait and watch the rising market until the end of January, and thou claim their damages on the footing of the then mail et price. In my opinion that contention was wholly untenable Having regard to the decision in Roth v Taysen(1). I think the plaintiffs were bound to ondoavour to mitigate the loss by acting as ordinary men of bus ness would have acted that is to say, by determining the hability at the earliest date at which they were able to obtain another cargo" In the case before us I think damages should be assessed with reference to the murket rate it the expiry of the 60 days agreed upon as the time for delivery in the contract We must set aside the decree of the Subordinate Court The case must go back to the Subordinate Judge to be dealt with on this footing The plaintiffs must pay the costs in this Court, the other costs to be dealt with by the Jadge.

Arino, J.—The facts of the case out of which this revision petition arises are simple. Defendint contracted on 12th May 1909 to deliver to pluntiffs, 6 candies of cotton at Rs. 147 a candy within 60 days. He fuled to deliver. Neither party took any action on the expiry of the term allowed (12th July 1909). On 4th September 1909, plauniffs wrote a letter (Exhibit 8) demanding delivery of the cotton within a week. To this defendant made no reply. On 3rd October 1909, plauniff wrote (Exhibit C) resending the contract and claiming Rs. 228 as damages, being the difference between the contract price on that date.

He sub equently brought this suit for the receivery of this amount, and the Sub Judge has given him a decree as sued for

Defendant (petitionor) contends that plaintiffs are only entitled to damages on the basis of the difference between the contract price and the price on 12th July 1909, when the contract was broken by his failure to deliver. This is the only point argued The view of the learned Sub Judge, that the power to extend the time of delivery which plaintiff claims is conferred by section 63 of the Contract Act seems to be notenable and 18 not seriously put forward before us Section 63 deals only with concessions on the part of the promisee advantageous to the promisor stated in Cunningham and Snephard on the Contract Act is clear, however that as the act of the promisor must be in the nature of n concession advantageous to the promisee rather than to the promises so the consequence of the act must be the relieving of the promisee wholly or in part from his liahility under the contract " The section cannot be invoked to support an extension of time by the promisor for his own henefit

The only possible basis for plaintiff's claim is in fact section 55 which makes the contract on failure of performance within the fixed time, "voidable at the option of the promisor " It is contended by Mr Seshagiri Iyer that this section confers on the promises the discret onary right although the promisor may have broken the contract by non fulfilment within the time allowed of tacitly treating the contract as subsisting for as long as he likes until it suits h m to formally rescand it that damages should be assessed with reference to price at date of rescussion and that the promisce may defer rescussion to such a date as will enable him to secure the largest amount in the shape of damages

As some sort of safeguard against this being pushed to obviously unreasonable lengths he admits that the promisor may put an end to the contract on the expiry of the fixed term or afterwards by specifically stating his unwillingness to per Sect on 55 contains no suggestion of such a proviso and one is pri d face inclined to I old that a reading of that section which requires such an unauthorised modification to make it reasonable and workable is not the correct one

It appears to me that section 55 read with section 2 (1) means nothing more than this On the promisor's failure to perform within the contract time, he (the promisor) sees the powers to MUTTHAYA MANIAGABAN V. LEKKU REDDUAR AYLING, J. enforce the contract, that is, to claim: any advantage due to himself thereunder. The promises on the other hand, has the option of enforcing it or not as may suit him. He may drop it altogether, and in some cases it would be to his interest to do so. If he elects to "enforce" it he can only do so by suing under section 73 for damages for breach; for the contract itself, heing for performance within a date which is past, is impossible of execution in terms. The damages for which he can obtain compensation under section 73 are those "which instirally arose in the usual course of things from such breach, or which the parties knew, when they made the contract, to he likely to result from the breach of it," which cannot include any aggravation of damages caused by the promiseo's action or inaction subsequent to the breach.

This appears to be the natural and equitable meaning of the act: and applying it to the present case, I think the damages should he reduced to the difference between the contract price and the price on 12th July 1909. I concor in the order proposed by the learned Chief Justice.

P. The decision

in Ghulam Hussain v. Dina Nath(1) is in accordance with this view. The fact that there was an order for sale in that case made no difference in the rights of the attaching creditor. JUDGMENT -The plaintiff, the trustee of a devosom, sues to Weire, OJ redeem a mortgage of Rs 50 created by the plaintiff's karnayan on the 21st January 1891 It is admitted that on the 21st February 1905, the same kurnayan mortgaged the lands included in the mortgage instrument aforesaid with certain other lands for Rs. 1.650. On the same day he also mortgaged the equity of redemption for Rs 1,500 It is conceded this mortgage for Rs 1,650 was a consolidation of three previous n origages, due for Rs. 900, dated 25th March 1890 and the other for Rs 700 on the 13th February 1890 and the mortgage for Rs 50 which the plaintiff seeks to redeem. The mortgage for Rs 900 has been already declared to be binding on the property

The District Judge held that the mortgage of Ra 50 is now no longer in force as it is merged in the mortgage for Rs 1.650 and that the plaintiff is bound to sue to set aside the mortgages of the 21st February 1905, and as a sait to redeem on those mortgages or set them aside will not lio in the Munsif's Court he dismissed the suit

The question in dispute is concluded by authority The proper valuation of a suit to redeem a mortgage is the amount of the mortgage or mortgages admitted by the plaintiff to be binding on him not the mortgages set up by the defendant. Otherwise if the plaintiff files this suit in a Court of higher jurisdiction and succeeds in proving that the mortgages binding on him are less than Rs 2,500, his plaint may be returned to him to be filed in the Mansif's Court In a suit of this nature the question of jurisdiction has to be decided upon the averments in the plaint not with reference to the pleas of the defendant. see Chandu v Kombi(1) which is directly in point

It was then argued that the plaintiff is bound to set uside the subsequent mortgages created by his karnavan and the present suit treated as one to set them uside is not maintainable RARU

as three years from the date of the mortgages had expired before its iostitution and as the amount of the mortgage exceeds the jurisdiction of the Munsif's Court

It may be doubted whether the plaintiff is in the position of a junior member of a tarwad seeking to set aside an alienation by his karnavan. Ho is a trustee impeaching the conduct of his predecessor in office

But treating the case as that of a momber of a tarwad seeking to recover possession of properties mortgaged by his karnavan, we do not think it is necessary for him to set aside the mortgage granted by the karnavan. The same contention was put forward and distillowed in Chanlu v Kombi(1), by Krenan and Muthusami Arran, JJ, Shei gard and Weir, JJ, in Unni v. Kunchi Amma(2) following the judgment to an earher case Ramen v Valua Amah(2) hy Turnin, CJ and Krenan, J [See the judgment extracted in Unni v. Kunchi Amma(2)]

The property of the tarwad is vested in the members of the tarwad. The keroavan can chenate the property only when the interests of the tarwad require such elements. When he makes therefore an electrical which is not binding on the other members, it is undecessary for the other members to set it saids.

They may suo to recover possession on their title and they would be estitled to recover such possession of the defendant does not prove the validity and hinding effect of the alteration on the other members of the turwed. The case may be different where the plaintiffs thomselves have executed the instrument under which the defendant claims.

Cortain cases were ruled upon by the respondent's pleader in which it was held that a minor was bound to set aside an altenation by his guardina. The case of a guardian and a minor is govereed by a separate article in the Limitation Act. Those cases may be distinguished on the ground that to such cases a guardian excentes the instrument solely on behalf of a minor and if it is not building on the minor it ceases to have any legal effect, where is an almostion by a larriayan though not binding on the other members of a family may continue to be binding on the larriaxan. We therefore reverse the decree of the lower Appellate Court and direct the appeal to be restored to the file and disposed of in accordance with law. Costs will abide the result,

MILLER, J -- I think the transaction alleged in this case to have taken place in 1892 may properly be held to be an exchange of property within the meaning of section 118 of the Transfer of Property Act, if it is not sale. By it the mortgageo gave up his right to possession in part of the land mortgaged and the mortgage money due to him and received the equity of redemption in another part of the land Even if this transaction was made by way of a compromise of disputes it is not suggested that it amounted merely to an acknowledgment or adjustment of existing rights and the operations amounted, I think, to transfers of ownership in numoveable property. The arrangement was therefore invalid for want of a registered anatr ament and could not affect the title

MILLER, J.

It is, however, contended that it may be proved as showing the intention of the parties to discharge this mortgage at that time and so, as showing clarge in the nature of the mortgager's posses-ton after the date of the arrangements, so as to make it adverse to the mortgagor. The intention to discharge the mortgage involves the intention to make certain transfers and it is impossible to say that if those transfers fuled both parties nevertheless intended to discharge the mortgagor therefore had 60 years for his suit under Article 148 of the 2nd schedule of the Limitation Act and he has come within that time

SADASIVA AYMAR, J.—I entirely agree in the conclusion of Sadasiva my learned brother and in the reisons given by him for the said conclusion. But out of respect for the strenuous arguments advanced with great conteness by the appellant's learned vakil, I have thought it not improper to pronounce a judgment in my

The facts and pleadings necessary to understand the contentions on both sides are shortly as follows plaintiff snes for redemption of the plaint A schedule lands alone. though both A and B schedule lands were asufructually mortgaged in 1885 by a registered instrument for Rs 3804. The plantiff's allegation is that the B scheduled lands were redeemed in 1893 by a payment of Rs 2: 0 and hence, only the A scheduled land remained to be redeemed on payment of the balance of Rs. 1801 The contesting defondants (who represent the original mortgagee) pleided (a) that the A schedule properties were "orally sold" to the mortgagee in consideration of Rs 1.600 due to the mortgagee under the mortgage document of 1885 and some other documents (the written statement itself using the word "sold"), (b) that thus the mortgage document of 1885 was discharged and the mortgagee became full owner of the A schedule properties by the oral sale while the mortgagor got back the B schedule property free of the mortgage charge, and (c) that, as the mortgagee and his assignces have been enjoying the A schedule lands as owners by adverse possession from 1892 for more than 12 years before anit, they have got a good title by prescription under article 141 of the second schedule of the Lamitation Act

The Lower Appellato Court held that the mortgage contract created by the registered document of 1885 could not be resunded by the alleged oral agreement or sale of 1892 and that under section 92 of the Indian Evidence Act, oral ovidence was inadmissible to prove any such agreement. On this ground, the Lower Appellate Court confirmed the Munsit's decree, allowing in plaintiff's fivour the redemption of the A schedule lands. The defeudants Nos 2, 3 and 4 are the special appellants before ne

- (a) The oral sale of 1893 m respect of the A schedule lands set up by the appellants does not come under the deficition of "sale" or "exchange" in the Transfer of Property Act, it is a peculiar "transfer" of property not covered by the Transfer of Property Act, section 54, and such a transfer could be offected by oral agreement and does not require a written registered instrument to effect it, though this consideration for such a transfer and the value of the transferred property (roughly) have been Rs 1,000
- (b) Even if the oral sale of 1892 is invalid to fransfer the title to the A scheduled properties to the mortgagee, it operated as a discharge of the merigage debt of 1885 charged on both A and B schedule properties. Hence the mortgagee's possession of the A schedule properties ceased from 1892 to be the possession of a mortgagee and became the possession of a trespassor. More than 12 years' possession before such is trespassor has conferred full title as owner on the mortgagee and his assigns, and
- (6) Oral evidence can be given, notwithstanding section 92 of the Evidence Act, to prove that the obligation of the mortgiger to pay money under the mortgage has been discharged; such oral evidence need not be restricted to the evidence of the payment of money or its equivalent in moveables or choses in oction or other personal property. Oral evidence can be given of an invalid sale (invalid for want of a registered written instrument evidencing it) and such invalid sale could salidly operate as a discharge of the inortgage deed, though meffectual to trun-fer title.

As regards contection (a), I thick it very improbable that the legislature, when enacting by the Transfer of Property Act, that a registered instrument is indispensible in the case of a transfer of land by sale (section 54), transfer of land by evelanges (118), transfer of land by grift (123), transfer of interests in land by way of lease (section 167) and transfer of interests in land by way of mortgage (section 59) where the interest transferred in any of the e-modes is a substantial interest, could have intended to exclude any transfers by act of parties of in interest in immovable proporty of over Rs 100 in value, from the necessity of heing evidenced by a registered instrument, or could have intended to allow such transfers to be effected by oral agreement or by other than a registered instrument. I have very little doubt that all such transfers interviews were intended to be included in the one or other of the transactions coming mider the heads of "sale" (chapter III), "energinge" (chapter V), "exchange" (chapter V), acchange (chapter V) and "gift"

(chapter VII). Any "transfers" made in the way of creation of trusts were provided for in the Trusts Act, section 5 of which mays, "no trust in rolation to immoveable property is valid unless declared by a non-testamentary instrument in writing ... registered." Section 9 of Act IV of 1882 allowing "transfer of property" without writing except where a writing is expressly required by law, does not weakon to any approcable degree the patient conclusion derivable from a study of the Transfer of Property Act as a whole, that the legislitute was very anxious that all important transfers of landed property [and even transfers of choses (section 130) in action and transfers of intangible rights (section 54)] should be ovidenced by registered instrument, so as to prevent latgants from letting in oral evidence as to alleged transfers about the truth or falsehood of which oral evidence, it is almost impossible for Courts to come to a satisfactory conclusion in most cases.

So far as transfers of land by convoyance (that is excluding transfers by mortgages and leases) are concerned, I think that if they are not settlements or declarations of trust, they were mitended by the legislature to come within one of the herdings "sale," "exchange" or "gift" in the Fransfer of Property Act. "Sale" is defined in section 51 as a transfer of ownership in exchange for a price paid or promised and partly paid and partly promised, etc. The appullants valid ingeniously argued that "pince" means tangible money in current coins, it may be currency notes, and does not mean any other valuable consider-Thus according to this contention, it I sell my land to another in satisfaction of Rs 300 which I owo to him on a promissory-note, the transaction is not a "sale ' within the definition of the Transfer of Property Act, because I did not receive nor was I promised in future any current coins a, "price" Of course in ordinary parlance it is undoubtedly i "sale," and in this very case, the appell nis in their statement talled of the oral sale of 1893 in consideration of monors not paid or promised at time of sale but of moneys due on pilor dehts However I find in Bonvier's Law dictionary that the word ' page" surplfies that ' it consists in money to be paid down, or at a future time for if it he of anything else it will no longer be a price, nor the contract a sale, but exchange or harter" and Shringen, J, in his commentary on the Fransfer of Property Act says "price " includes "money only" The startling result of this technical view is that many so called sales of land where the consideration is the satisfaction of the old debts due to the vender as creditor are not "sales 'at all under the Transfer of Property Act Pushing the marter further, suppose the purchaser hands over Government promissory notes or a cheque on a Government Bank or on the Bank in which both parties have invested their money, or currency notes instead of money, can it be said he does not pay" price" for his purchase. I do not think that such was the intention of the legislature by the mere use of the word "price" If the price is fixed in the conveyance in current coin. I think that the words "price paid" will cover cases where the vendors claim for the receipt of the price is satisfied by giving him what he accepts as tantamount to such payment. For instance, if ho says in effect, " Here I own you three hundred rupees under promissory note and you now owe me three hundred rupces as the price of the land I sell Why should we go through the farce of your paying me Rs 300 in current com for the purchase money and toy handing it back to you to repay your promissory note dubt? We shall take it that both processes have taken place" I think that in such a case we must take it that the "price" was paid and the transaction is a "sale" though no coms were actually paid by the purchaser. If two persons mntually exchange two things (norther of which is "money only") it may be an exchange or parter and uet a sale. But if they mentally fix the values of the exchanged things in current coin and then exchange them as of equal value, I think they might be held to effect "sales," and not to pay "pinces" and not merely to effect an exchange or harter.

ATYAR, J.

Even if I am wrong in holding that a conveyance of land in consideration of the moneys already due to the vendee by the vendor do come under the definition of "sale" in section 54 of Act IV of 1882, I think such transactions ought to be brought under the definition of "exchange" under section 118 of Act IV of 1882, which makes all the provisions as to the mode of effecting transfers of land by sides applicable to transfer of land by each maes also "Lychange" according to the definition in section 118, is a mutual transfer of ewiter-hip of two things, neither of which is " money oney It seems to me that if a conveyance of land for a debt due by the yender to the vendee is not a "sale" it is clearly an "Lachange" as the debtor-vendor transfers his ownership in land (which is not "money and affortiors not money only") while the vendeo transfers the ownership in his chose in action (the debt due by the vendor) to the debtor-vendor (so as to merge and oxinguish the debt the debtor and creditor becoming the same individual by the transfer of the debt to the debter lumself) Here also, the chose in action so transferred in its turn, is not "money only" It is argued that the vender creditor does not transfer his rights as creditor to the sendor-debter but only treats the debt as discharged. This seems to me to be merely a play upon words. for the debt is relinquished in favour of the debtor, and the substance of the transaction is a transfer of the debt to the debtor. In fact, where a testator relinquishes, by his will, a debt in favour of the debtor, it is appropriately styled a gift, by way of legacy, of the debt to the debter, and where a multiagee relinquishes his mortgage debt he frequently does it by executing a reconveyance of the mortgage interests created under the mortgage deed to the mortgager.

If such transfers of land do not come under either the he ids of "sale" or "exchange", the extraordinary result would be that a conveyance of lands worth even 1 dec of ruptes can be legally effected by oral agreement if the purchaser lands the money a few days before the oral conveyance and rulinguishes his debt a few days effectwards as consideration for the ural ARIYA conveyance I refuse to believe that such a result could have ever been dreamt by the Legislature I have no doubt that all conveyances of ownership right in lands were intended to be brought under "sales" or "gifts" or "exchanges", and that a conveyance for a lac of rupees due on a promissory-note to the vendee was not intended to be oxcluded from the necessity of being evidenced by a registered instrument

Rehauce is placed by the appellants' learned vakil on a case decided by this High Court but not reported in any authorized reports. It is found in Thiruvengidachariar v. Ranganatha Ayyangar(1), whore it was held that when two brothers orally gave their lands to their sister in satisfaction of some claim of . hers against them, "the transaction was not a gift nor a sale nor an exchange under the Transfer of Property Act" With the greatest respect, I am clear in my mind that it was either a silo or a mutual "exchange" of two things, neither of which was "money only ' and I am therefore not prepared to follow this case. I know that where a compromise is not intended newly to create or effect a transfer of title, but is only an acknowledgment of existing rights in lands, it is not a sale or exchange Tseo Krishna Tanhaji v Aba Shetti Patik(2)] and need not comply with the provisions of section 54 of Act IV of 1882 in order to be treated as valid. But neither the present case nor that in Thirmengidachariar v Ringinatha Ayyangar(1), is such a case of compromise. I therefore overrule the appellant's contection that a relistered writing was not necessary to validate the illeged sale of 1892. I might here be permitted to extress the wish that the British Indian legislature would pass an enactment making a registered writing indispensible for the validity of all settlements, partition agreements, and wills and authorities to adopt throughout British India, maling very few exceptions in special cases (such as soldiers' and sulors' wills). so that the flood of intrieste and uncertain litigation on such questions might le brought within bounds and the perjury in connection with wills executed out of the Presidency towns and with partitions and adoptions might be put an end to to some extent

continued to hold possession is mortgages owing to the alleged sale of 1893 being invalid and ineffective to convey to him the ownership in the equity of redemption in the A schedule properties, he cannot by merely asserting possession as owner under the invalid sale convert his possession as mortgages into possession as owner even granting that the mortgages knew and acquiesced in his assertion Byari v Pattanna(1) Raminin v Kerala Varna Patta Raja(2), Hagyant Gount v Kondi valid Makadu(3) and Kharajmal v Daim(4), clearly lay down that article 144 cannot be invoked in favour of the mortgages if the mortgager is not barred by article 148 from redoming and recovering possession of the mortgaged property

The last contention about the admissibility of oral evidence to prove the alleged discharge of the mortgage of 1885 might be disposed of shortly A mortgage might oven if created by a registered instrument, be proved to have been extinguished by letting in admissible evidence (including oral evidence) of payment of the mortgage amount or by letting in admissible en lence of any other transaction which operates as a mode of payment-Ramavatar v Tulse Prosad Singh(5) It has been similarly held in Kattika Bipunumma v Kattil i Kristnini ma(6) that while a subsequent oral agreement to modify the terms a registered maintenance deed cannot be proved, the fact that in particular years the obligee was in possession of certain lands of the obligor and parl herself the maintenance amount out of the profits of the lands can be proved. See also Kurampalla Unna Kurup , Tiekhu Vittel Muthoral utts(7) and Gosets Subba Row v Varigon la Narasimh im(8) Here the defendants do not seek to prove that by the payment of any money or by the recent by the mortragee of prohts of other lands of the mort gagor, the claim of the mortgigee was pail up and thus the mortgage was extinguished, but they wish to prove an invalid oral conveyance (of which evidence is legally mad missible) of the equity of redemption in a ports n of the mor gaged property as having had the offect of the payment of the mortgage money Oral evidence to prove a c averance as equivalent to payment of money has not been allowed in any of the cases cited and could not be allowed. Receipt of mesne profits by possession of lands and receipt of moneys can be proved by oral evidence but not an oral sale of lands worth more than Rs 100 nor can such oral sale be taken as equivalent to the payment of the value of the land invahily sold.

defendants huilt a Louse for the purpose of hiving a skin godown on a portion of the holding which according to the plaintiff the defendants had no right to do. The plaint alleges that "the act was hible to cause damage to the relationship of landlord and tenant prevailing between the two parties and to the rights and rehefs which the plaintiff has under the Madras Estates Land Act" (paragraph 11 of the plaint). In the written statement the defendants pleided that the ryots, from time immomerial, had been cluming the right to build skin godowns, indigo godowns, bungalows, etc., to live in and let out, on the lands in respect of which assessment was collected in Salem mitta and that the plaintiff mittadar and his predecessors had accepted such right

The Deputy Collector dismissed the suit On appeal, the District Judge has held that the defendants' act in constructing a skin godown or tannery was improper and he granted an injunction against the defendant, directing him to dismantle the tannery and to discontinue tanning in the field The defendants relied upon a custom in the mitta, according to which ryots holding agricultural land wore entitled to erect skin godowns and tanneries and relied on the judgment in a previous suit by the mittadar against another ryot in Original Suit No 385 of 1904 In that case it appears that a custom of the sort pleaded by the tenant was upheld by the Courts The District Judge observes, with respect to the judgment in that suit that the specific question whether a tannery would rende, the land unfit for agriculture was not raised and that Act I of 1908 was not then in force The circumstance, however, that the question whether a tannery would render the land unfit for agriculture was not raised would not render the judgment in admissible in ovidence or deprive it of all weight, as the effect of the custom would be to render the defendants' act proper even if the tannery rondered the land on which it was crected unfit for agriculture The effect of the defendants' plea in fact is to make it a part of the contract between the parties, that a skin godown or tannery might be erected, although no express provision to that effect he inide in the contract between the parties. With respect to Act I of 1908 we are nurble to find any provision in it which would render such a contract or custom invalid. Section 151 onacts that "A landholder may institute a suit before the Collector to eject an occupancy ryot from his holding only on the ground that the ryot has materially impaired the value of the helding for agricultural purposes and rendered it substantially until for such purposes."

Reading it with clause (g) of section 187, which lays down that "Nothing in any contract between a landholder and a ryot made hefore or after the passing of this Act, shall entitle a landholder to eject a 130t otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of this Act," and also along with section 9, which provides that "No landholder shall as such be entitled to eject a ryot from his holding or my part thereof otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of this Act," section Iol appears only to restrict the right of the landholder to eject the ryot by limiting it to a case whose a ryot has materially impaired the value of the holding for agricultural purposes

Section 11 has been robed on by the learned valid for the respondent. It stotes that "a type may use the land in his holding in any manner which does not maternally impair the value of the land or render it unfit for agricultural purposes." But this section does not deprive him of the benefit of a contract or usage which would entitle him to use it in a manner which might impair the value of the land for agricultural purposes. After all, the contract or usage would simply amount to a permission to the ryot to use the land for other than agricultural purposes, It would no doubt, probably have the effect, in case of relinquish ment of the land by him, of depriving the building of the benefit of letting it out agan for agricultural purposes. There is, however, nothing in the Act which renders such a contract or outstom unenforceable against the landholder.

The District Judge has not considered the ovidence of custom as a whole before recording a finding on the question. The respondent contends that there was no definite issue on the question of custom, although the diffendants' right to erect a skin godown or tannery was generally put in issue. It is, we think, desirable that a specific issue should be raised on the question and decided. It will be necessary to find the limits of any customary right which the ryot may possess to erect a tannery. The appellants' pleader is hardly prepared to go the length of contending that the whole of a holding could be used for such a purpose after framing a specific issue on the question, whether the defendant was justified by any legal and valid custom in erecting a skin godown or tannery and what are the exact incidents of such a custom. Both parties will be entitled to adduce fresh evidence. All costs up to date will abide the result.

JUDGMENT —A question of Hindu Liw of some importance has been raised for decision in this Second Appeal. The necessary facts may be very hirefly stated. One Manickam and Chinnappa were two Hindu hrothers. They were living separately for a considerable time. The planning is the son of Manickam. He sues to recover one half of certain lands which were sold by Chinnappa in 1899. Evidently the lands in question as well as other property belonging to the brothers were managed by Chinnappa. The planning case was that he and Chinnappa were undivided numbers and that the sale made by Chinnappa was not binding on him. He therefore claimed to iccove one-half of the properties sold treating the sale of the other balf as vahid, as Chionappa was entitled to alienate his own share for consideration.

Several questions of fact were raised by the defendant which it is unnecessary to refer to for the purpose of this judgment. The Lower Courts found that the family was undivided. The Appellato Court also overrolled the contention of the defendant that the plaintiff singlet to a chair of the family properties was extinguished by the statute of fluidations no rood reason has been shown for interfering in Second Appeal with the finding on this latter question.

Mr Seshagara Ayyar argued that the plaintiff was estopped by his conduct from disputing the abenation made by Chanappa but the finding of the Munsif on the question of estoppel was against him and no facts have been brought to our notice which would show that the plaintiff was estopped. The Lower Appellate Court hold that out of Rs 500, the consideration for the sale deed, (Exhibit VIII) executed by Chinnappa, Rs 250 was borrowed by him for purposes binding on the family consisting of himself and his nophew, the plaintiff, but that the remaining Rs 250 was not hinding on the plaintiff. On these facts he had to decide what decree the plaintiff was entitled to He came to the conclusion that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for the half share claimed by him without making any pay ments to the defendant In doing so he considered himself supported by the authority of the decision in Marappa Gaundan v Rangasami Gaundan(1) In Second Appeal it is contended hy the learned valid for the appellant that the view taken by Vapivztav the Judge is wrong Mi Seshagiri Ayyar asks us to proceed on the basis that the amount Rs 250 which is found to have been borrowed for family purposes must be regarded as a charge on the plaintiff's share of the property, he argues that the family having benefited to the extent of Rs 250 hy the sale the plaintiff cannot recover his share without paying that amount In effect, he asks us to treat Chinnappa as having sold his own half share for the portion of the consideration which has been held to be not binding on the family and the other half shire for the portion held to be binding Mr Nates Ayyar for the respondent asks us to do just the contrary, that is to hold that Chincappa must be taken to have sold his own half share for the portion of the consideration feld binding on the family and the remaining half share for the portion held not to bind the family We can find no legal principles on which we can adopt either of these cour es According to accepted equitable principles, in the absence of anything appearing to the contrary the consideration for the sale must be distributed over the whole of the property sold in proportion to the value of each part. On this principle the whole of the Rs 500 must be distributed over the shares belonging to the plaintiff and Chinuappa respectively. There is no ground for supposing that one portion of the consideration was allocated to a purnoular half share and the other portion to the other half share. The valid portion of the consideration as

Only one decided one-Marapi Gau lan v han jasami Gaundan(1) bearing on the point has been brought to our notice, namely the case relied on by the District Judge. That case was in its facts similar to the pre ent one A Hin lu fither sold certain property. The sale was hell to be invalid but portion of the consideration was found to have been used for the benefit of the family, namely for the discharge of a mortgage of

SUBRAHMANYA AYYAR, J . held that the son was entitled to recover his half share without repaying any portion of the consideration which was used for the benefit of the family. With great deference to the lowned Judge we find it difficult to accept the reasoning on which his indgment is based. He was much influenced by the practical inconvenience which, according to him, was likely to arise if the alieneo was allowed in such a case to claim reimbursement of a portion of the consideration found to be binding on the family The learned Judge observes, " now a sale of joint property by a co parcener, though made without logal nocessity, is in this presidency valid to the extent of the vendor'e share Suppose that that share is really worth the whole of the amount paid by the vendce as the price, why should be get anything more Noxt, suppose that that share is really worth less than the price paid The vendee cannot, in such a case, reasonably ask for a charge for more than the difference between "the real value of the share which he gets and the price he has actually paid It is scarcely necessary to say that questions as to such valuation are often not capable of casy or satisfactory settlement' The whole of this reasoning proceeds on the assumption that when a co parcener sells his share as well as the shares of other members the other co parceners are entitled to raise the question as to what is the real value of the share of the alienor It cannot be doubted that a co parcener is entitled to part with his own share in any family property for any consi deration he pleases. It is equally clear that as between the vendor and the vendee in the absence of any contract to the contrary the consideration for a sale will be apportioned between all the items of the property sold in case of dispute There seems to be no reason for allowing the alienor's co parceners to ask the court to adopt any other principle. It may be, as observed by the learned Judge, that questions as to valuation are often not capable of 'easy or satisfactory settlement,' hut assuming it to he so, the right of a co parcener to sell his own property being now well recognized, the equities as between the vendee and the other co parceners have to be adjusted by the court in the hest manner possible, nor does such adjustment seem to present any insuperable difficulties. No question is raised in this case of any collusion hotween the vondee and

Chinnappa, and it is difficult to find any reason for proceeding on any other view than the principle already enunciated of apportioning the consideration on the whole of the property sold, The learned Judge proceeds to say "The sampler and the better view undoubtedly is that if the vendee wishes to stand by a sale which is valid only partially, such as the present, he must be content with the vendor's share but that if he wishes to repudiate the transaction altogether, his remedy is only against the vendor in a suit for the return of the price paid, on the ground that the consideration for the payment failed" It is hardly necessary to say that the semedy proposed might be altogether useless in many cases On the whole, the proper course in this case appears to be to direct that the decree of the Lower Appellate Court be medified by decreeing to the plaintiff a half share in the properties sold by Chinnappa, after division by mete, and bounds, on coodition that he pays to the defeodants Rs 125, with mesne profits from the day that he deposits the said amount of Rs. 125 into Court and gives notice thereof to the defendants.

The memorandum of objections relates only to the form of the docree and as we have already dealt with it no further order is norossary. The defendants will pay two thirds of the plaintiff's costs throughout.

Jupagar — Ihis is a cuit for possession of a house site. The plaintiff stated in her plaint that the house was purchased by her clders, that her husband left the place and went away to foreign places, that she and her father in-law lived in it subsequently for five or six years, that the father-in-law, then died, that she then continued to live in the house for sometime till it fell down, that she then went to live with her brother in another village and that when she returned to the village in 1908, she found that the defendants had trepassed on it.

The defendants put the plaintiff to the proof of her title and possession. The case that the plaintiff attempted to make out at the hearing was that she succeeded to the house as the heir of her husband. No positive evidence was adduced to show that her husband survived her father-in-law She could not succeed unless the Court found that she did so It is argued by the learned valil for the appellant that the Appellate Court was bound to presume that her husband hved for a period of seven years after he left the village and that as the father-ia-law died before the expiration of the seven years the husband must be taken to have survived him Rehance is placed on the combined effect of sections 107 and 108 of the Indian Evidence Act. The former section states that if a person is proved to have lived within a period of 30 years and the question is whether he is alive or dead the onus is on the party who asserts that he is dead This is qualified by section 108 which lays down that when it is proved that a person has not been heard of for seven years by those who would naturally have heard of him if he had been alive the burden of proving that he is alive is on the person who offirms it. It is argued that maximuch as under section 107 it is caough to prove that a man was alive within 30 years to throw the onus of proving his death on the party who asserts it there is a presumption that he lived during the 30 years and that section 108 modifies it only where it is proved that the person was not heard of for seven years We are unable to agree with the appellant's vakil as to the meaning to he put on section 107 Both sections 107 and 108 deal with the procedure to be followed when a question is raised before a Court as to whether a person is alive or dead Neither of these sections in our opinion lays down any presumption as to how long a man was alive or at what time he died. The contention for the appellant is not supported by any Indian authority cited hefore us On the other hand, the view we take is supported by the pronouncement of the Calcutta High Court in Narla v Lal Sahu(1) and of the Allahabad High Court in a recent Full Bonch decision in Muhammad Sharif v Bande Ali(2) A passago from Lawson on Presumptive Evidence has been read to us which goes to show that in America there is a pressurption that a man was alive nutil the expiration of the period of seven years from the time that he was last heard of. That in our opinion is not the Indian Law.

Then it is argued that there is at least a presumption of fact that the husband was alive for escen years after he was heard of Assuming that a Court may make a presumption that o man was alive during some period after he was heard of, it would depend entirely on the encuinstances whether the Court would make such presumption or not. We are unable to say that on this facts placed before us, the Court should have inferred as a presumption of fact that plaintiff's lineband was alive when his father died even if we would be justified to interfering in Second Appeal on the ground that a presumption of fact has not been made. We ore therefore unable to interface with the finding on the question of title

Then it is contonded that the finding on the question of plaintiff a possession cannot legally he upheld The finding perhaps is not quite satisfactory. But the plaintiff's own case was that though she hvod in the house for some time after her father in law died she left it as the house fell down 20 years before the suit. It is not shown how her possession could be taken to continuo during the period of her absence. Nor is it shown that she had acquired a title by prescription before she left the place We cannot agree that the plaintiff would be entitled to tack her own possession on to that of her father-in law person who has been found to have no title cannot rely on the possession of another, if he did not enter on possession as his heir. Here the plaintiff's case was that she entered on possession as heir of her husband, not of her father in law the whole we do not think that we would be justified in interfering in this case in Second Appeal We therefore dismiss it with costs

The main questions for determination in these appeals were whether under the provisions of the Madras Reit Recovery Act (Madras Act VIII of 1865) there is any right of appeal to the High Court from a judgment of the District Judge passed on appeal in a summary suit under the Act before a Collector, whether the High Court was right in setting aside on second appeal in fluding of fact arrived at by the lower Appellate Court, and if so whether the appellants (defendants) were bound to accept the pattas tendered to them respectively by the respondent (plaintiff) whereby he purported to ruse the roits on certain of his linds cultivated by his tenants (the appellants), and to alter the condition of the tennre which had been in force for more than 25 years, that the reits should be paid by the tenants in money

The appellants and their ancestors but respectively occupied the lands in question in the villages of Maddur and Chowdavaram, which are part of the respondent's zamindari, for a long period of time. Up to the end of this fash year 1283 the asara system was in force under which the tenants paid the zamindar by way of rent in kind a sbaro of the crops raised by them. For fash 1284 a change was made, and pattes and muchilikas were exchanged between the zamindar and the tenants in which a money rent (iresadad) was stipulated for. The holdings were the cashing and the stands of the crops are the factorial of the continuous standard of the

were, and were rented accordingly, but clauses were inserted to RAVI VERRA the effect that if "wet" or garden crops were raised on dry RAGHAVULU lands the tenant should pay the excess cist " which you (the zamındar) may fix therefor" This continued until, as the result of the extension of Government triggation works part of each holding was brought under arrigation, and wet cultivation Pattas were then tendered on behalf of the zamindar which provided that in respect of the "wet" or irrigated lands rent should be paid "according to isara," as therein stated, that is, that the rent should be a fixed proportion of the crop in The tenants refused to pay anything except what they had been previously paying for the land as dry lands

The present suits were accordingly instituted by the respond ent under section 9 of Madras Act VIII of 1865 and the pleadings in them are sufficiently sot out in the judgment of the Indical Committee

The issues fixed were (1) "Whether commutation rates arrived at in 1983 are not binding with respect to lands subsequently converted into (babut) wet? and (2) If any alteration is found to be pormissible, whether the u are system can be introduced with regard to (bubut) wet? '

The Assistant Collector on the first issue found ' that the lat's settled in 1283 are not binding they subsequatly underwent alterations and the rates fixed in 1292 are those which I held to be binding with respect to lands subsequently converted into babut' wet" He answered the second issue n the negative and in the result decrees were made dismissing the buits

"The point for consideration between the parties is that while the plaintiff wants to revert to the asara rate on lands cultivated with wetcrops the defendants contend that they are only hable to 1 as fixed money tents on all lands whether wet ordry Tie admitted facts are these. The asara system was in force on all lands until fash 1283 In fash 1284 the money rent system was introduced and rates fixed The system remained in force nutil fash 1314 when I laintiff wante I to raise the rents on lands where wet crops were rai ed The defend ants demursed to this and refused to pay anything more than the rates settled in 1292 The plaintiff than tendered the rara pattas which are the subject of the present suits

"The appellant's contention is that when the money rents were RAGHANDIU fixed in fashs 1284 and 1292 they were only intended to apply to dry crops masmuch as there were no wet crops then in existence and NABASIMBA the question of wet rates was left open until the contingency should arise Now that the contingency has arisen, he is entitled to a wet rate for wet crops and failing to prive at a settlement with the ryots, he is entitled in the last resort to asara lates without obtaining the sanction of the Collector

> "In support of this contention appellant relies mainly on clauses (9) and (16) of the muchilikas which have been executed by the defendants up to the present time. These clauses are to the effect that if wet or garden crops are raised on dry lands a wet rate to be fixed at the discretion of the zamindar is to be paid

> 'I am of opinion that these clauses are far too vagne and inde finite to be given effect to No definite rate is fixed and it seems to me preposterons to suppose that the ryets would contract to pay any rate which the zamindar might choose to impose Moreover. the defendants contend that wet rate was only to be paid if facilities for irrigation were provided by the zamindar. The plaintiff admits that he has done nothing in this direction The water is provided by Covernment and a water rate is paid by the defendants to Government It is difficult to understand on what grounds the zamindar can claim remuneration in return for nothing, for, that is what his present demand practically amounts to

'I concur with the Head Assistant Collector and dismiss these al poals with costs'

Although there was no provision in Madras Act VIII of 1865 for an appeal from the decision of a District Judge, the respondent filed second appeals in all the suits against his decision, which were heard by a Division il Bench (Muneo and Pinney, JJ) who while agreeing with the Courts below that it was clear from the muchilikas that there was "no contract as to rates of rent payable for wet cultivation," came to the conclusion that inasmuch as there was no such contract the respondent was entitled under clanso (3) of section II of the Act to claim asara rates in respect of lands cultivated with wet crops, and held that the pattas tendered by the respondent tore proper pattas, and that the appellants were bound to accept them The High Court therefore decreed the suits

The appellants after applying for review of the decision of the High Court which application was dismissed, obtained leave to bring the present appeal in which-

MACNAGHTER, a case nuder the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 Sir Erle Richards, KC and Kennorthy Brown for the respondent (called on by their Lordships) contended that appeals to the High Court had been constantly brought, many of such cases were unreported and therefore not known. there years of the tenaucy and that in case of the refusal by the tenaut to iccept a pitla "such as the laudloid is entitled to impose," the laidlord can proceed under section 9 to enforce the acceptance by a summary suit before the Collector.

It has to be remarked that in the Madras Presidency, or cert un parts thereof, arrigated lands on which are grown what no cilled "wet crops," are generally subject to a higher rate of rent, either in kind or in cash, than those which yield only " dry crops," and that it is usual for the zamadars to enter into) only ongagoments by tendering pattas from year to year and obt mmng muchillas or counter-parts executed by the tenants evidencing the acceptance of the terms of the lease

Shortly statail, the respondent's case as made in his plaint, is that the ryote, the defendants in the suits, prior to fash 1283 (approximately corresponding to 1876), paid reat for the lands in their occupation on the asara or produce-sharing system, that in that you an arrangement was come to between them and the round ir by which a money payment " was substituted for the show of the produce," that this arrangement, however, was subject to the condition that whonever "the lands were fit for Wit cultivation the not rates would be settled." And he went on to add in pringraph 3 of the plaint-

'The lands mentioned in the tendered patta hereunte annexed having been nowly brought under wet cultivation, and on the plaintiff's otherals urmanding delendant to accept the agreement as in the surrounding villages in respect of wet crop cist, he (the defendant) having refused to do so, the mara patta with the rates Jucyanlang under the impremental system of sharing the grain heap (pulamitra isystem) was tondered for the wet land cultivated by him (defendant) for this year Is the defendant taking advintage this, refused to come to any agreement in respect of the dry land so for which there was no dispute at all, the rates and labus in spectactionly of the and wet land, but also of the tem many dry ad word as moral entered in the all parts. some years later (fash 1232) when the money rates were revised, RAVI VERBA the reesabadi system was accepted as the hasis of the new settlement, that recently they had been able, without any assistance or contribution from the ploutiff, to make their lands arrigable and fit for wet cultivation, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to revert to the charme system and thus indirectly to enhance their rents without the interposition of the Collecter's Court.

On these allegations of fact the parties went to trial. The issues framed by the Head Assistant Collector are net very clearly worded, but they sufficiently indicate the main points for determination, viz, whether the substitution of the viesabadi for the asara system in the defendant's villages was permanent in its character or, in other words, was the plaintiff zaminday cutitled to revert to the sharing-system on the lands being made irrigable by the tenants

The Collector on the evidence held in substance that the conversion of the asara rates into cash payment in 1283, which was confirmed in 1292, and had been acted upon over since, was a permanent arrangement, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to impose on the tenants pattas on the asara basis He accordingly dismissed the plaintiff's suits without entering into the questions raised in the latter part of paragraph 3 of his plaint.

On appeal by the zamindar the District Judge affirmed the decrees of the Collector in respect of the finding of fact relative to the character of the man cmeut of 1283, and upheld the orders dismissing the suits

From the decrees of the District Judge the plaintiff preferand second appeals to the High Court of Madras It is necessary te set out that pertion of the High Court judgment which forms, in their Lordships' opinion, the key to the decision of the learned Judges | They say -

" Lill fash 1253 the asara system was in force. In fash 1,54 money rents were introduced and the rates of such rents were permanently fixed in fash 1292. At that time all the lands were dry Wet cultivation began in fash 1514 and the notas a a in dispute were then tendered, as the tenants refused to pay mere than the rates fixed in 1232 which they but proviously been paying for the lands as dry Nothing had been done by the plaintiff to provide RACHAVULU

RAVI VEIRA facilities for irrigation. In the muchilikas executed by the tenants for fashs prior in 1314 there are clauses to the effect that the plaintiff may make an extra charge if wet or garden crops are raised on dry lands The amount of such extra charges is not however stated If the plantiff is entitled to demand asara rates, the rates mentioned in the pattas tendered are correct. The Courts below have taken the view that the plaintiff has tendered asara puttas as a means of enhancing the rent and that as he has not done snything to justify an enhancement of the tent, and has not obtained the sauction of the Collector for the enhancement, he is only entitled to the rents fixed in feel 1999

> " For the plaintiff it is contended that masmuch as there is no contract as to the rates of rent payable on lands cultivated with wet crops, he is entitled under clause 3 of section 11 of Act VIII of 1805 to claim savars rates, it being admitted that no money assessment has been fixed under clause 2 of that section

> ' I hat there is no contract as to the rates of rent payable for wet cultivation is clear from the admitted muchilikas, the miterial clauses of which have already been referred to. The only rates fixed were for dry enitivation. The sales to be changed for wet cultivation were left undetermined. This happy so, the contention for the plaintiff scems to be well founded "

> they accordingly set aside the miders of the District Judge, and holding that "the natus tendered by the plantiff were proper patters and that the defendants must accept them." they decreed the second appeals with costs in all the courts

> On an application for review of judgment, the learned Judges appear, however, to have thought that 'the contract between the parties is contained in the admitted muchilikas and must be gathered from the construction of those muchilikas" They therefore rejected this application for review

> The root defendants have appealed to His Majesty in Council and two points have been niged on thou behalf ugunst the validity of the judgment of the High Court

> It is contended in the first place that no appeal lay to the High Court under section 69 of the Act which provides for one appeal only from the order of the Collector to the Zillah Judge This contention however, ignores the provision of section 372 of Act VIII of 1859, which, it the time the Madrage ant Recovery Act of 1865 was enacted, was the law rogulars g the procedure of the Civil Courts in India noted the Presidency towns

Under that section a special appeal lay to the Sadder Court RAVI VPERAfrom all decisions passed in regular appeal by the Courts subordinate to the Sudder Court It is not disputed that the Zallah Judge's Court was subordinate to the Sadder Court, nor that the appeal to the Zillah Judge from the Collector's Court was a "regular appeal"-an appeal on law and facts. Later legislation substituted the High Court for the Sadder Court, and the District Judge for the Zillah Judge, but the subordination of the one to the other was maintained. The provisions of Act XIV of 1852, the law in force at the timo when these suits were instituted, are clear on the point that an appeal hes from the order of the District Judge to the High Court, unless that right is taken away by express legislation or by some express provision of law.

The point that a second appeal has to the High Court in eases arising under Act VIII of 1865, has been expressly decided in Verrasuamy v Manager, Pittapur Estate(1), and the practice annears to have been ever since the passing of the Act for such appeals to be preferred to the High Court ! heir Lordships would not be disposed to interfere with such a long-standing practice, even if they thought there was an implied rule against second appeals lying from the decisions of the District Judge with respect to adjudications under the Act by the Collector. Their Lordships must, therefore, overtale the first objection

In the second place, it is contended for the appellants that the High Court was not compotent under section 581 of the Civil Procedure Codo (Act XIV of 1882) to set aside a finding of fact which had been concurrently arrived at by the two inferior Courts

Sections 584 and 585 of the Civil Procedure Code are in these tams -

" 584 Unless when otherwise provided by this Code or by any other law, from all decrees passed in appeal by any Court subordinate to a High Court, an appeal shall he to the High Court on any of the following grounds, namely -

'(a) The decision being contrary to some specified law or usage having the force of law,

Convert

- (b) The decision having failed to determine some material issue of law or usage having the force of law,
- "(c) A anistantial error or defect in the procedure as prescribed by this Code or any other law, which may possibly have produced error or defect in the decision of the cise upon the merits.
- ' 585 No second appeal shall lie except on the grounds men tioned in section 584"

This distinctly prohibits second appeals on questions of fact and confines the competency of the High Court to deal with questions of law and procedure

In the present case the sole question for determination was whether the arrangement entered into in 1283, and confirmed in 1292, was permanent. The plaintiff's allegation was that he was omittled under the circumstances to itvort to the system that existed prior to 1283. The Collector and the first Appellate Court who alone were competent to deal with the facts, caine the conclusion that the arrangement was permanent. The muchink-as were only a part of the evidence on which they acted It seems to their Lordships that the learned Judges, ioting in inadvertence of section 584 of the Code, assumed a jurisdiction which they did not possess. The rule relative to second appeals which was laid down by this Board in Durga Choudhrant v Jescher Singh Chaudhri(1) is clearly applicable to the present

On the whole then Lordships are of opinion that the judgments and decrees of the High Court cannot stand for Erle Richards has, however, submitted that the simple dismissal of the suits would seriously projudice the rights of the zamindai with regard to the matters referred to in paragraph 3 of the plaint which were not dealt with by the Collector

Their Lordships are of opinion that the best course under the circumstances would be to set aside the judgment and decrees of the High Court with a declaration that the plaintiff is not entitled to enforce the acceptance by the tenuits of the pattas tendered by him, and that the cases should be sent back to be remitted to the Collector's Court for the drawing up of proper decrees and decluing with any other questions that may be

SECOND AFFEAL against the decree of J G Burn, the acting District Judge of Panjore in Appeal No 624 of 1909 presented igning the decree of N Kallasan, the acting District Munsif of Lanjore in Original Suit No 142 of 1908

The suit from which this Second Appeal arose, was brought by the plaintiff for redemption of a usuffuctuary mortgage, dated the 28th May 1875, and executed in favour of the plaintiff's predecessors in title, by the predecessors in title of the defendants who denied the mortgage and claimed the property as their uncestral property. The plaintiff rolled on a counterpart of the mortgage deed alleged to have been executed on 28th May 1875, by the predecessors in title of the defendants simultaneously with the mortgage.

The said counterpart was filed and marked as Exhibit A, the District Munsif who tried the suit, presuming it to be genuino under section 90 of the Evidence Act. The suit was filed on 4th April 1908, the preliminary decree for redeinption was passed on 1st May 1909, the final decree on 18th June 1909, and the appeal from the preliminary decree was filed afterwards. The District Judge on appeal beld on a consideration of the evidence in the case, that it would be unsafe to act on Exhibit A as cyidence of the mortging, and dismissed the suit

JUDGMENT—Two points are argued in this Second Appeal The first point is that, as the District Munsif presumed the genumeness of Exhibit A, the Appellate Court had no power in law to hold that it should not be presumed to be gonume and to reject it Reliance is placed in support of this argument on section 4 of the Dvidence Act, which I lys down that, when the Court may presume a fact, it may other do so or call for proof it The contention apparently is that the Appellate Court was bound either to hold Exhibit A to be genuine until it was disproved, or at least, to call for proof. This argument entirely ignores the prestice provaling in the Courts of this Presidency in the trial of suits. When prima face ovidence of custody and of the date of a document purporting to be 30 years old is

AYYAR AND SPENCER JJ given, the Court generally marks the document on the footing that there is sufficient evidence to justify its being marked as an Exhibit at that stage It is only subsequently that the opponent exercises his right of addresing evidence of circum stances which entitle him to say that the presumption under STENCER, IJ section 90 of the Evidence Act should not be drawn with respect to the document And the Court generally arrives at it, conclusion on the matter after the evidence on hoth sides has been given It is not shown that in this case the District Munsif ever recorded a judicial opinion as to whether he would presume I xhihit A to be genuine before he wrote his judgment Nor is it urged that the plaintiff asked for a ruling as to a bether the Munsif was prepared to presume the document to be genuine, or whother he would require it to be proved. It is therefore not correct to say that the plaintiff was prejudiced by any ruling on the part of the District Munsif, or prevented from adducing all the evidence that he could to prove the document or to ask the Court to presume its genuinoness There is no foundation for the argument that in such a reum stances the Appellate Court has not got the same power to decide whether the document should be presumed to be genuine or not as the court of first instance his The plaintiff could not require in apportunity of iddicing further evidence unless he was presented by anything lone ly the Court from adducing all the evidence he coult Shafiq u musa v Stabar 1/1 Klan'l) and Strength Pat a . Kulodi Prosal Bun oge (2), cited for the appellant, do not give him my real support. of opinion that there is no substance in this contention The second point urged is that is the final decree for redemption was passed by the District Munsif before the appeal against the prelumnary decree was presented in the District Court, the apped was not competent and that the I boulent was entitled to appeal only against the final decree or, it any rate the appeal around the preliminary deere was not sustamable without an RAMUVIEN appeal against the final decree also. This question has been fully considered by this Court in Lakshimi v Mani Devi(1), where it was held that the right of a party to appeal against a preliminary decree is not affected by the subsequent passing of a final decree. A later decision of the Calcutta High Court has now been brought to our notice. Janaki Nath Ray Chowdhury v Promotha Nath Ray Chowdhury(2). But this case does not carry the question further than the previous decisions already considered in the Madras case did. And we see no reason to depart from the view adopted in Lakshimi v Mani Devi(1). This contention must also be overrised.

Sanasiya Axyas, J -The defendants Nos 8 and 11 to 14 (5 of the legal representatives of the third defendant who died pending the suit) are the appellants in the above Second Appeal aut was brought hy plaintiff, one of the five members of a tomple committee for contribution from the other four committee members in respect of money which had been rocovered from plaintiff alone in execution of the decree obtained by the trustee of the Madura Minakshi temple against the members of the committee (inclusive of plaintiff and third defendant) for moneys which they had spent out of the temple funds in provious litigation carried on by them in the High Court the High Court, having in that previous litigation, directed that the committee members should pay such costs out of their private funds, and not out of the devastanam fund See the last sentence of the judgment in Alagirisami Naichar v Sundaresuara Ayyar(1)

The lower Courts decoded that the third defendant's legal representatives (sons and grandsons) are hable to discharge third defendant's light to plaintiff, the debt being based on third defendant's lightly to contribute his quota of the amount paid by plaintiff alone to discharge the joint decree against plaintiff and his fellow committee members in the temple manager's suit. The only ground irgued before us in this Second Appeals is to fourth ground in the special appeal memorandum. That ground is to the effect that third defendant's sons and grandsons are not legally bound to discharge the debt incurred by third defendant to the deviationam whose funds were spent without due authority by third defendant and the other members of the committee, as third defendant's descendants are not under a pious obligation to discharge such a debt

Rehanco is strongly placed by the learned valid for the appellants on Durbar Khachar v Khachar Harsur(1) where it was held that under the Hindu law texts, a son is not hable for his father's "Ayyavaharika" debts, the term heing interpreted by the learned Judges who decided that case, as meaning "unusual" or not sanctioned by law or custom" The learned Judges ruled in effect that the con is not hable for debts which the father ought not, " as a decent and respectable man," to have incurred That yory learned Judge, MULHERIEE, J., of the Calcutta High Court bas elaborately considered the whole question in Chalcurs Mahton v Ganga Pershad(2) and I cannot usefully add anything to the observations found in the lucid judgment in that case The learned Judge virtually dissents from the decision in Durbar Khaclar v. Khachar Harsuril) Learned Sanskrit scholars have differed from one another as to the meaning of the expression "Avyavaharika debt", [see the first paragraph in page 231, of the judgment in Chakours Mahten v. Ganca Pershud(2)] 1 am inclined to adopt Colebroole's paraphrase, namely, "deht meurred for a cause repugnant to good morals" as more nearly approaching the true import of the expression than any of the meanings given by the other authorities. If I might venture upon giving my own translation of the expression "Aryavaharika" I would paraphrase an Avvavalamba debt as a deht which is not supportable as valid by iceal arguments and on which no right could be established in the creditor's favour in a Court of Justice (Compare the use of the word "Vyayubara" in such expressions as Vyayahara Muyukha, Vyavahara Darpana, etc.)

The third defendant clearly owed a legally valid debt to the devastanam even if he had really misappropriated the moneys which he had taken from the devastanam funds (instead of having merely sanctioned their expenditure tona fide on mappropriate objects) and his descendants are bound to repay that debt according to the decision in Natasayyan v. Ponnus mi, 3), where it is observed "upon any intelligible principle of morality, VENECUPALA a debt due by the father by reason of his having retained for himself money which he was bound to pay to another would he a debt of the most sacred obligation and for the non discharge of which, punishment in a future state might be expected to be inflicted, if in any

As regards the case in Ramaiengar v Secretary of State(1) (also relied on strongly by the appellant's learned vakil, that decision re ted "on its own special circumstances", for, the learned Judges found in that case that the father knowingly brought a false case as a pauper When he lost the suit and was made hable for the Government costs, it was held that his sons were not hable to Government for such costs so incurred Without saving that I agree with the reasons given in the said decision, that decision is easily distinguishable from the present case. The judgment in Alagirishmi Naickar v Sundnreswara Ayyar(2) does not establish that the committee members (three of whom somed in the appeal to the High Court with the concurrence of the remaining two) dishonestly preferred the appeal to the High Court which appeal costs they were directed to hear out of their private funds. Imprudent and even "unconscientionaly" imprudent debts of the father are not in my opinion, immoral, illegal or "Avyavaharika" dehts [see Khalilul Rahmun v Gobind Pershud(3) and the sons cannot, in Hindu Law, escape hability for such debts of their father

this Second Appeal consequently fails and is dismissed with the costs of first respondent (plaintiff)

BENSON, J-1 agree that the sons are hable and that the BENSON, J Second Appeal should be dismissed with costs

It DEMENT -The second defendant one of the three judgment Arrive and debtors is the appellant | cfore this Court This appeal has arisen Arras JJ out of an execution jetition put in by the decree helder. The facts are a little complicated and though it is not necessary to retail all the facts it is neces any to set cot the following for understanding the contentions on both sides -

The decree in this case was passed so long ago as March 1898 in favour of one Arunachallam Chettiyar There were several execution petitions by the said decree holder himself. The decree is then alleged to have fallen in a partition between two members of the decree holder a family and a partner of the family firm, to the share of the said partner vbo also held a power of attorney from the decree holder. This partner filed execution petitions in 1905 and 1907 I inally on the 21st April 1909, Execution Petition No 389 of 1909 was filed by a next friend on behalf of the minor son of the said partner after the death of the latter

We must here state that the ducree was passed by the District Munsif's Court of Srivilhputtar and all these applications including the Lxecution Petition No 38 of 1909 of 21st At r 1 1909 were instituted in that Court On this application No 389 of 1909 notice vas ordered to he issued to defendant, to show carse why the decree should not be executed by ada of properties which had been attached long ago and which attachment was still subsisting for the purpose of this uppeal, it is necessary only to consider the notice issued to the second lefendant, that notice having been usued in July 1309 by the Srivilly uttor Mansif's Court for second defendant's appearance on 10th August 1909 to show cause a sinst execution

STRRIAN NAICKER ATTEND AND SADASIYA

AYTAR, JJ

The process server took the notice to the second defendant's village on 31st July 1909 for service on the second defendant RAMANAPHAN What took place there appears from the endorsement of the Village Munsif on the process server's return and that endorse ment is as follows - 'On enquiry made on 31st July 1909 at 9 A M , regarding the second defendant, the females in the second defendant's house and the mmates of the adjoining house state that it is two days since he went to Sankaranavinarkoil, that the date of his return is not known and that no proper male heir is present on the apot, the duplicate of the notice to the said second defendant is affixed to the front door of his house" With a return to this effect, the process server returned the notice to the Court on the 6th August 1909, on the 10th August 1903 (which was the date fixed in the notice for the second defendant to appear to show causo), the District Munsif made a record to this effect "Notice affixed, defendant absent, adjourned to 14th instant for hatta for proclamation " (The learned District Judge seems to have thought that the 10th August 1909 was a mistake for the 10th Donomber 1909 but it saems that there is no such mistake and the order was really passed on 10th August 1909 by the Munsif On 18th October 1909, the proclamation was settled and the sale date was fixed for 10th December 1909 The sale fixed for 10th December 1909 scems to have been again adjourned to some other date in 1910 on account of certain other proceedings which it is unnecessary to detail

In May 1910, the Rampad district was newly constituted by the Local Government and the Srivillipattur District Munsif's Court was placed under the Ramnad District Judge properties which had been attached by the Srivilliputtur District Munsif in execution of the decree of 1897 came under the jurisdiction of the Additional District Munsif of Tinnevelly, having been taken away from the Sravilleputtur District Munsif's juris diction. On these facts, the next friend of the minor who claims to be the decree-holder (we shall call him " Respondent ") and who had put in the Execution Petition No 389 of 1909 in April 1909 in the Smeilliputtur District Mansif's Court put in Miscellineous Petition No. 338 of 1911 in the Additional Mansif's Court of Tinnevelly praying among other things that the execution proceedings instituted in the Smallipattur Munsif's Court in April 1909 might be continued in the

"Moreover this plaintiff made on application to the said Srivillipattar Munsif's Court, but the said epplication has been returned with an endorsement stating that the entire records aforesaid hais been sent to this Court, with reference to matters stated in paragraph 6 above. The applicetion so returned is herowith filed." The Additional District Munsif dismissed this application. The conclusions he came to are (as we understand them) -

- (a) the decree of the Srivillipattar District Munsif's Court was not transferred to the Additional District Munsif's Court for execution though a portion of the records were sent to the linnevelly Additional District Munsif's Court on the trausfer of the territorial jurisdiction by the District Muusif of Srivilliputtar hauself
- (b) The District Munsif's Court of Smvilliputtur has not ceased to exist nor has it ceased to hove jurisdiction to execute its own decree on the transfer of territory from its jurisdiction as such transfer did not take awey the jurisdiction to entertain applications for execution and to pass orders thereon which it had under section 223 of the Civil Procedure Code
- (c) The Additional District Munsif's Court of Tinnevelly did not acquire the jurisdiction to execute the decree under section 649 of the old Civil Procedure Code, or section 1.0 of Act V

SUBEIAH NAICKER V BAJANATHAN CHETTIAB AYLING AYD SADASIVA

of 1908 because the Additional District Munsif's Court of Time velly could acquire the jurisdiction, only if the Court of the District Munsif of Sirvilliputur consed to exist or to have jurisdiction to execute the decree

- (d) The ex parts order possed by the Sriviliputtur District Munsif's Court on the 10th Angust 1909 allowing execution to proceed against the second defendant because he did not appear though held to have been duly served could not be treated as estopping the second defendent so as to preclude him from objecting to the minor respondent executing the decree (the objection being based on the ground that execution is birred by limitation and that his right to execute had not been satisfacturily proved). The reason for second defendant's not being so estopped is that the notice issued under section 248, Civil Procedure Code, in July 1909, was not personally served upon him and he was not otherwise aware of such notice. See Mochai Mandal v Meseruddin Mollah (1).
- (c) The said applications of 1905 and 1907 are however in accordance with law and hence the execution petition of April 1909 was not barred by limitation

These were the conclusions of the Additional District Munsif of Tinnevelly and he rejected the decree holder's pointen to continue proceedings in his Court on the ground that his Court had no jorisdatation to so continue the proceedings. The minor respondent then appealed to the District Judge squaist this order of the Additional District Munsif of Tinnevelly refinsing to continue the execution proceedings inaugurated in April 1909. The learned District Judge's conclusions may be stated thus.

(a) Section 150, Civil Proceduro Code, provides that, when the business of any Coust is transforred to any other Court, the latter shall have the same powers and duties as the former had in respect of it. But (according to the learned District Judge) the Execution Potition of 1909 was a pending business in the Srivilliputtur Yunsit's Court when it lost its jurisdiction over the territory (in which the attached i properties were situated) on 1st Jane 1910 and such produing business was not legally transforred to the Additional District Yunsif of Linnovilly. So the minor petitioner could not take advantage of section 150, Civil Procedure Code. and contend that the Additional District Munsif of Tinnevelly was a Court to which the business of the Srivilliputtur Munsif's Ramanathan Court was transferred

SUBBLAIL NATCEER ATLING AND SADABIVA

- (b) But the Smulliputtur Munsif's Court, though it continued to exist and to be held in the same station and continued to have jurisdiction over a portion of its furmer territorial jurisdiction must be deemed to have "ceased tu exist" within the menning of section 37, clause (b), of the Civil Procedure Code: because the territories within its jurisdiction had been transferred to the newly created Rampad district by the Local Government and appeals from its decrees and orders lay thereafter to the Rammad District Court and not to the District Court of Tinnevelly. Hence the Court which passed the decree had now become the Additional District Munsif's Court of Tinnevelly In other words, the learned District Judge's view was that as the Srivilliputtur Munsif's Court ceased to exist, the Court which originally passed the decree ceased to exist and the additional District Munsif's Court of Tinnevelly became the Court which passed the decree within the meaning of section 37, clause (b) and hence it ought to continuo the execution proceedings
- (c) The second defendant could not raise the question of limitation by reason of the alleged legal invalidity of the execution petitions of 1905 and 1907 is the order of the Srivilliputtur Munsif's Court of the 10th August 1909 allowing execution after declaring the service on second defendant to have been duly offected cannot be questioned by the second defendant now as he has not had that ex parte order (allowing execution) set aside by proceedings in appeal or by any other logal means open to him On the basis of the conclusions (b) and (c) abuve, the learned District Judge set aside the Additional District Mausil's order and remanded the petition for disposal of Execution Petition No 389 of 1909 by that Court from the point it had reached on 23rd Februnry 1910 It is against this appellate (District Judge's) order of remand that the present Civil Miscellaneous Appeal No 61 of 1913 has been filed before us. The arguments of the learned vikil for the appellant before us might be shortly stated thus -(a) The learned District Judgu was right in saying that
- section 150, Civil Procedure Code, refers to the transfer of business owing to an order of transfer by a superior Court as

SCHRIAH NAICKER RAMANATHAN CHETTIAR

SADA IVA ATYAR JJ

under section 24 or any such similar order and that mere altera tion of jurisdiction through the Local Government's notifications does not transfer any business within the meaning of section 150. but the learned District Judge was in error in holding that the AYLING AND Srivilliputtur District Munsif's Court crased to exist within the meaning of section 37, clause (b) merely by reason of the fact that the territory over which the said Court had to exercise jurisdiction was included in a new district, the portion in dispute in these execution proceedings and which also formed the basis of the venue of the suit having been transferred to the Tinnevelly Additional Munsif's Court's unisdiction

- (b) The Srivilliputtur District Munsif's Court not having ceased to exist, it also did not corse to have power to exercise purisdiction within the meaning of section 37, clause (b) accause as the Court which passed the decree, it continued to have jurisdiction under section 38, Civil Procedure Code (old section 223) even though the property attached in execution of the decres had been transferred to the jurisdiction of the Additional District Munsif of linnevelly
- (c) As the Srivillipattui District Munsif's Court continued to have jurisdiction to execute the decree, the Additional District Munsif's Court did not obtain jurisdiction either to execute the decree or to continue the execution began in the Smyillipattar unsif's Court, only one of the two Courts being capable of executing the deerco

We shall consider briefly each of those three contentions Before the new Code was passed, there was a conflict between the decisions of the Calcutta High Court and the decisions of the Madras High Court in respect of the question whether a Court which passed the decree which directed the sale of immoveable property had jurisdiction to order the sale of that property if after the decree and before the application for sale, the said property had been transferred by the Local Government's notification from its jurisdiction to the jurisdiction of mother Court The principal decisions of the Calcutta High Court on this question are Latchman Pundeh v Maddan Mohun Shye (1), Kartic Nath Panday v Tiluldhare Lall(2), Prem Chan 1 Dey v

Molloda Debi(1), Kali Palo Mukergee v Dino Nath Mukergee(2), Jalar v Kamını Debii3) and Udit Nasasıı Chaudhuri v Mathuru Proped(4) We do not think it necessary to deal in detail with RANKMATHAN every one of these cases Kartu Nath Panday v Filuldiars Lallia) was virtually overruled by the Pull Bench decision in Press Cland Dey v Volkoda Debs(1) The result of all these cases is that though under Order AXI, rule 10 (old section 230), the application for execution by sale of properties which had passed out of the territorial jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree might be made to the Court which passed the decree. it may also be made to the Court which had acquired jurisdiction over the said properties as it is also included in the definition of the Court which passed the decree by the strength of section 37, clause (b) as the Court which passed the decree had ceased to have jurisdiction to sell the properties decreed to be sold according to the result of these decisions of the Calcutta High

(d) Though both Courts could entertain the application, the Court which passed the decree had ceased to have jurisdiction to order the sale of properties and hence could not itself order a sale and if the execution application is made to it, it must transfer it to the Court which had now obtained jurisdiction over the properties for passing and executing the order for sale

Court both the Courts which passed the decree and the Court which had since obtained jurisdiction over the property could entertain an application for execution of the decree

Thus the Calcutta High Court dec sions make a distinction between the jurisdiction to entertain the execution application and the unisdiction to order side of properties in execution and while it gives prisdiction to both the Courts which originally passed the decree and the Court which has since obtained unrisdiction over the territory to entertain applications, the said decisions give jurisdiction only to the latter Court to order the sale of the properties

As regards the Madras High Court, the principal cases are Gomatham Alametu v Kortandur Krishnamacharlu(v), Panduranga Mudaliar v Vythiling i Reddi(?), Subbaraja Mudaliai v Rakki(8)

and Alagappa Mudaliyar : Theyagaraja Mudaliyar(1) In Gomatham Alamelu v Romandur Krishnamacharlu(2) it was merely held that if a Court which had not got jurisdiction had passed a decree for sale of the properties outside its jurisdiction without objection by the defendant, such a decree is not a nullity and the judgment-debtor could not object to the validity of such a decree in execution proceedings In Panduranga Mudahar v Vythilinga Reddi(3), it was held that the Court which passed the decree for sale had purisdiction to entertain an execution application for sale of that property even though the property had been trans ferred to the jurisdiction of some other Court Apart from the question of its jurisdiction to entertain the application, whether it could itself order the sale of that property was not and need not have been considered in that case, because the decice holder in his application for execution, also prayed for the transfer of the decree to the Court which had since obtained jurisdiction over the properties directed to be sold. The decision in Panduranga Mudahar v Vythrlinga Reddi(3) seeme therefore, to be not in conflict with the Calcutta decisions which only negative the right of the Court which passed the decree to order the sale of the properties which had passed out of its jurisdiction, but do not negative the right of that Court to entertain the application for execution Subbaray: Mudaliar v Makl 1(4) depended upon the meaning of section 189 of the Madras Estates Land Act though there is a general observation that even when a statute takes away the jurisdiction of a class of Courts to here suits of a cortine nature and transfers the jorns. diction to hear such saits to another class of Courts, the hist class of Courts does not lose the purisdiction over the suits pending at the time of the rassia, of the act which so transfers the jurisdiction In Alagappa Mudaliyar v Il iyagaraja Mudalivar(1) doubt was thrown upon this decision in Panduranga Mudalian , Vathilinga Reddi(3) and the learned Judges (WALLIS and Knishnaswam Ayrar, JJ) say that the question whother the transfer of a local area from the jurisdiction of one Court to another Court would not divest the original Court of jurisdiction over even pending suits was a question of " consider able difficulty" The learned judges therefore without deciding that question disposed of the case on the issumption that the BANANITHAN notification of the Local Government deprived the Subordinate Judge's Court of Tuticorm from trying the pending suit and they not over the difficulty by transferring the case to his file from that of the new Court (Rumnad Court) to whose file it had been transferred (ex hypotlese) by the notification. We are inclined to think that the Calcutta decisions in making a distinction between the inrisdiction to entertain applications and the juri diction to pass orders on such applications are not strictly logical, and that the Court which passed the decree for sale of a property cannot even entertain an application in execution for sale of such properties. However the really important question is now settled in Calcutta, nimely, that the new Court which has since obtained territorial jurisdiction over the property ordered to be sold or sought to be attached and sold in execution has jurisdiction both to entertain an application in execution for such sale as also to pass orders on such applications In volume 11, Lncyclopædia of I aw and Procedure, pages 718 and 714, the following passages occur "A proper and lawful exercise of delegated legislative authority, or the direct exercise of constitutional power, will operate to abolish a court or not, according to the intent expressed or lawfully to be implied within the principles l'eretofore stated. This intent governs in determining the effect of the adoption of a new constitution, of the creation, alteration, and r organization of new districts, executs or other judicial sub divisions, of the detacling, attachen i, annexation and consoli lation of districts and il trans fer of surreduction in general ' "And it I as been beld that in the absence of a constitutional or statutory provision to the contrary, causes pending in the abolished Courts" (the same principle must apply by analogy where a portion of the jurisdiction is tran ferred) "are transferred by op ration of law to the new courts, to cert ficale or order tra forring there being a cessary new Court will obtain and may proceed to exerci a juri diction over causes lawfully transferred . This rule includes authority to hold the remainder of a term which was in se ion when the statute took effect, the right to amend records relating to the judicial action of the supersided court" In volume 40

Encyclopædia, pago 129, it is said "Where, pending an action a new county or district is created or existing lines are altered, so that the subject-matter of the action or the residence of defendant is thrown into a different country or district from what it was when the action was instituted, there is some conflict of authority as to whether the venue should be changed accord ingly, or whether the action should proceed where it was instituted without a change of venue The question depends largely upon the provisions of the statutes" In the American Digest, volume 13, at page 1943, a decision is referred to in which it was held that a statute giving exclusive jurisdiction to justices, in certain cases and containing no clause saving pending suits, deprived the Circuit Courts (which till then had jurisdiction over such cases) to try even pending suits. Another case is quoted in which a decree rendered by a probate Court in a suit after the Court was deprived of its jurisdiction by an Act (which came into force while the suit was pending) was reversed in appeal as passed without jurisdiction Remington v Smith(1) It seems to us on principle that unless the authority which changes the venue reserves the right to the Court which has lost the jurisdiction to continue pending proceedings (affecting the property so transferred to another jurisdiction), such proceedings are also apso facto transferred by the change of venue to the new Court, the records relating to that action becoming part of the records of the new Court the present case, it appears that since the change of venue was made from the Srivilliputhur Munsif to the Additional District Munsif of linnevelly, the Savilliputhur District Munsif sent all the records remaining in his Court in Execution Pet tion No 389 of 1909 to the Additional District Munsif's Court of Tinnevelly, thus washing his hands completely of that affair

We think he was right in doing so As stated in Prem Chand Dey v. Mokhoda Debs(2), "so far as the Procedure Code is comerned, execution of a decree is only a continuation of the suit, and there appears no legitimate reason utly a Court in the later stage of a cutt should have greater powers than it possessed at its institution But however that may be, a comparison of section 223 with a decree" We might add that the new section 150 introduced by the new Code seems to clearly imply that the whole business Ramanathan of a Court might be transferred to another Court without any order of transfer bein, passed by a superior Court under section 24 or any other section of the Code, either as regards a parti cular case or as regards all the cases pending in a particular Court The introduction of this new section indicates, in our opinion that the Calcutta view which held that by the change of venue made by a local Government, the business of a Court which loses jurisdiction over a cert in area so far as it relates to cases affecting the lands in the transferred area will be 27 80 facto transferred to the new Court has been adopted by the Legislature We are unable to agree with the learned District Judge that the word 'transfer' of business under section 150 covers only transfers made under special provisions of the Civil Procedure Code and we have found it difficult to follow the reasoning of the learned District Judge who relies on sections 8 (1), 13 (2) and (3) and 1" (1) of the Bengal Civil Courts Act Those provisions appear to us to have little hearing on the decision of this question In the result we hold that the learned District Judge was right in his conclusion that the Additional District Munsif's Court of Tinnevelly has jurisdiction to continue the proceedings in execution initiated in the Sriviflipathur Munsif's Court in 1909 Our icason for that emclusion is that the Srivilliputhur

Munsit's Court ceased to have jurisdiction to continue the proceedings in execution whereas the reason given by the learned District Judge is that the Smallipother Munsif's Court ceased to exist Even if we are wrong in the above view, we are prepared to get over the difficulty sought to he raised on the question of jurisdiction by transferring the Execution Petition No 389 of 1909 from the Srivilhputhur Munsif's Court for disposal to the file of the Additional District Munsif of Lunevelly, a similar expedient having been resorted to by the learned judges who Subbian Naicher V Ramanathan Chettiab Ay Ling and Badasina Atyar, IJ

so on will apply to execution proceedings. There is no allusion in the learned judge's decision to Krishna Chandra Pal v Protap Chandra Pal(1) which directly held that section 108 (Order IX, rule 13), applied to execution proceedings The argument of the appellant's learned vakil based on the fact that in article 164 of the Limitation Act, the general expression "Summons" is used instead of 'Summons or notice," does not convince us that article 164 was intended to apply only to decrees strictly so called and not to orders in execution which come under the definition of decrees in the Civil Procedure Code Besides the remedy under section 108, the defendant could also have sought the romedy by way of appeal against the ex-parts order are therefore reasonably clear that the ex parte order of August 1909 allowing execution in favour of the respondent cannot be questioned in the further stages of the execution proceedings by the appellant The learned District indge was therefore right in refusing to go into the question whether the respondent was harred by limitation or any other cause from prosecuting the Execution Petition No. 389 of 1909.

It is next contended that the instamped objection statement, dated 27th July 1911, put in by the second defendant might be treated as an application (under Order IX, rule 13) to set aside the ex-parts order passed in August 1909 in the respondent's favour and that an opportunity should be given to the appellant to prove as such applicant that he was not duly served with notice of the execution petition before that order of August 1909 was passed and that he had no knowledge of the passing of that order till within one month of his filing this statement in July 1911 No doubt, in Wochas Mandal v Meseruddin Mollah(2), an objection by the judgment deliter that no notice had been really served upon him and that he had no knowledge of an order passed against him (allowing execution of the decree) was treated as of the same effect as an application to set aside the ex-parte order allowing execution and on its being not denied by the decree-holder that the judgment debtor had not been duly served and did not have knowledge of the previous order allowing execution till 8 days before the judgment-debtor preferred

ORDER -- The District Mansif of Madmanille passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff in Original Suit No 299 of 1910 on the 30th of March 1911 The contract which gave rise to the highlion was made in Kadiri which was at the time of the suit within the jurisdiction of the Madanapulle District Munsif scheme for the redistribution of districts came into force on the 1st of April 1911, by which Radiri was added to the jurisdiction of the District Munsif of Pennkonds From Madauspalle appeals he to the District Judge of Cuddapah from Penukenda to the District Judge of Bellary The defendant filed the appeal in toe District Court of Belling on the 26th of June 1911 against the decision in Original Suit No 299 of 1910 The District Judge held that the appeal lay to the Cuddapah District Court, and returned it for presentation accordingly The District Judge of Cuddypah on the appeal being presented to him came to the conclusion that he had no jurisdiction. This revision natition is against the said order

There is no Madras decision directly bearing on the matter Section 13 of the Madras Civil Court Act gives no indication regarding the appellate forum, section 96 of the Code of Civil Procedure says that an appeal "shall he to the Court inthorised to hear appeals". The question is whether that Appellate Court is one which had prediction when the sunt was decided or at the time when the appeal cross to be presented. The law in America is in consensuce with this principle. I must hold on the authorities referred to by me that the appeal lay to the District Court of Bellary I am aware that the convenience of the litigants will not be alsanced by this conclusion. In case the Appellate Court should cuther remand the case for fresh disposal or ask for a finding upon new issues it is desirable that the case should go back to the Munsif who heard it originally lifthe appeal is heard by the Bellary District Judge in this case, he will have no power to send the case down to the District Munsif of Madanapalle But in matters of procedure uniformity is of the essence of the administration of listice and as it has been held already that in regard to applications for execution the Court which decided the suit ceases to have jurisdiction by the transfer of territory, the decision in this case should be that the anneal hes to the District Judge of Bellary as Kadiri is part of the Bellary district

The appeal will be sent to that Court to be disposed of according to law

After executing the sale deed in your favour I shall cause the payment with respect to sale money of five hundred rupees to be codorsed on the original mortgage bord and I shall execute again a document to your favour for the baltoce

This is the agreement for the execution of a sale deed in respect of perony lands executed with consent.

(Mark of) Pamu Muneyyn

The District Munsif decreed the sut, but on appeal by the defendant the Subordin ite Judge held that I zhibit A wis in effect not merely an agreement to a ll, but , sale deed itself, and dismissed the suit finding that Exhibit A was compulsorily registrable and that owing to its home unregistered, it was invalid as affection the property comprised therein, and anadmissible in evidence under section 17 of the Registration Act

JEDGMENT -- The decision of the point argued in Second Appeal is not free from difficulty. That point is whother Exhibit A in this case is madmissible in evilence on the ground that it was not registered. The suit is for specific performance The doc ment purports to be an agreement for sale and it says, "I shall execute a sale deed on proper stamp paper" The difficulty arises from other clauses in the instrument which, it is contended, show that Exhibit A itself was intended to pass the property. After ofting out the receipt of the consideration for the sale (viz), the discharge of part of the debt due to the intended vendes on a mortgage at says, "I have sold to you and put you now alone in the possession of the jeroity land." Before the clause agreeing to execute the conveyance we have this chase, "Therefore I have executed this agreement in your favour having agreed to cont enjoying the same freely, hereditarily from son to grandson with power to alienate the same by sale or gift" This clause is immediately followed by the covenant to execute a sale doo! Having given our best consideration to the construction of this document, we have come to the conclusion that the latter clause was put in only to indicate the terms of the conveyance to be thereafter executed. The vendor agreed to execute a converance having already agreed under Exhibit A that by that conveyance the vendes should enjoy the property hereditarily. The first clause "I have sold to you," in our opinion, really me ans " I have entered into a binding agreement to soll to you" Possession was given at once, but possession was to be held under the conveyance to be executed subsequently

As already stated, what the parties purported to enter into was an agreement to soil. In our opinion this document was not intended to be the record of any conveyance in present by the vender to the vendee, but morely embodies the terms of the conveyance to be exceuted subsequently.

In this view it is unnocessary to consider the cases that have been cited. The test is whether, according to the intention of the parties as expressed in the instrument, there is a present conveyance of the property, or only an agreement to create a future right.

There is authority for the position that even if a present right is criated, the instrument would be admissible as evidence in a suit for specific performance. See Nagappa v. Deiu(1) and Upendra Nath Baneryee v. Umen Choudro Bonerjer(2).

We hold, therefore, that this document should not have been rejected by the lower Appollate Corrf. We reverse the decree of the Subordinate Judge and romand the appeal for fresh disposal according to law.

Chats will abide the result.

Vanteddu Ammiraju(1), held that there was no trust created in favour of the wife and children, that the Married Women's Property Act did not apply to the parties who were Himans and that the premia having been paid out of aucestral funds, the policy amount was part of the estate of the deceased. Tie re on I appeal first come on for hearing before SANKARAN NAME and SALASINA LITAR JI who made the following orders of reference to the Lull Bench -

SANKALI IN NAIK I -The fir t defendant is the daughter, and BANKARAN defend ints N : 2 in 1 3 ar' the same, of one deceased Venkataration, who insured his life for Re 2,000 which the Insurance Office igro I to pay to his wife and children. The plaintiff get n decree and net Neukatarataam and be claims the insurance money towards the decree including the Rs 400 that fell to the first defendant

The first question for decision is whether the money insured is protected by the Married Women's Property Act (III of 1874) or whether t s a part of the estate of the deceased. The Judge, follows g the decision in Oriental Government Security Life for raice, Ltd., v. lanted tu .immiraju(1) as he was bound to d , beld that the Act did oot apply This is an appeal from that decision

It is argued before us that that judgment ought out to be followed and that the Act is an licable to cases like the one before us Section 6 of Act III of 1874 runs thus :-

"A policy of insurance effected by any married man on his own life, and expressed on the face of it to be for the benefit of his wife, or of his wife and children, or any of thom, shall cours and be deemed to be a trust for the benefit of his wife, or of his wife and children, or any of them, according to the interest so expressed, and shall not, as long as any object of the trust remains, be subject to the control of the bushand, or to his creditors, or form part of his estate" The Act applies to the whole of British India. New, the words of the section seem to be clear, and according to it, the pelicy of insurance effected by the deceased Venkataratnam should enure for the benefit of the first defendant and others. But it is argued that section 2 shows that this section 6 does not apply to Hindus The clause rehed upon rups thus -

"But nothing herein contained applies to any married woman who at the time of her marriage professed the Hindu,

BALANBA KRISHNAYTA SANKARAN NAIB, J

Muhammadan, Buddhist, Sikh or Jama religion, or whose husband, at the time of such marriage professed eny of those religions," Now, it is obvious that this clause applies only to a married woman who professed any of the religious referred to in the section, or who may be a follower of any other religion, say Christianity, but whose husband professed any one of those religions The proviso, therefore, does not apply to all Hindus and it applies to others than Hindus. It does not apply to males who profess those religions That this is so, appeare to be clear to me from the next clause which enables the Governor General in Council to exempt from the operation of the Act members of If, therefore, males who follow those religious have to be excluded, it must be by an order of the Governor-General in Council This appears to be superfluous if the exemption clause applied to them also. The last clause of that section only states that the section 4 of the Indian Succession Act shall not upply, and shall be deemed never to have applied, to any marriage one or both parties to which professed any of the above religious, and is confided solely to that provision of the Indiao Succession Act. It appears to mo, therefore, that section 6 does clearly apply, and I am coonsmed in this view by a consideration of the general scheme of Act III of 1874, which shows also why the clause in section 2 is contined to the mirried women referred to thereto In order to understand it, it is necessary to make a brief reference to Act X of 1865. That Act, with the exception of section 4, dealt with property which was taken by succession, either noder a will or under intestacy, and it was provided by section 331 that, with reference to such property. the Act should not extend to Hiodus, Muhammadans or Buddhists. But section 4 provided that " no person shall, by marriage, acquire any interest in the property of the person whom be or she marries, nor become incapable of doing any act is respect of his or her own property which he ar she could have done if unmarried.' This section applied olso to property taken otherwise than by succession, and as this provision was deemed to be a proper one with regard to property taken by way of succession, and as it affected the property relations of married people, it was deemed more convenient to afterm the broad principle than to have the property taken by succession alone regulated by that law This clause, therefore, went further than the rest and enacted the law which was peculiar to marriago and had nothing to do with succession while the rest of the law dealt with matters Krish Arta peculiar to succession and had nothing to do with marriage Part \ I which is leaded "On the effect of marriage" does not touch this question Now, there was an restriction as regards the communities affected by section 1, Hinous and Budalists were not excluded. This Act was passed in 1265, and in 1870 the Married Women's Property Act was passed in England (33 and 34 Vic. c. 93), and it was decimed advisable to ennet some provis one of that Act in India which was done by Act III of 1874. The legislature then proceeded on the view that, as the Handus, etc. had their own marriago law and their own succession law, it was undesirable to interfere with them, and that the new provisions to be enacted need be made applicable only to those whose law of succession was governed by the Indian Succession Act Accordingly, it was provided by the last clause in section 2 that section 4 of the Indian Succession Act shall not apply, and shall be deemed never to have up, hed, to any marriage one or hoth parties to which professed at the time of marriage any of those religions. The Sikh and Jain's religions were added as a doubt was entertained whether the Sikhs were Hindus and the Jains were Buddhists, as was thought at the time when the Indian Succession Act was passed Now, it will be noticed that all the sections except section 6 referred to laws which were peouliar to English marriage Section 4 of Act III of 1874, which was section 1 of the Loglish Act of 1870, was intended to get rid of the right of the husband acquired by marriagounder Euglish law to strip his wifa of hor wages and earnings Section 5 also, which is the first paragraph of section 10 of the English Married Women's Property Act, also had reference to the puculiar marriage law of England. Under that law, as it then stood, if a wife effected a policy of insurance on her own life or on her husband's life otherwisa than hy saparato property and died in her husband's life-time, the husband in the capacity of her administrator became the absolute owner of tha proparty. If a married woman had already separata property and if she chose to make any arrangement by means of that separate property in any suit that may he instituted by her in eaforce it, the husband must be a party, might raise any questions he liked and could up up a good deal of domestic life to decide the question whether sha had private property The section avoided any such question as to what is separate moperty and laid down a rule that, if the wife contracts with an Insurance Office and prevides the money by which the insurance is effected, the Insurance Office shall ask no questions as to whether the property in question was her separate property or not But the Insurance Office should be hable to the wife and to the wife alone Section 7 of the Act referred to legal proceedings by and against a married woman. It also was intended to place beyond doubt the difficulties which arose on account of the English marriage law So, too, sections 8 and 9 Now, all those sections with the exception of section 9 which were taken from the Married Women's Property Act of 1670 had reference to the disabilities of married nomen under the English law Section 9 was intended to get rid of the husband's hability oud was consequential on the removal of the wife s habilities and deprivation of his rights by marriage scotions had no reference whatever to the disobilities of married women under the Hindu law, and therefore, section 2 distinctly declared that these provisions shall not opply to any married woman who professed the Hudu or any other of the toligions referred to thereto

Now, section 6 stands on a different feeting. It had nothing te do with any marriago law, but dealt with the question of contruct or of trust Short's before this Act III of 1571 was passed, the legislature had passed the Indian Contract Act, by which it is enacted, following the Lughsh law, that the parties to contract alone shall be entitled, save in exceptional cases, to offerce the centract A third party to a contract to whom the Insurance Office may have promised the menoy due under a pelicy of life insurance, cannot therefore enforce it But it was deemed desirable for obvious reasons that there should be an exception in favour of wife and children, and that part of section 10 of the English Women's Projecty Act which refers to this matter was on icted as sect on 6 of Act III of 1871 It will be neticed that section 10 of the Lughsh Act was split into two separate acctions 5 and o in Act III of 1874 consistent with the intention to make section 6 generally opplicable and section a napplicable to Hudus The reason is clear the rule that debarred the wife from enforcing the prevision in the contract between the husband and the Insurance Other in her foveur is n . a ralo that depended upon any marriage law. Unlike the other sea s of the Act, it dealt with a question which had Krishvavia reference not only to the Christians but also to the Hindus and Muha mala s The section did not suterfere with the Hindu or Muha un ada i Marmage I ams and did not contravene the Leneral policy disclosed by the other provisions not to interfere with such laws.

BALANHA NATE J

I am not at all sure that the legislature in cuacting the Contract Act did not depart from the Handa Law, under which it is not at all clear that the wife and children were not entitled to claim the insurance money. I can therefore easily perceive the distinction between section 6 which relates to married men and the other sections of the Code which refer to the disabilities of married women under the Lughsh law and changes consequent ther on for these reasons I think thin legislature idvisedly exemited only married women from the provisions of the Act.

Lam also of opinion that the premiums paid by the deceased Venkataratnam were his own a if acquired property The Judge states that Venkataratuam "recoived a house from his brothers as his share of the family property and that in due course he sold it." that it is therefore for the defence to show that he did not u e this property and the sale proceeds and that otherwise the presumption is that all property in the hands of Venkat tratnam was family property. But it was applicatly not brought to the notice of the Judge that the insurance policy was taken out in 1888 and that the sale of the house was only in the year 1904 The presumption therefore raised by the Judge does not apply Prima facis what is pud as premium is a man's own property. I am accordingly of opinion that the plaintiff has not succeeded in proving that this is joint family property.

It has also been further urged before us that, even if the Act does not apply, the first defendant and the others named in the policy must be treated as beneficiarios for whose benefit the policy was taken out by the deceased Venkataratnam According to Luglish law, if n man purchase real property or an annuity, stock or other chattel interest or take a bond in the name of a stranger, the equitable ownership results to the person who advanced the purchase money But an exception has always been recognised to this doctrine, that is, that if the person from whom the consideration moved stands in loco parentis to the BALLANDA ERISHNAYFA SANKABAN NAIB J person in who's name the purchase is made then a gift or advancement is presumed. This is what is stated by Lord Routler in Garrick v Taylor(1) which was confirmed in appeal. 'If not chase be in ide by one in the name of another, the presumption is that the latter is a trusten for the person who pays the money, unless the parties struct in the relation of parent and child."

The same principle has been applied to policies of life insurnace in Pfleger v Browne(2) which was a case where an insurance office issued a policy an Pfleger's life the premiums of which were paid by Pfleger but the amount was payable to Browne. It was held that the onus of proof when the benefit of it was claimed by Frowne lay on the latter even though the policy stood in his name.

The exception is favour of the children was recognised in Re Richardson, Veston v Richardso (3) In that case the question was whether a policy of him insurance effected by a man on his own life but is his daughter a name was for his benefit or for that of his daughter. He retained the policy in his own possession and he paid all the premiums himself from time to time except the last which on account of his want of money his son paid Lay, J held that "the least right to call upon the office to poy the sum assured was clearly in the daughter, and not in the executor, the contract of the insurance company baving heen to pay her. That she was a daughter was sufficient to raise a presumption that there had been an indeancement to her." He further held that the were retention by the father of the policy in his own hands did not show that the beneficial interest was not intended to uses to her.

On the other hand the decision of In re a Policy No. 6402 of the Settlish Equitable Life Assurance Society(4), in which many of these cases are referred to and principles explained is an instance where the Court refu ed to draw such presum; tion, though the policy was taken an a man's life ' for the behoof of' a lady who was his deceased wife's sister and with whom he had gone through the ceremony at marriago. The question therefore is whether the relationship of the parties is such that we should presume a guit or an advancement in favour of the person in whose name the policy stands In India section 82 of the Indiau Krishanya Trusts Act states that where property is transferred to A for a consideration and or provided by B, the property is presumed to belong to 1 unless it appears that Bdid not intend to pay or provide such consideration for the Lenefit of A Pres d nev at any rate, there is an increasing disposition to make prevision for the benefit of a person's wife and children including danchters as a ainst his joint family, to whom his property would survive at his death, or as against the male heirs. Accordingly Tuener C J, and Mornessus Ayvan J, decided that where notes were purchased in the name of a wife out of funds belonging to the husband "the presumption is that he intended that the notes transferred to his wife should become her property"-Aaravana v Krishna(1) This view has been 'accepted in Madras in the ease of Hinda females. I have very little doubt that, when persons in the position of Venkatarainam take the telies in the name of either the wife or daughters, they natend it for their benefit and they must be deemed to be the beneficiaries an ler the nelics.

Various insurance offices in Southern India issue policies under which the mencys are to be paid to the daughters on their marrage. The consideration in such cases is not only the health. etc , of the person who pays the premiums but also considerations affecting the daughter I have no doubt that all these persons who have been effecting these insurance policies always treated the policy money as the property of the daughter payable to her at a certain fixed period. It is not open to the father or husband to revoke that disposition without the consent of either the wife or the daughter I would necer lingly hold that in this case there was a gift or advancement in favour of the daughter and that the plaintiff is not entitled therefore to claim the share due to her

As a beneficiary there is no doubt that the first defendant would be entitled to bring a suit against the insurance company for the recovery of the amount No doubt in England it has heen held that, if she is not the beneficiary and the amount is only payable to the daughter on the father's death, then the

BALANBA U LEISHVAYYA SANKARAN NAIR J person in whose name the purchase is made then a gift or advance ment is presumed. This is what is stated by Lord Routly in Garrick v Taylor(1) which was confirmed in appeal. 'If a purchase he in ide by one in the name of another, the presumption is that the latter is a trustee for the person who pays the money, unless the parties stand in the relation of parent and child"

The same principle has been applied to policies of life insurince in Ifteger v Browne(2) which was a case where an insurance. Office issued a policy on Pfleger's life the premiums of which were paid by Pfleger but the amount was payable to Browne It was held that the ones of proof when the benefit of it was claimed by Frowno lay on the latter even though the policy stood in his name.

The exception in fovour of the children was recognised in Re Richardson, Weston v Richardson(3) In that case the question was whether a policy of his isosurance effected by a man on his own his but in his daughter o nome was for his benefit of for that of his daughter. Ho retoined the policy to his owe possession oud he paid all the premiums himself from time to time except the last which on occount of his want of mocoy his son paid Kar, J held that "the legal right to call upon the office to poy the sum assured was clearly in the daughter, and not in the executor, the contract of the insuronce company having been to pay her 'That she was a daughter was sufficient to raise o presumption that there had been an advancement to hor'. Ho further held that the mere retention by the father of the policy in his own hands did not show that the beoeficial interest was not intended to pass in her.

On the other hand the decision of In re a Policy No. 6193 of the Scottish Equilable Life Assurance Society(4), in which many of these cases are referred to and principles explained is an instance where the Court refused in draw such presumption, though the policy was taken on a mon's life' for the behoof of" in lady who was his deceased wife's sister and with whom he had gone through the caremooy of mirrage. presume a gift or an advancement in favour of the person in whose name the policy stands In India section 82 of the Indian Kaishaan Trusts Act states that where property is transferred to A for a consideration paid or provided by B, the property is presumed to I clong to 1 unless it appears that B did not intend to pay or provide such consideration for the henefit of A. In the Mailras Pres dency, at any rate, there is an mere using disposition to make I rovision for the benefit of a person's wife and children including daughters as against his point family, to whom his property would survive at his death, or as against the male heirs. Accordingly Toeses, CJ, and Mothers Mt Avias, J, decided that where notes were purchased in the name of a wife out of funds belonging to the husband "the presumption is that he intended that the notes transferred to his wife should become her propcrty"-Narayana v Kruhno(1) This view has been 'accorded in Madras in the case of Hinda females. I have very little doubt that, when persons in the position of Venkataratnam take the tolic, in the name of either the wife or daughters, they intend it for their benefit and they must be deemed to he the beneficiance under the policy, Various insurance offices in Southern India issue policies under which the moneys are to be paid to the daughters on their marrage. BALANBA KRISHNAYYA BANKAHAY NAIB J daughter is not entitled to sue. It is probable that in India this question may require further consideration on account of the ruling of the Privy Council in Khuaja Muhammad Khan v Husavi Begam(I). The facts in this case show this was testlement similar to the one in that case. But it is unnecessary to consider this question further in this cose as the daughter is not the claimant. In Oriental Government Security Life. Assurance, Ltl v tanteddu Ammraju(2) the conclusions are no doubt opposed to mine in this case but there the question was not considered. It was assumed that the Varried Women's Property Act in its entirety did not apply to Hindus. There the couosel for the insurance office concided in appeal the rights of the plaintiffs to occover the money. The question of advancement or gift or trust was not raised in that case.

I doubt therefore we ether that is an authority to be followed. But as the question is of general importance it is desirable that is should be decided by a Full Beech. We accordingly refer to the Full Beech the questions involved for decision —

- (1) Whether Act III of 1871 applies to Hindu married males or not
- (2) Whether in cases similar to the one hefore us, the daughter is not entitled to enforce her claim against the insurance office or a creditor.

Sadveiva Attar, J.—I agree with my learned brother in the finding of fact that the deceased paid his premia out of his self acquired moneys, and it is unnecessary to repeat the reasons given by him for arriving at that conclusion. The further question arising in this case and which we have resolved to refer for the equation of in Pull Bench is of great importance. That question is whether, when a Hindu male I is insured his life with a company by in agreement under which the insurance emprany undertook to pay the insurance owners on the death of the it sure I to his wife and children or, it lead, the children meant that to that income or whether such money is part in the extra of the deceased to which his male children will are his heirs are alone entitled. (a) Whather under the Contract Act the wife and children can enforce a promise made by the insurance company as if the wife and old iron were promisees under the Centract Act the Whether the wife and children can take advantage of section 6 of the M tric I Wemen's Property Act III of 1874 and claim il at a tru t for their lonefit was created when the policy of marran e was effected

(c) Whether even if the Contrict Act and the Married Women's Pr perty Act did not uply, the wife and children could suo under the common law prevailing in India as near relatives of the insured intended to be benefited by the insured

of in Samuel v Ananti anatha(1). If Chinnava Rau v Ramaya(2) KRISHMALYA decided in 1881 is good law, then the wife and children of the insured are entitled to sue as if they were parties to the contract itself between the insured and the insurance company But Pollock and Mulla point out (see their notes to section 2 page 17) that in the two cases Chinnaya Rauv Ramaya(2) and Samiel v Ananthanatha, clauses 13, (a), (b) and (c) of section 2 of the Contract Act have been overlooked and clause (d) alone has been considered Though under clause (d), the consideration may move from the promisee or any other person, under clauses (a), (b) and (c) no man could be called a promise and no man could therefore become ontitled to bring a suit as promises unless he has accepted the proposal of the promisor and thus comes under the definition of promises in section 2 (c) Here the wife and ohi'dren were not asked by the promisor whether they assented to the proposal to benefit them and they did not accept any such proposal and hence cannot come under the Contract Act defin tion of promisee So also in Chinnaya Rau v Ramaya(2) the benoficiary under the agreement was not a party to the agreement as he had not accepted any proposal and heace cannot be called a "promisee" under the Contract Act However, I am willing to follow Chinnaya Rou v Ramaya(2), as it was decided so for back as 1881 and its authority has not been expressly overruled, though if I were to construe the sections of the contract itself I am inclined to agree with the criticisms of Pollock and Mulla

> The next branch of the question relates to section 6 of the Married Women's Property Act In Oriental Government Securit : Life Assurance, Ltd v Vanteldu Ammiraju(3) it was held that no person following the Hindu law can take advantage of that section because section 2, paragraph 2, provided that that Act should not apply to any married woman who or whose busband at the time of ber marriage professed the Hin in religion It seems to me there are three answers to the argument based on section 2

which exclude the applicability of the Act to a Hindu married to rail cannot have any busing apon the provisions of section 6 which relate to a policy of insarance effected by any married man and not by any married woman, whether Hindu or otherwise

In the so and place, oven it section 2 will exclude a married live line man from the benefit of upolicy effected by her husband, his children cannot come under the phrase "married woman" in section 2 and if the insurance was in fuvers of the children also, section 6 must apply because section 6 says that the insurance it ill be deemed to be a trust for the benefit of his wife and children arrays of the mac ording to the interests so expressed B-cause the wife cannot take, I do not see why the children should not take

In the third place the title of the Act III of 1874 says that it is an Act, not only "to explain and amond the law relating to certain married woman' but also an Act "for other purposes," referring evidently to the beneficent insurance provision laid down in section 6 The proumble says that it is exicultant to make provision for assurance on lives by persons married before or after that dite. It does not say that the provision is restricted to a surrances on haves of other than those of the Hudu, Mnhammadan, Buddhist, Sikh or Jain religious though the Act is called the Married Wemen's Property Act, this question of i isuran e was also considered as an important matter falling to be don't with by the Act and the provisions nuder section 6 lave nothing to do with the religion of the parties but are heneficent provisions, the reasons for enveting which are applicable whether the husband who insures his life belongs to one religion or to another It is clear from the history of the legislation that that provision, us Mr Hobhouse says, was necessitated by the old doctrine of the Luglish Courts that a husband as such I ad no insurable interest in his wife's life and similar doctrines It was also necossitated by the view of English C urts, that such a johey, evon when allowed by statutes overriling the common law would only be in the nature of a voluntary settlement and hence would be hable to the dangers to which such settlements are exposed. It is well known that the legislature wanted to encourage there his ma rance policies which mike provisi as for wife and children and not to subject such policies to the dangers to which they were subjected under the English decisions, the Judges of English Courts being too much bound down by technicalities and precedents. In introducing the Bill (see extra supplement of 2nd August 1873 of the Gazette of In ba) Mr Hobbanso and " some centlemen connected with insurance offices in this c untry applied to the Government a short time age status that these provisions," i.e. the provisions of the English Statute which overruled the English decisions, "were found exceedingly ben ficial and they did not see why they should not be applied to India We now propose therefore to introduce an Act which should embody for India the same provisio is as the e which had been thought fit for the people of England " It will be found from this quotation that the religion of the parties had nothing to do with the introduction of these provisions in the Act, just as 'he "people of England" were sought to be benefited by the Inglish Act and protected against the English decisions so the people of Lulia were sought to be protected is the introducts n of this section 6 to the Married Nomen's Property Act Mr H bhonse in a lotter speech said (see extra supplement dated 6th September 1873, page 12 of the Gazette of India) "We must remember that a wife's contributions to the family we like did not usually consist in paymonte of money "he may bin z 'e her husband no money at all and not may be a very treasure to him even if measured by a mere pecuniary standard. It the nafe kept the household together, hought up the children, governed his servants, conducted all his petty dealines with tradesmen, and performed other similar domestic duties, the bushand might be a fai richer man for her services, although he might provide all the actual miney that comes into the fundy. Then if he chose that his wife should tal e every year so much out of the common stock. or out of his stock, and spend it in an insurance for herself or her children, why should she not do so If the husband chose that that should be done with his property from time to time, Mr Hobbo ise did not see it was a matter for legal question, or that there should to any legal difficulty placed in the way of the wife's enforcing the contracts. It might be the most prudent, the mo t wise, and the most bouch ad arrangement for the whole family, the very best mo to of making a provision for the n and it also tright be, and aften was, a matter of als lute justice, as tetucen lueband and wife, which leer his cied tors could not to dispute at any future time." Mr. Holborse, therefore, thought that we ought not to tappet the legal quistions into such this sections, too beard intelligable mole of treating them was that, if the wife contract disindependently with the Insurance Office, and pull the mores, the Insurance Office, should ask to questions, but should be hallo to the wife and to the wife alone.

Section 6 provided that "" A policy of insurance effected by any restrict in an on his own life, and expressed on the face of it to be first to be nefit of his wife or of his wife and children or any of them, shall cause and be lessed to be a trust for the benefit of his wife, or of his wife and children, or any of them, iccorning to the interest's so expressed, and shall not, so long a any object of his unterest's so expressed, and shall not, so long a any object of his tast or may be subject to the control of the his shall or to his out to so, or form part of his extre."

I have quoted thus at length in order to show that the religion of the insured had nothing to do with the introduction of the beneficent provision contained in section 6 of the Act. It seems to me, therefore that section 6 of the Mornied Women's Projectly Act does apply to a policy of insurance effected by a Hindu marri d min on his own life and expressed on the face of it to be for the benefit of his wife and children or any of them and that section 2 does not prevent the apply a tion of the provisions of section 6 to any such policy. Having regard however to Oriental Government Security Life Assurance, Lt.1 v. Fante Idu Ammiraj ([1], I do not wis 1 to treat this as my final considered opinion till I have heard further arguments on this point.

The Act applies to cases where a Hindu male insures his his for it is broefit of his wife and children or of any of them. The exclusion contained in section 2 relates exclusively to a married woman who heistly or whose husband professed the Hindu finith at the time of the marriage. This exclusion provens the application of the Act to cases of insurince by Hindu woman which fall under section 5. There is nothing in section 2 to control the operation of section 6 in fivour of the heightfures under a policy taken out by a Hindu male on his own I for fit to be acts of his wife and children or my of them. as being a married woman it would follow that the section cannot be limited to the case of children alone. Again the words "or any of them" in section 6 only apply to children and do not refer to the wrife, therefore a policy for the benefit of one or more children to the exclusion of the wife does not come within the terms of the section

There is no primise to pay the money to the daughter. She is not a benoficiary at all. So there can be no question of advancement in this case. Nor can the daughter sue in the absence of an assignment in her favour. The cases relied on in support of the right of third parties to suo line no application to the facts of this case. Nor is there a trust in favour of the daughter. The provisions of the Trusts Act are against the creation of a trust in such cases.

WE ar, C J

White, CJ—Tie first question which has been referred to us is wiether the Married Women's Property Act, 1874 (Act III of 1874) applies to Hindu males.

I feel a difficulty in answering this quostion in the form in which it has been framed. A general answer might possibly cover a case not contemplated in the order of reference, and not argued before no. The argument before us was confined to the question whether, where a Hindu male effected a policy of insurance on his own life which expressed on the face of it that it was for the benefit of his wife, or his wife and children, or any of them, section 6 of the Act applied. This is the question I propose to deal with

Under section 2 of the Act nothing in the Act applies to a mineral woman, who at the time of her marriage professed the Hindu religion, or whose husband at the time of marriage professed the Hindu religion

I am of opinion that sections 4, 5, 7 and 8 do not apply where either of the spouses professed the Hindu religion at the time of the marriage. These sections contain the words "married woman" and therefore section 2 applies to them in terms. They were intended in coafer rights on a mirried woman which, under the law of England, shinded not possess, and to remove disabilities imposed on her by the law of England. These onactments, if not in conflict with, are entirely foreign to, Hindu law. The words "married woman" dn not occur in section 2, but the subject matter of the section is foreign to Hindu law, and in my opinion this section also does not apply where either of the BALANDA

Spo ses was, at the time of the marriage, a Hindu

Kesports

Theo as to section 6 The world "married woman" do not occur in the section The section model is in the interest of the wife and children, but its primary object is to enable a man to rate provision for his wife and children by insuring his life for their Leacht, without executing a separate deed of trust. The section enables a Hindu male to do something which, but for the section, he would not be able to do. The result may be that a Hindu woman derives a benefit, but I do not feel bound to hold that she is shut out from this benefit by reason of the gueral castiment that the Actalall actapply to Hindu women AS SANKAN MIR, J. points out in the order of reference section 10 of the English Act of 1874 was split into two sections in the Indian Act, sections 5 and 6, which is consistent with an intention to make section 6 aprincible not described in Hindus.

Section 2 only excludes the operation of the act as regards married women. There is no exclusion as regards children If a Hindu male can take the beceft of the section for the jumpose of providing for his children but is precluded from taking the benefit of the section is order to make provision for his wife, a curious acountly arises, and a state of things is brought about which can tearcely have been inteeded by the legislature

This suggested anomaly was met by the contents of that a similar anomaly arose order the language of section 6 itself since the words "or any of them" only upplied to children, and that a policy for the beneft of one or more children, to the exclusion of the wife, did not come within the terms of the section. The words of the Indian Act are the same as those of section 10 of the Eoglish Act of 1874 (except that the Linglish Act says "be deemed to be a trust for the hencest of his wife out of his children or any of them" whilst the Indian Act says "be deemed to be a trust for the benefit of his wife, or of his wife and children or any of them"

These words may be ambiguous, but in section 11 of the Ensish Act of 1882 we have the words "for the benefit of his wife or of his children, or of his wife and children, or any of them." This makes the matter quite clear, and in my opinion this is the sense in which we should construct the words is section 6 of the Indian Act of 1874. This seems to dispose of this argument that the section itself creates an anomalous distinction between wife and children

There are three possille views, as it seems to me -

- tl) That the section does not apply to a policy of insurance effected by a Hindu male.
- (2) That it as plies to a policy effected by a Hindu male for the honesit of his children, but not to a policy effected for the benefit of his wife, and
- (3) That it applies to a policy effected for the benefit of lies wife or of his children, or of his wife and children, or any of them

In my opinion the third view is the right one

Section 6 dispenses with the necessity for a separate deed of trust. It does not affect the law of contract or the law of trust as regards the persons entitled to enforce the contract under the policy. When by virtue of the section a trust is created, the person entitled to enforce the rights of the beneficiary is the trustee, if a trustee has been appointed, and if no special trustee has been appointed, the official trustee to whom the money is payable under the second paragraph of the section.

Limiting my answer to the first question, to the question whether section 6 of the Act applies, I would unswer it in the affirmative

The second question 15, "Whether in cases similar to the one before us, the daughter is not entitled to enforce her claim against the instrance officer or a creditor." The first point to be considered is, assuming section 6 (in accordance with the view I have already expressed) would apply if the facts brought the case within the section, whether this particular policy enurses as a trust for the wife and children, or forms part of the estate of the issued.

In the case before as the insurance company contracted to pry, not the prives for whose benefit the policy purports to hive been taken out, but the executors, administrators or assigns of the assired, where a in Oriental Government Security Life Assirance, Lift v land the Assirance price in the Maybrick case (leaver v. For all we know they may have been written to by the assured after the policy had been taken I will assume, Lowever, that the words " for the benefit of his wife and children" were part of the p her when the contract wis mide. How would the matter stand then? I do not think there would be a trust if the section did not my ply. The legal interest in the policy inoney could not be said to vest in the executors in tru t for the wife and children or to the company in trust for the wife and children, because the trust, if any, would, in my opinion, bo by rea on of the operation of the section and under the section itself, it no trustee is appointed the bigil interest vests in the Public Trustee Further, so far as the company are concerned, they are under contracted obligation to pay the exceptors.

If the policy had been in the same terms as the policy to Oriental Government Security Life Assurance, Lid v Van-ledlu Ammerga(1) and the company hid contacted to pry the parties for whose benefit the policy was taken out (and this is the assumption on which the order of reference was mule) I think there would have been a trost under the section, but the person entitled to enforce the claim as a grant the or pray would have been, but the diaghter, the beneficiary, but, if no trusted had been apposited the party in whom, under the section, the legal interest vests, vie, the Public Irustee

It is however not case to determine with precision what is meant by " anything contained in the Act applying to a person," within the meaning of the saving clause I wish to express no opinion, in any part of this judgment, on the point whether there may be provisions in the Act, altering the rights or liabilities of a married woman, which provisions, by reason of their nature, or form, or otherwise, cannot be de cribed as applying to a married woman within the me ining of the saving clause, in any case, if misions which do not after the rights or habilities of a person, cannot.

the learned Judges say upon the point is, "We may point out that the Marned Wamen's Property Act is not explicible to Handas". With all respect to the learned Judges I cannot accept this proposition in its entirety. For the masons I have stated I think a male Handa can take the learned section 6

If the view taken by the learned Judges as to the Married Women's Property Act was right, I should agree with their conclusion in that e se that no causa of action alose to the beneficiarus aid that the rolley money formed part of the estate of the assured, notwithstanding that under the contract the money was payable to the beneficiaries in default of trustees. In the Maybrick case-Chaier v Mutual Reserve Fund Life Assiciation(1)-on the facts, 'he trast created by the Act ceased to exist. The policy moneys therefore formed part of the estate of the assured and were parable to his executors In Oriental Government Security Lite Assurance, Ltd v. Vanleddu Ame traju(2) in the view tiken by the Judges with regard to the Married Women's Property Act section 6 did not apply, and no trust, in my ormion was created apart from the Act. The moneys, therefore, as it seems to me, were probble to the executors, since the wife was no party to the contrict with the company. The decision of the Pitry Council in Khunga Muhammad Klan v Husains Begain (3) has been relied upon as an authority in support of the contention that the daughter in the present care can enforce the contract, and in the Pray Conneil elso the ficts were of a special character, and the agreement on which the plaintiff was held entitled to see, though not a party thereto, gave her a charge on immoveable property. I do not think the present case, on the facts, comes within the principle of the decision in Khwaja Mulammad Khan v. Husaini Begam(3)

There is no doubt a special class of cases of which Weston v. Richards: n(4) is an example. If a man insures his own life in his daughter's name, this may smount to a complete gift to the daughter so as to entitle her on her father's death to see for the policy more,s. But the daughter can sue in this class of cases because the fact that sho is a daughter raises the presumption that there was an advancement to her by way of gift

TTABJI, J.

The second question, as I understand it, is framed for the purpose of hiring it determined wheth r these provisions of Krishvatta socion d'em besulte ipp'y tette first defealmt in this case within the terms of the same classe above referred to That question, assessed me, must be determined in the following marrier: If, unles the facts of this case, the rights or habilities of the first defend int would become altered on the supposition that those rights or habilities are governed by section 6, in that ers alone and not otherwise may section 6 be and to apply to the first defendant. In that case the further question would bave to be determined, whether the first defendant is a mirried wom in within the terms of the sixing cruss in respect of section 6; for, if she is such then ber rights or liabilities are not to be altered by reason of the said section, but must continue to be the same as they would have been had the said section not been ena, ted.

The facts of the case now before us, in so far as this Court is concernel, are as foll we -One Venkataratanan (to whom I shall her after refer as the 'a sun d') insured his life for Rs 1.000 malerosch of two policies of sus irince [Exhibit 1 and I(a] which are in idential tarms, and are dated the 5th June 1858. The policies commence with a recual that the assured "hith proposed to effect an insurance for the benefit of his wife and children" with the issue once company. The litter portion or the insurance policy is not printed, but the arguments addre sed to us were on the basis that each of the policies of insurince in question was 'expressed on the face of it to be for the benefit of his (the assured's) wife, or of his wife and children, or any of them" within the terms of section 6, and my judgment is on the same basis. It seems to me to be beyond our province to deal with the question whather the first delendant acquires any interest and, if so, what interest, under the insurance policy. I confine myself to the question whether, assuming that the policy is such as is referred to in section 6 of the Married Women's Property Act, the first defendant's rights and habilities, if any, are affected by section 6, not withstanding the saving clause-leaving it to the Bench who have referred the case to determine the rights of the first defendant on a construction of the policy. The assured died leaving one desighter and two seas, long respectively the first, second and in my opinion, be said so to apply to that person. Hence, it would seem to follow that if any provisions contained in the Act affect the rights or liabilities only of a male, whether Hindu or otherwise and whether married or not, then those provisions are not prevented from hiving full effect by reason of the saving cause—so long it least as those provisions do not come into operation by affecting in the first instance the rights of any such married some

If the first question referred to us is mount to raise the point whether any provisions of Act III of 1874 are operative (in spite of the saving clause) in case a Hirda marred mule effects a policy of insurance-and the referring judgments contain indioutions to that effect the main arguments before us also being based on the same merpretation of the question-then, in my oninion the inswer to the question is that the Act operates at least in so far as it does not surport to affect the rights or h bilties of any suc a married woman as is referred to in the saving clause, as to whether or not the saving clause provents the Act from organt up in so far as it affects the rights or hibilities of any mairied woman under a poli v of memence effected by her husband, that question, of viously, does not are o on the facts now before us, because no lavo to leal with the rights of the dinghter of the person effecting the policy of m-mance, and not with the rights of his wife, and I expres no opinion on the rights of the wife lie point that does arise is more definitely referred to us under the second question that we are isked to answer, and I will deal with it in answering that question

The second qui stion referred to us 19 ns follows —" Il hete or, in cases similar to the one before us, the daughter is not entitled to enforce her claim against the insurance office or a creditor."

Section 6 of the Act liys down that' a policy of insurance effected by any married man on list own life, and expressed on the face of it to be for the benefit of his wife, or of his wife and children or any of them, shill innovamile be deem I to be a trust for the benefit of his wife or his wife and children, or any of the n, according to to interest so expressed and shill not so long us any object of the trust remain, be subject to the control of the husband, or to his credities, or form just of his o the?

TYABIT, J.

The second question, as I under trad it, is framed for the BARANDA parnoss of haring it de erminel whith r these provisions of Kaismarra. socion dem ha sulta apply to the first dofe il int in this case within the terms of the saming classa above referred to That question, i. so as to m , riest be determined in the following manier: If, unler the ficts of this is e, the rights or habilities of the first defendent would become altered on the supposition that those rights or habilities are governed by section 6, in that east alone and not otherwise mil section 6 be said to apply to the first defendant. In that case the further question would have to be determined, whether the first defendant is a married wo n in within the terms of the saving chase in respect of section 6: for, if she is such then he rights or hibblines are not to be altered by reason of the said section. But most continue to be the same as they would have been I, d the and section not been enacted

The facts of the case unw before us, in so far as this Court is concerned, are as full we -One Venkataratara in the whom I shall her after refer as the ' as u d') in ored his hifo for Rs 1 000 milerouch of two police a of the ruce [Exhibit] and 1(a) which rota idential terms, and tre dated the 5th June The policies commince with a rectiff that the assured "hith proposed to effect an insurince for the berefit of his wife and children" with the insurance company. The I tter portion or the insurance policy is not pinied, but the arguments addresed to us were on the basis that each of the policies of insurance in question was 'explosed on the face of it to be for the benefit of his (the assica's) wife, or of his mafe and children, or any of them' within the terms of section 6 and my judgment is on the same basis. It seems to me to be beyond our province to deal with the question whether the first delendant acquires any intere t and, if so, what interest, under the insurance policy I confine myself to the question whether. assuming that the policy is such as is referred to in section 6 of the Married Women's Property Act the first defendant's rights and hubilities, if any, are affected by section 6, not withstanding the saving clause-leaving it to the Bench who have referred the case to determine the rights of the first defendant on a construction of the policy. The resured died leaving one dereliter and two sees, Long respectively the first, second and in my opinion, be said so to apply to that person Hence, it now'd Emanaria secin to follow that if my provisions contained in the let affect the rights or hab lines only of a unite, whether Hindu or otherwise and whether married or not, then those provisions are not provented from hiring foll effect by reason of the saying c auso -so long it least as those provisions do not come into operation by affe ting in the first instance the rights of any neman berred dags

If the first question referred to us is meant to raise the point whether any provisions of Act III of 1874 are operative (in epite of the saving clausel in case n Hu du marred mule effects a policy of manrance-and the referring judgments contain indioutions to that offeet the main arguments before us also being based on the same interpretation of the question—then in my ommion, the answer to the question is that the Act operates at least in so far a, it does not purport to affect the rights or h bilites of any such married woman as is referred to an the entire riving, as to whether or not the entire of se crevents the Act from operating in an far as it affects the rights or liabilities of any mained woman under a po'i y of insurance effected by her husband, that ourstor, of viously, does not are a on the facts now before us, because ne lare to leal with the rights of the daughter of the rerson effecting the policy of menance, and not with the rights of his wife, and I express no op mon on the rights of the wife lie point that does arise is more definitely referred to us under the second question that we are isked to suswer, and I will deal with it in answering that question

The second que stion referred to us is as follows _" Il letter, in cases similar to the one Lefore as, the dan heer is not cut iled to enfince her claim against the usurince office or a creditor"

Section 6 of the let live down that a policy of meanance effected by any married man on his own life and expressed on the free of it to be f r the benefit of his wife, or of his wife and children or any of them, shill emergand be deem i to be a trust for the benefit of his nife or his nife and children, or any of them, according to the interest sperpressed and the ! not, so long as any object of the trut rining he subject to the control of the bush and, or to his creditors, or ferm part of

for the purposes of the question before us, the expression "1 arred w man" cannot refer to any won an other than one Emissionary who man a relative a weed the first defendant in connection wils to telle ed in the expression "children" matriel war is referred to in action 6 it is the person s have the wife of the assured I noed ex. re s 1 : 01 tl 1 int whetler the expression would v unar clitotlea uncl All I hold is that it decen to railed rier of the said, even if she is tis ly a that the right of the first defendant do net a vii vive tef the nighestion of section 6 to a more dwn 11 testle first defendant is herself a married weran wil nithe ection

Heree in an wer to the second question referred to us I would for that the dang ter's rights under the insurance p cies a c affected by section 6 of the Warred Women's I royerty Act and that the operation of that section on her rights is no prevented by the saving clause

The eccend erection referred to us apparently involves not or Iv the 10 mt with which I have dalt, viz, whether or not socto not of the Act of crates on the inc dents of a policy of insurance effected by a Hindu marind man and expressed on the face of it to be for the beneft of his wife, or of his wife and children, or any of them , but it also involves the further point whether, in citler alt matice, on the construction of the particular policies bef re us t e fir t defendant is or is not entitled to enforce her claim of air title insurance office or a creditor. This latter point does not seem to me to have been alluded to in the reference and ments. The or cratice ports in of the policies has not, as I have already said, even been printed, and I have not had an opportunity of considering it | Let these revens I desire, with deference, to express no opinion on the construction to be placed upon them, excelt in so far as appears fr in my judgment

What I have at ted above is enough in my opinion for furnishing answers to the questions referred to us so far as those questions are really contemplated by the order of reference If the mode of dealing with the matter which I have adopted is correct, then the allusions to the policy underlying the Act which were made by the learned judges who referred the case to us, need not be considered. According to the opinion expressed in third defendants. The questian arose whether, if it he a fact that come portion of the insurance money was payable to the first defendant on the death af the assured, that portion formed part of the estate of the decreed and was thne payable to the creditore of the deceased, ar whether it belonged absolutely to the first defendant, and, as such, was not hable to be attached in execution of the debts of the deceased. If section 6 governs the rights of the parties then (if the provisions of the policies be as a above mentioned) the legal result will be that the policies "shall enure and he deemed to be a trust for the benefit of his wife, or of his wife and children, ar any of them, according to the interest expressed (in the policies of insurance) and shall not, so long as any object of the trust remains, be subject to the control of the hashand (the assured), or to his creditors, or form part of his estato" Speaking with reference to the facts of this particular cese, if section 6 governs them, then assuming that tha policies in queetion are at the nature referred to in section 6. the interest of the first defendant under the policies ar the moneys payable to the first defendant by reason of them, will not be capable of being attached in execution of the plaintiff's decroe, otherwise the interest of the first defendant under the policies will form part of the estate of the assured and be subject to attachment by his creditors

Therefore, it seems to me, that we must hold that the operation of section 6 would affect the rights or habilities of tha first defendant if it governs the facts of this case, or—to use the expression contained in the saving clause—it would, in that case (subject to the saving clause) apply to the first defendant

Is then the operation of section 6 on the rights of the first defendant prevented by the saving clause? I think not In order that the raving clause enough have any bearing upon the operation of a provision contained to the Act and sifecting any person's rights or liabilities should be affected by that previous of the Act, but it is also necessary, not only that (I) that person's rights or liabilities should be affected by that previous of the Act, but it is also necessary that (2) that person should be such a married we man as is referred to in the clause It seems to no that the first defen lant cannot (for the purposes of section 6) be taken to be included within the description of a married woman "within that clause It is true that the first defendant may, as a matter of fact, be married, but I think that, for the purposes of the question before us, the expression "married woman" cannot refer to ony woman other than one Krishvarra who is a arried to at e is used. The first defendant in connection we he section to is inclused in the expression "children" married w man is referred to in Section 6 it is the person man, clastis til te the wife of the assured I noed expression from on the good whether the expression would refer to the wet 12 mer od to the a suicl Ad I hold is that it does not refer to the dig ter of the same I, even if she is merrica it is abvious that the right of the first defendant do act at will any way cut of the application of section 6 to a married wen on, to less the first defendant is herself a married werran within the section

Hence in answer to the second question referred to us I would say that the daughter's rights under the insurance relicies are affected by seets in 6 of the Marri d Women's Property Act and that the operation of that section on her rights is not prevented by the saving clause

The second question referred to us apparently involves not only the point with which I have dult, viz, whether or not section to of the Act operates on the me dents of a policy of insurance effected by a Hindu married man and expressed on the face of it to be for the brueft of his wife, or of his wife and children, or are of them , but it also involves the further point whether, in either alternative, on the construct ou of the particular policies before us the first defendant is or is not outiled to enforce her claim a rair of the insurance office or a creditor. This latter noint dees not seem to me to have been alluded to in the referring and ments The operative ports n of the policies has not, as I have already said, even been printed, and I have not had an opportunity of considering it I'er these rewons I desire, with deference, to express no opinion on the construction to be placed upon them, except in so far as appears from my judgment

What I have stated above is enough in my opinion for furnishing answers to the questions referred to us so far as those questions are really cont implifted by the order of reference. If the mode of dealing with the matter which I have adopted is correct, then the allusions to the policy underlying the Act which of old by the learned pulpes who referred the case to us, o considered According to the opinion expressed in REISHVAYYA

third defendants. The question arose whether, if it be a fact that some portion of the insurance money was payable to the first defendant on the death of the ussured, that portion formed part of the estate of the deceased and was thus payable to the creditors of the deceased, or whether it belonged absolutely to the first defendant, and, as such, was not liable to be uttached in execution of the debts of the deceased If section 6 governs the rights of the parties then (if the provisions of the policies be as se above mentioned) the legal result will be thut the policies " shall enure and be deemed to be a trust for the benefit of his wife, or of his wife and children, or any of them, according to the interest expressed (in the policies of insurance) and shall not, so long us any object of the trust rem uns, be subject to the control of the husband (the assured), or to his creditors, or form part of his ostate" Speaking with reference to the facia of this particular case, if section 6 governs them, then assuming that the policies in question are of the nature referred to in section 6. the interest of the first defendant under the policies or the moneys payable to the first defendant by reason of them, will not be capable of being attached in execution of the pluintiff's decree, otherwise the interest of the first defendant under the policies will form part of the estate of the assured and be subject to attachment by his croditors

Therefore, it seems to me, that we must held that the operation of section 8 would affect the rights or luminities of the first defendant if it governs the facts of this case, or to use the expression contained in the saving clause—it would, in that case (subject to the suving clause) apply to the first defendant

Is then the operation of section 6 on the rights of the first defendant provented by the saving clause? I think not. In order that the saving clause should have any bearing upon the operation of a provision contained in the Act and affecting any person's rights or limbilities, it is necessary, not only that (1) that person's rights or limbilities should be affected by that provision of the Act, but it is also necessary that (2) that person should be such a married w man as its referred to in the clause It seems to me that the first defen tant cannot (for the purposes of section 6) be taken to be included within the description of a serior of the first warried woman "within that clause It is true that the first defendant may, as a mutter of fact, be married, but I think that, for the purposes of the question before us, the expression "married woman" cannot refer to any woman other than one Krishvatta who is no rult the is used. The first defendant in connection with set a boar classed in the expression "clubbren". If any marrid v a is r f reed to in section 6, it is the person mini c clisarione the wife of the assured I poed expression and the post whether the expression would refert town a marketto tlea usel All I hold is that it does not refer to the digiter of the resured, oven if sio is nerried it s lt is it i the ight of the fir t defendant do act his in a view out of the application of section 6 to a married wen are the first defendant as herself a married werran within it e ect on

Hence in an wer to the second question referred to us I would say that the drighter's rights under the insurance policies are affected by section 6 of the Married Women's Projecty Act and that the operation of that section on her rights is not presented by the saving clause

The second question referred to us apparently involves not orly the rout with which I have dult, viz, whether or not seetion toof the Act of crates on the me dents of a policy of insurance effected by a Hindu maria d man and expressed on the face of it to be for the heneft of lis wife or of his wife and children, or may of them , but it les involves the further point whether, in either alternative, on the construction of the particular policies before us the first defendant is or as not entitled to enforce her claim against the insurance office or a creditor. This latter point dees tot seem to me to have been alluded to in the referring judgments The of cratice ports n of the policies has not, as I have already said, even been printed, and I have not had an opportunity of considering it | Ler these remons I desire, with deference, to express no operion on the construction to be placed upon them, excelt in so far as appears from my judgment

What I have stated above is enough in my opinion for furnishing answers to the questions referred to us so far as those questions are really cont implated by the ender of reference. If the mode of dealing with the matter which I have adopted is correct, then the allusions to the policy underlying the Act which were made by the learned judges who referred the case to us, need not be considered. According to the opinion expressed in those judgments, it would appear that, if the first defendant, instead of being the daughter of the assured, had been his wife, her rights would equally have been governed by section 6 of the Married Women's Property Act, as the operation of that section on the wife's rights would equally have been unaffected by the saving clouse I am conscious that, if the reasoning on which I have proceeded in this judgment is correct, and the results orrived at on the basis of that reasoning are not to be medified by any other considerations, then the rights of the widew of the assured might have to be held to be different from the rights of his daughter, inosmuch as the rights of the daughter have been determined by me on the basis that section 6 of the Act governs them, whereas the rights of the widow might have to be determined on the hasis that the effect on them of section 6 of the Act is excluded by the saving clause, because the reasons which I have referred to as being sufficient to prevent the operation of the saving clause on the rights of the daughter may have no hearing in a case where the rights of a widow are in question This result would no doubt be momalous, but it would be so only if I had expressed the opinion that the Act should he construed solely on the principles adopted in this judgment, even where the rights to question ore those of the widow under section 6, and that there is nothing in the policy of the logislature or otherwise to show that the saving clause was not intended to interfere with the operation of section 8 upon the rights of even the widow If n construction end be put upon the Act which would bring about the result of giving to the widow the same rights, as, according to my view, the daughter has under the Act, it would not necessarily be opposed to the rossoning odopted in this judgment But I do not fool called upon to express any opinion on that point at present, I allude to it as, in the first place, I wish to goard invest from oppearing to lay down that, because I have pursued a particular mode of interpreting this Act in order to arrive of a decision on the questions now before us, that mode of interpreting the Act may net have to be modified by taking into consideration other matters when the question relates to the right's of the widow have construed the Act in accordance with the strict meaning of its terms, because I find that it would do violence to the language of the Act to hold that the saving clause prevents the daughter's rights from being governed by section 6 of the Act. I do not base any part of my judgment on the considerations on which KRISHMAYYA. my learned brothers rely in the referring judgments, viz, the general policy of the legislature, hecause, for the purposes of the questions now before us, it is undicessary to rely on those considerations, and I find that, on a strict construction of the Act, the re ult at which I arrive is the same as would be airived at on a consideration of what my learned brothers have stated to he the underlying policy of the Act. It is unnecessary to express ary opinion on the point whether those considerations would require or permit of the same result being preived at, when the person who e rights are in question is not the daughter, but the widow, of the assured Lordships was based on such broad and general grounds. In this Court it was held in Patt armobs . Vettel Ummaclabs 1) that the principles of Hindu law relating to abenation by a Hindu willow are not applicable to alieuations by the mother of a Muhammadan minor although a sale for the purpose of paying ancestral debts by a co heir in posse sion of all the effects of the deceased, if bond nde would be lin hing on the other co-heirs. The principle of this ruling has been followed in Dugrous Row v Faheer Sahib(2) and Abdul Khilers Chid imbaram Chellingar(3) In none of these cases was any definite opinion expressed on the general question how far an alieuation by a de facto guardian which is made for necessity or for the benefit of the minor is valid. The decisions of the Courts on the question how far the mother or other near relative of a minor who is not a guardian of the minor according to Muhammadan Law with respect to his property hut has the custody and upbringing of the minor, 18 authorised to alienate the minor's property are more or less conflicting There are two decisions of the Privy Conneil hearing on the question which must be noticed first, one of these is Kali Dutt Jha v Abdul Ali(1) That was the case of a guardian and with respect to his power their Lordships of the Judicial Committee approved of the statement of the law as coatsined in Macnaughten's Principles of Minhammadan Law, chapter VIII, clause 14, but they upheld the transaction in question in that case on the ground that there was dispute as to the title of the minor to thin property and therefore the rule laid down in Machaughten did not apply, and also on the ground that the sale was for the benefit of the miner In Mata Din v Shealh Ahmad Alt(2) the cale was effected by the minor's mother who had custody of the minor's person and was in possession of his property, in order to pay certain dehts hinding on the minor and their Lordships held that a person by de fucto guardianship may assume important responsibilities towards the minor though he cannot clothe himself with legal power to deal with the estate They declared the sale to he not hisding although it was made for the payment of an ascestral deht as it was not made of necessity, nor was bougherd to the minor masmuch as the facts of the case showed that the sale of the property was unnecessary It is not olear what their Lordships' docusion would have been if the eale was made of necessity or was for the hencht of the minor Another question was rused before the Judicial Committee in that case whether a sale under the circumstances found there would be yord or yordable. Their Lordships refrained from deciding that question It should also he noted that one of the members of the committee, Mr Symp AMPRE AM observed with some emphasis during the argument that there was no warrant in the Muhammadan Law for sale by the mother of minor sons of immoveable property oven for nocessity, but though much weight must of course he attached to this observation it cannot he said that the decision of their

VACLEAN, C J and CARPERIZ, J, in Ram Charan Sanyal v Anulul Chandra Acharuna(3) followed the ruling of Rauri is and Woot roser, JJ, in the list mentioned case and held that a sale by the mather as de facto guardian of her minor son is good and valid if it is found to have been milde bona fide for the benefit of the minor Referring to Mouna Bibs v Lanka Bihars Biswas(1) they point out that the effect of that ruling is considerably modified by the ruling in Mufa-zal Hosain , Basid Sheith(2) and have lind down a broader proposition than what forms the basis of Rant and Woodporfer JJ's und_ment in Mafazzal Hosain v. In St a Ram v Armir Legura (3), there are certain general observations of Managon, J, to the effect that the powers of alieration such as those enjoyed by a Handu widow are not known to the Muhammada i law, a Muhamm idan widon being merely a co heir with her children and I is not the nutbority of a guardian with respect to their property, and Epoe, CI, in Assam ad din Stah v .inan's Prusad (1) set uside a mortgage executed by n Mul anunadan minor's uncle, which was apparently not created for necessity, on the ground that he had no power of alienation over the property

ATDREMAN KUTTI STED ALI ABDUB RABIN J In this state of the rnlings it becomes necessary to examine the text books on Muhammadan law to ascertain how a transaction which is entered into by a person who is not the legal guardian but is in fact acting as guardian is regarded in Muhammadan law

We may take it that the pawers of such a person cannot be greater than those of a guardian recognized by the law The question is whether they have any power at all to bind the minor's estate, or rather in what circumstances, if any, the doalings of a defacto guardian with the minor's estate will be upheld? It asoms to us to be quite clear from the authoritativo pronouncement of Muhammadan jurists as well as apon principles of Muhammadan jurisprudence that while the general rule is that the dealings by such a person do not spso facto biad the minor's estate the law recognizes certain exceptions to this rule The exceptions are mainly based on the general principles of Muhammadan jurisprudence that necessity is a valid ground for relaxing a strict rule of law and the application of the principle in cases where a minor has no logally appointed guardian seems to The anthor of Hedaya (see Hamilton he well recognized Grady's Edition) in laying down that a person who has the protection of an orphan may lawfully take possession of a gift made to the orphan in order to make the gift valid, observes "Acts in regard to infant orphans are of three descriptions II Acts of guardianship, such as contracting an infant in marriage, or selling or buying goods for him [-bere, we may point out that the proper translation of the word in the original, namely, amuclal ginin which is translated as ' goods ' should be animals for breeding purposes], I a power which belongs solely to the valce or natural guardian whom the law has constituted the infant's substitute in these points. II t Acts arising from the wants of an infant, such as having or selling for him on occasions of need (strictly speaking the translation of the passage in the original Hidayn, viz. * out ht to be ' purchase of what the minor cannot do without and sale of itt') or hiring a purso for him or the like, which power belongs to the maintainer af the infant, whother he be the brather, uncle or (in the case of a foundling) the Woollakst ar taka-up, or the mother, provide I she be maintainer of the infant, and as these are empowered with respect to such nots the walce or natural guardian, is also empowered with respect to them in a still superior degree nor is it requisits, with respect to the guardian that the infant bo in his immediate protestion III ‡ A is which are purily advantageous to the miner such as accepting presents or gifts and keeping them for him a power which may be excreised either by Mod'abit brother or uncle, and also by the infant himself, provided be be possessed of discretion the intention being only to of ca a door to the intant's receiving benefactions, of an advantageous nature. The infint therefore is empowered in regard to these acts (provided ha by discreet) or any person under whose pretection he may happen to be" It should be observed that the sale and purchase mentioned as belonging to the first category of commercial transactions which are stated to he within the power of a lawful guardian but not of a person who is not such a guardian hat has in fact the custody of the miner are in the nature of transactions entered into for purposes of profit This text however, bo it also noted here, does not deal with the question and r what conditions such sales and purchases by the guardi in will be binding on the miner Stated in plain language the law according to the Hedrya is this. A person who is in actual charge of the property and person of the minor is empowered to do acts which are of imporative necessity having regard to the wants of the infant and acts which by their nature are necessarily advantageous to the infant. Such acts are not confined to dealings with any particular form of property of the minor so far is it can be gathered from the language of the Hedaya and the other text books which will be presently noticed and the very principle upon which the velidity of such acts is based precipiles the idea of any such limitation The rule onuncrated by the Hedaya is accepted as good law by other jurists of the Hauafi school Im un Zail ii in his well known commentary on Kanz, viz , Tahinal Haqaiq, volume VI, at page 34 in the chapter on sales also states the law in similar terms He save that the power which the law allows to be exercised over a minor is of three kinds -"(1) what must be advantageous to the minor and such power exists in all whn have charge of the minor. whether guardians ar not, for example the acceptance of a gift or alms, and such acts can be done by the infant himself if be is of the ago of discretion , (2) what is absolutely sinjurious such as divercing the minor's wife or em merpating a slave, such authority is not recognized in any one. (3) what is midwiy between the two, that is what may be ide inta reous or huitful to the miner such as sale or hing of property for purposes of profit such power is possessed only by the father, the grandfather and their executors, whether they have the actual custody of the minor or not, because their power to deal in this manner with the minor s property 18 by reason of their guardianship. Therefore it is not a necessary condition of the exercise of such power by them that the minor should be in their actual custoly. This is how it is The hiring of a nurse belongs to the first stated in Alkifi category, and (1) giving the minor in mairingo -this is a por or posses ed by all .1. ha or puternal kindred as it is usually trinslated, and also by Zardarham or distant kindred, in the absence of paternal kindre ! None others possess this power " In Vision ul-Anhar which is a comment its or Mooltakan I-

Abhar it is pointed out that, according to Ashshafiz and Valik the de facto guardam can buy or sell for the mmer only with the permissin of the Judge but the author does not doubt, that the H man law, weach is the law g verning the parties in this suit 14, 28 stated in the text of Mooltign in the same terms as in the Hedaya and Kave It is not necessary to refer to the other Arah e text books on this point, as there seems to be no difference of or muon so far as the H min jurists are concerned, and all the text books report the statement of the law us cited above. The principle of the rule is also forcibly illustrated in the provisions of Mah named in law regarding the powers of in executor in connection with the question whether where more il in one executor have been uppen to I by the testator one of them can act singly. The general rule is that one of two mont expentors cannot act alor a but an exception is recommed in such matters as ano of urgent acce sity and purely for the benefit of tho estate. Thus in the Hed y (See Hearl on's translation, Grady's edition, velumo IV, clayter VII, page 699) the matters in which one of two joint executors can act singly are thus enumerated-payments of funeral charges or for nurchasme the victuals or cloths for the infact children of the testator, restoring a deposit, pre crying the tatate, discharging the doots, acceptance of a gift for an infant, the hiring of a narse, the selling of goods of a perist a fe r dure, preserving the property of the feer and all sich matters one of the past executors as permitted to art do e on the grank a grant me conty or clear length life it at 11 of the Wear of o point at fire the cristo le cellimite of Molomadia law, sloft a crear parts account or ed punchin even if n n s 1 t n 1 fravail con i re of necessity orner r acadeen altake the trasition parely avent cost thent rin all tothe spealing to mather vil ror sad ble in the orlining east of the trun. Fazuli as he is technically called, such sales generally are treated as Manquf or dependent The subject is discussed in Hedrys, volume II, chapter X, section of Faronda Bea or the sale of the property of another without his consent,' Gridy's edition of Hamilia, page 296, Bailinea on the Muhammadan Law of Fale, pages 218, 220, 221, 249, Qudi Khan, volume II, page 172 (original), Tabe' nul-haqaiq, volume IV, pago 44 (original), Raddul Moohtar (original), volume IV, page 110, Bahrurrang (original), volume VI, pages 75 and 76, Alimaiallah (original), page 53 , Fatuz Alagamiri (original), volume II, Calcutta edition, page 235 The result of the above discussion is that according to Muhammadan jurists, in cases of urgent and imperative necosaity, such as those mentioned, the de facto guardian can thenate the property of the minor, no distinction being made between moveable and numoveable property. Also such a person can do acts on behalf of the nunor which from their nature must necessarily be beneficial to the minor class of cases there seems to be no substantial difference between the power of such a posson who has assumed the duties of a guardian without lawful authority and of a legal guardian But there are other powers which a lawful guardiaa can exercise which are not within the competence of other persons It may be observed here that an act by which the wants of the miner are met must to that extent he also advantageous to the minor, and that is apparently why some of the text writers regard acts done of necessity in the same light as acts which are purely for the henefit of the miner (See Fathul Moycen, volume III, chapter on Ahominations, section, sale, page 410)

It should be pointed out that in Machaghten's Precedents of Muhammadan law it is stated in case 0 at page 171 that a mother who has assumed the guardianship of her minor son caused exercise any right over the property of the immor. This, as a statement of the general rule, is indeadtedly correct, but the leading authorities as we have shown, recognize certain exceptions to this rule. The case cited by Machaghten in which a mother soils a small portion of her minor son's property for resuming the setate and recovers judgment in the suit would seem to be a case of absolute necessity and pure advantage to the minor. Such a sale is however stated to be totally illegal and madmissible Ayarran This would seem to be in conflict with the case in chanter VII. nage 305, where it is laid down that where the nucle of a minor, pointly interested in the property, sells both his own share and the sl are of the minor such a sale may be valid under certain circumstances such as when the minor's share is sold for double its value, or where there is no means of supporting lum without recourse to sale of his property, ar where the land is in danger of being lost, or with a view to save the muor's property from asurpation or when sou e similar emergency has arisen. At all ments, according to authoritative Hanah jurists there can be little deaht that the law is as we have stated it and the general trend of the decisions of the courts seems to be substantially to the same cifect.

In the present cases the sales were clearly not of the character which would be ut held on the ground either of their being made of necessity or being by their naturo necessarily boosficial to the minor. The sale which is in question in Second Appeal 1416 was really made to find money for the expenses of the minor's sister's marriage and neither this nor the grounds on which the sale which is in dispute in Second Appeal 1039 ire institud, viz . the discharge of family debts and other family purposes, can be said to he justifying causes according to the rule of Muhammaden law

In Second Appeal No 1416 an objection was taken to the decree which directs the division of the shop in as many as 54 shares on the ground that it does not make any provision for the sale of the shop in case such a division cannot be conveniently effected But the phiection was not taken in the lower coarts and we are not propared to held that such an order, if found to be necossary, cannot subsequently be made by the court which passed the decree Soe Bas Hirakore v. Trakamdai (1) Second Appeal No 1639 at was argued by the pleader for the appellant that the suit was barred on twn grounds firstly, even if the findings of the coart he accepted that Jamal Muhammad Pulayar, the tenth defendant attained majority in January 1906. the suit which was instituted on the 3rd January 1909 was time

The necessary facts appear from the judgment

I' O Seshachariar for the appollant

T Il Venkstarama Sastriar for the respondent

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by

SUNDABA AYYAB, J - In this case the plaintiff and defendant SUNDABA purch said a lacent houses The wall between the two houses ATLING JJ belongs to the defendant. The plaintiff has un upstair shed in his house which is supported on one side by the defendant's parapet wall CD The suit is inter alsa to restrum the defendant from interfering with his right of support. Both the lower Courts have found that the plaintiff has been in enjoyment of the right of support for more than the period prescribed in section 15 of the Easements Act The plaintiff has been given

RAMARRISHA a dec ce restraining the defendant from interfering with the

Two points have been argued in this Second Appeal first is that the shed is only a temporary one and not permanently attached to plaintiff's house and that no right of support can be claimed for such a structure. But this contention was not rused in the Lower Courts. The point of contest there was as to how long the shed had been in existence and not the nature of the shed. It was not contended there that the shed should not be regarded as a permanent one from its very nature. Maberley v. Dowson(1) relied on for the appellant is really of no use to him In that case which related to the right to light and air it was found that the structure in question was only of n temporory nature But here as already pointed out no such contention was raised As a matter of fact the shed seems to be of a permanent character with walls on three sides It is however unnecessary to decide that point as it was not properly raised in the lower Courts

The next contention is that as the defendant has not deprived the plantiff of his support and as the plantiff has sustained no damage by ony oct done by the defondant, the plaintiff has no cluse of action and the decision in Backhouse v Bonomi(2) is relied on That ease related to interference with the natural right of support but not to disturbance of a right to support as in e isoment. The distinction between the two classes of cases is posuted out in Backhouse v. Bouomi(2) by Lord WENSLEIDALE, see also Goddard on Lasements, fourth edition, page 101 Moreover it was held in Corporation of Bermingham . Allen(3), that octuol damage is not necessary to outsile a person having the right to support to an injunction and the rule requiring damage was applicable only to an action for damages. The reason for holding that actual damago is ne cosity to sustain a suit for damages where a natural right of support from the soil of an adjoining owner has been infringe I does not seem to be applicable where the disturbance is of right by orsemen to superficial support pulled down by him in I'A marked in the plan. The cornice was Ramarrisman admittedly on the defendant's side and an appurtenance to his The District Munsif disallowed the injunction on the ground that plaintiff failed to prove that any damage was caused to him The District Judge has not really reversed that finding. He merely says that "it is defendant's will that is likely to suffer. but if it does, it will cause much harm to plaintiff's house and little to defendant." It is admitted that there is no evidence on record that the wall is likely to suffer by the removal of the cornice. We set aside the District Judge's decree in so far as it modified that of the Munsif and restore the Munsif's decree. The parties will bear their respective costs in this and in the lower Appollate Court.

BENSON, J -The facts aut of which this Second Appeal arises may be stated as follows -

There were four divided brothers in a Hindu family plaintiffs me two of these Another was Akshayaling i, who was apparently adopted by one Subba Mudahar in 1879, but in the course of the suit it was found that the adaption was invalid because both the father and mather of Alshay things were dead at the time of his apparent adoption. The fourth brother was Viswalinga, who died in 1892 The dispute is in regard to his property The plaintiffs claimed it is his reversionary heirs, and their suit was to recover it from the defeedant, who is the on of Akshayalunga, and who is raid to have trespissed upon it in 1901. The defendant originally claimed the property as the self requisition of Akshayalinga, purchased benami in the n ime of Visualinga, but both the Courts below found an inist that plea. In the alternative defendant resisted the plaintiff's suit on the ground that, as the adoption of Akshayahuga was invalid, he (defendant) had not lost his rights in his natural family, and was therefore catalled to one-third of the property, and plantiff could not recover oven the remaining two thirds in this and us it is framed as a suit in ojectment against a trospasser, and cannot be converted into a suit for partition

Akshayahnga having been nade so long ago as 1873, and ware of having been treated as a valid adoption by Alshavalinga bim self (I xhibit J in 1875) and by Subba Mudah ir (see his will, I slabit II in 1898) and generally by the family, the defondant connot now deny tho validity of thin adoption It is not, however, shown how any estoppel arises against the defend out's pleathe four brothers were divided before Akshavalingas apparent adoption, and it is not shown that in consequence of the adoption, the plaintiffs' position has been in my way changed to their dr advantage, so as to render it menutable that the defendint should be restored to his place in his natural family appears to be the test which should be applied in accordance with the principle underlying the decisions in Gonalayy in v Raghus atra yan(1) and Parratibuyas ma v Ramakrishna R 14(2) It is hardly neces ary to quote authority for the proposition that an invilid adoption does not per se dostroy the adoptee's rights in his t itural family Bhacane Sankarn Pandit v Ambabaj Ann al(3), approved in Lalshnappa v Ramina(1)

But it is contended for the plaintiffs that the apparent adortion laving taken place so long ago as 1873 and having been acquiested in by all concerned for so long, it ought to be now presumed by the Court that the adoption was made in pursuance of an authority given by some person competent to give away the son in adoption No doubt that presumption was raised in Inaudrav Shiring et al v Ginesh E Bohilla), but n. authority for the decision is quoted, and that case was essentially different from the present case, for there the adoptee desire! to maintain the adoption, whoreas in the present case the adoptee's son disclaims it, the adoptee being dead No doubt if there was ovidence that Alshaydinga's father give him to Subba Mud ili and the latter accepted bim with a view to idention, the adoption though made years afterwards, and after the death of the fither, would be valid because there was the essential giving and taking of the child with a view to adoption

VAITES-LINGAN D. NATES-WRITE, C J AND BENSON, J. Venhata v. Subbadra(1). But there is no such oridence in the present case, nor are there any other circumstances by which the suggested presumption could be supported. There is abundant authority that no one but the parents of a child can give him away in adoption and therefore that an orphan (as Akshayalinga was at the time of adoption) cannot be given away in adoption either by himself or by any one clse. Subbalticammat 1. Anmachitt Annacl(2), Baltantras Bháshar v. Bayabhat et al(3) and Básheliappá v. Shivlingáppú(4).

We therefore hold that the adoption of Alshayalinga was invalid, and that the defendant has not lost his rights in his natural family.

We think that the District Judge is right in helding that the present suit, which is one in ejectment, cannot be properly converted into a suit for partition so as to give plaintiffs a decree for two-thirds of the plaint property. There may well be other property which would have to be brought into hotehoot if the plaintiffs should sue for partition.

There right to obtain partition in a suit properly framed for the purpose is apparently not yet harred, and they must be left to that rainedy

We dismiss the Second Appeal with costs.

JUDGMENT -This is a suit by a minor to set aside the decree Passed against him in Original Suit No. 1165 of 1906 on the ground of frand. That decree was passed both against the plaintill and his father. The suit was for a debt due by the father in connection with a certain partoership transaction in that suit, that is the defeedant here, asked that the father should be appointed as guardian ad lifem. The father refused to act as Then on the defendant's application the Head Clerk of the Court was appointed as guardian ad litem. The fraud charged to the plaint is that the defeedant know very well that the plaintiff was living with his mother under the protection of his maternal grandfather and that the maternal grandfather was a person fit and willing to act as guardian for the miner. In other words the charge is that the defendant was guilty of fraud by suppressing information which he had. The District Munsif dismissed the sat. On appeal the Subordinate Judge rever ed his judgment and set aside his decree The Subordinate Judge's lodement proceeds on the ground that there was a deliberate fulse statement in the affidavit put in by the defendant in support of his application to appoint the Head Clerk as guardian The statement referred to is that if ere was no fit and proper person also who could be appointed guardino ad litem for the muor appellant in Original Suit No. 1165 This allidavit had oot been put in evidence before the District Monsif but it was admitted by the Sohordie ito Jodge It is difficult to see how the statement that there was no fit ned proper person who could he appointed as guardim ad lifem could be regarded as deliberately fales. It amounted to no more than a statement that in the view of the defendant there was no one who was fit and . proper to be appointed. The Court acted on that affidavit and al pointed the Head Chrk as guardian ad liters. It may be that the Court should have made further enquiry before acting on that affidavit and called upon the defendant to state what relations the minor had with a view to ascertaio whether any of them wealt to fit and proper to be appointed as guardina al litem. The appointment was the result of a judicial order 1 ...) evilence which the Court considered sufferent

Posh the Courts below decided all the issues against the mill. Of the son lissue the Court hold that the suit was larred for recors which are set out in paragraph 1 of the first Court a judgment, which runs as follows.

Se na learne—In the parties alleged to have been tendered by the plannif to the defe idents for fash 1315 the money rent was required to be paid on the 15th of each month in three mistriments from November 1905 to January 1996 and the many rent on the 15th of each month in from istudents from Petriary 1906 to June 1906. The hast instalment became an arran on 16th June 1906 and the saits have been brought on 29th June 1906, es, three years after the arrears became due. It is portion of the Hamtiff's claim as therefore barred by limitation—rile tendering transaction.

It was also argued that the provisions of the Madras Estates Land Act (1 of 1008) were applicable to these suits and as the Act did not inquire tender of pattars for the reduction of arroars by suits, and allowed the landholder to receive arrears of rent on improper pattars as subsequently aimended by Court, the plaintiff was entitled to receiver the airrears for fashs 1316 and 1017, in spite of the findings aforesaid on the four issues. The District Judge on appeal distle with this argument and rejected the same as untenable. His reasons are fully set out in his nud_mant from which the following is outracted.

"The question now arises whether Act I of 1908 or Act
"VIII of 1865 is upplicable to plaintif a claim. If the former,
"this immaterial whether he tendered pattar and since the terms of those tendered, so far as they have been found incorrect, do

"not affect the amount of his claims, whether they are proper or MARHINATHA " not. His contentions are first that tender of patta is a matter MUTHU-AMIA. "of procedure and next that enactments as to procedure apply "from their date to pending suits As regards the first, tender "of patta is no doubt referred to in Appa Rao v. Ratnam(1) and "Chinnipakam Rajagopalachari v. Lahshmi Doss(2) as not the "cause of the obligation but only a condition precedent to its "enforcement That description was sufficient for disposal of the " issues then before the Court. But whon the question was, as it "is here, whether tender was necessary in order to make the obliga-"tion enforceable, and whether after tender had not been and no "langer could be made the obligation became defunct, it was held "that it had done so, and that the claim under it could not be "pleaded as a set off [Kullayappa v. Lakshmypathi(3)]. " regards the second contention, plaintiff's statement is too wide in "its terms. The general rule is that Acts are prospective in their "operation. To this rule there are two exceptions: (a) when Acts "nre expressly declared to be retrospective, (b) when they only " affect the procedure of the Court-Javanmal Jitmal v. Mukta-"bai(4). It is not alleged that Act I of 1908 is declared to " be retrospective. Tender of patta is not part of the procedure "of the Court The restriction to matters of Court procedure is "recognized also in Balkrishna v. Bapu(5). In these circum-"stances I concur with the lower Court in holding that plaintiff's "cause of action became finally extinct, when he failed to tender "pattas within the period allowed, and that it has not been It is to be added that plaintiff's case for the "application of Act I of 1908 in respect of tender is stronger "than in respect of section 53, clause (2), and the conditions since " no plea that they are matters of precedure is possible."

In the end both the Courts below concurred in dismissing the suit.

concerned With regard to fache 1310 and 1317 the lower Appellate Court has found that patra was not properly tendored. This finding is binding on us in Social Appeal as we are unable to scouns light of jection to it But it is contended that as the suit was instituted after the I states Land Act I of 1908 came into force and as tender of patta is not a condition precedent to the maintainability of a suit for rent according to the provisions of that Act, the plaintiff's claim is sustainable notwithstanding the finding of the Appellate Court This contention, in our or muon should be uphell In a case to which one of us was a party - Veerabhadra Raju . humars Naidu(4) - tho point was expressly decided That ease was subsequently followed in another case We do not consider it neces ary therefore to do I with the question at any length. We may add, to the reasons given in that in lement, that it was laid down in 1ppa Rao v. Rainam(5) that tender of patta was not necessary to complete the landholder's right to cent but was only a condition to be fulfilled of a suit had to be instituted or legal proceedings taken for the enforcement of the landholder's right In Venlata Narasimha Naidu v. Seethayya(6) the question was, whether a distraint made while Act VIII of 186) was in force without tender of patta was lawful or not The lawfulness of a distraint must be judged by the law in force when it is made What was unlawful then is not made lawful by any prevision in the Lstates Land Act In Archaham Seshachella Dilshululu v Kallur Subba Reddy(7) tho and was one for rent When the case was tried by the Court of

hantning it is instance Act VIII of 1865 was in force When the suit was instituted it was not maintainable. There is nothing in Act MUTTERAVIA I of 1908 rendering a suit not maintainable at its institution munitamable subsequently. In Javaninal Jitmal v Multabar(1) all that us decided was that a document which for woot of execution before a village munsif could not be acted on by the Courts could not be put in evidence in a suit instituted after the provision requiring execution before a village manual was rethat decision has, in our opinion, no application to this If the document was incompetent to affect the rights of its parties at its inception, an express provision of law would be required to make it valid subsequently and there has no such provision to the later enactment which was rehed on in that case Phero is nothing in Gor clasgumy Muduli v Mul Les Gopalier (2), which supports the respondent's contention The learned counsel f r the respondent argues that retrespective effect should not be given to section 53 of the Letates Land Act But the appellant's case does not require any such thing being done. When his suit was instituted, the law did not require that he should have previously tendered a patty to his ten int before suing him for rent It is the rest ordent that wishes to enforce a condition which the lan did not impose at the time of the institution of the Following the judgment in Vecrabhadra Reju v Kuriars Nasdu(3) we hold that the suit for the rent of fishs 1316 and 1317 is mount un iblo

This suit was for redemption of smortgage of the year 1876 created by first defendant's husband in favour of the third defendant's father. Plaintiff having purchased the equity of redemption from first defendant sued to redeem. The third defendant contended that by subsequent unregistered agreement in 1885 with the first defendant's husband he became the owner of the property and that he was not hable to be redeemed. Plaintiff whose suit was dismissed preferred this Second Appeal. The other facts and arguments appear from the judgment.

JUDGMENT -This is a smit for redemption The third defendant's father obtained a mertgage from the first defendant's husband in the year 1876 According to the terms of that mertgage the amount of the debt was to be paid at the expiration of eight years Then it goes on to say "in case of the interest on the said principal accruing every year or the principal not being paid, you shall immediately on the expiry of the stipulated period of eight years take possession of the said land, etc., and shall happily enjoy the same in succession from son to grandson and as long as the san and moon last" The mertgagee was not entitled to nessession immediately according to the terms of the document, but he was to take pessession of the property as owner after the time fixed for payment claused On the 2nd July 1885 the first defendant's husband sent a petition (Exhibit II), to the lahsilder in order that path for the land might be transferred to the third defendant's father The petition stated "I have put Nagella Vobulakendn in possessien for Rs 1,475 being principal and interest due by me according to the decument executed and registered on 26th August 1876 Therefore please remove my name' If Exhibit A is a redoemable mertgage then apparently Exhibit II tiken by itself, it might be argued, would not affect the plaintiff's right to rodeem. But Exhibit I throws further light on what led to the potition (Exhibit II) Exhibit I is a receipt for a sum of Rs. 250 paid on the date of the decument, 20th November 1885 It contains this recital "As, ewing to my mability to pay to you the money due under the deed of mortgage, I have on 2nd July 1885 relinquished the lands (for patta being issued to you), etc " It then acknowledges payment of a sum of Rs 210 which is stated to be paid out of grace to the executant of the receipt. The language of the recital is in our epinion conclusive that at the time when Exhibit II was put in there was a relinquishment of all right to the property by first defendant's husband That relinquishment we shall assume for the dicision of the case to be movaled to extenguish thought of redemption. But it shows that third defendant's father was to held possession from its date as owner with full rights to the property. Admittedly the third defer lint ! sheen in no ses in f the presents ever since se. Such an a recurrent may not box and to confer immediate title on the mort. 1. e l it is far as we are aware there is no principle of law which prevents both parties from agreeing what the character of the possession to be held by the mortgages should be from a certain date. It is quite true that a mortgagee cannot by a mure a sertion of his own or by any unilateral act of his consert his pos ession as mortgagee into possession is absolute owner That is a principlo in favour of the mortgager which prevents the mortgage from altering the legal character of his possome n by his wn act or assertion. That has been had down in several cases one of the earliest of which is Als Makerimal v Lalt : Bikl sl (1) But they have no bearing on the question of the effect of an a reement between both parties that the mortgagec should old possession as owner and not as mortg gee

The cases cited by Mr Sesh giri Ayyar do not establish the position taken up by him Kurri Veerareddi v Kurri Bani redda(2) merely laid down that where there is an ineffectual sale the vendee cannot set up that he has acquired any title by estoppel It did not deal with the result of possession in him for more than the statutory period To allow the defendant to set up a title by estoppel in such a case would be virtually allowing to e cape the provis on of the Transfer of Property Act which requires a registered convoyance to effect a sale. The person who executed the conveyance and those who consented to it had no severable interest in the terwad property. The result therefore was that the former character of the possession which began previously to the conveyance was not altered by the conveyance or by the consent of some mombers only of the tarwad which could not operate as against the tarwad as a whole We are of opinion that both parties were entitled to igree in what character the third defendant should hold possession and that the plaintiff who purchased the equity of redemption from the first defendant cannot now claun to redoem on the footing that the third defendant's possession has throughout been as mortgagee

We have considered the one-tion again carefully and do not see sufficient reason to depart from the onimon formed · by us at the previous bearing which we find is in accordance with another case, Kanners Nardu v. Latchanna Phora (4). The scheme of the Act appears to have been to divide the offices coming within its purview into four convenient classes for the purpose of dealing with certain questions relating to different Linds of offices separately. The offices include both those in vallages in proprietary ostates and in ryotwari tracis, clause (1) for instance would include the offices referred to therein in both classes of villages If the object of the four clauses was, as we conceive it was, to hring under each clause certain kinds of offices, the effect of the exception in clause (3) would only be not to include certain offices in proprietary estates in that clause so that the rules of succession laid down in section 11 and the provisions of section 7 of the Act might not extend to the excepted offices There seems to be no reason to suppose that the legislature intended to make any distinction between the same classes of offices in proprietary and non-proprietary villages with regard to the question of the alienability of the emoluments attached to them Clause (4) itself is perfectly general in its language and would include the offices mentioned therein in both proprietary and nonproprietary villages. Having regard, however, to the indement in Vcerabadran Achari v. Suppiah Achari (1) we consider it desirable to have the question authoritatively decided. We refer to a Full Beach the question whether section 5 of Act III of 1895 is applicable to emoluments of hereditary offices in a proprietary estate of the classes mentioned in sub-clause (4) of section 3

> This appeal coming on for hearing in pursuance of the said Order of Reference before the Full Bench constituted as above. upon perusing the Order of Reference and the case having stood over for consideration, the Court expressed the following Opimon.

Mitte, J - In the other hard opinion that the learned Mitter, J Julyees who are responsible for the reference to the Full Brach are relyt in the corollary must which they have arrived

I thank it must be concelled that the construction put inpossions of Madria Act. III of 1535 by the hittined Chief Jerrice, and Krishansware Myran, J., in he rabadram Johann v. Support left in (I), is that which its language most naturally supports, but the reasons for holding that it is not that which ought to prevail are, to my mind, very strong, they are stical in the judgment in Madyala Bajayya v. Kosnir Maranullin(2), and I in it restate them.

Artian offices were governed by Regulation VI of 1831 whether they were situated in proprietary villages or not, and no reason or at any rate no reason worth a moment's consideration has been suggested (and the larned Judges who decided were unable to conceive of any reason) why those situated in proprietary villages should have been deliberately omitted from Act III of 1830 while those in other villages are governed by that Act

There is, so far as I can see, no difference whitever from the point of view of the necessity of in diambility, or from the point of the wof succession to the office, between the one class and the other I cannot in these errormstances believe that the legis Isture deliberately retained the one class within the Act and omitted the other. Is it then increasing, by reason of the language of section 3, to hold that that which was not done deliberately wis done by inadvertence? We should, I think, before taking this course, do all that reasonably can be done to reconcile the language of the Act with what was beyond reasonable doubt the intention of the Legisliure And this may be done in the way suggested by Banson and

Kandappa Achary Vengama Naidu Miller, J Sundara Ayyar, JJ The language of section 3 is, I venture to think, singularly unhappy in more thin one respect, but I see nothing unreason the in reading the section as the learned Judges have done I may paraphrise it somewhat with a view to put more clearly what I think it really means It may be read as if it ran

The offices to which the provisions of this Act are applicable are divided into the following four classes ---

- these offices provided for in the Village Cess Act, where that Act is, or may be, enforced [this, I think, must be the real, though perhaps it is not the apparent, meaning of section 3 (1)].
- (2) those offices provided for by Act II of 1894,
- (3) artisans' offices, and
- (4) other hereditary offices in proprietary estates not being artisans' offices already included in (3) or the kar uams office (provided for elsewhere)

I have transposed classes (3) and (4) as perhaps making the matter slightly clearer, but that of course makes no difference I have also made the word "artisan" do duty for all the persons described in section 3 (4)

The object of the classification is, I have no doubt, that suggested in the order of reference to enable the draftsmin in sections 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12 to refer to the classes by number instead of setting out in each section the offices to which that section was intended to be applicible. The different classes are differently treated both is regards the control of the incumbents by the Collecter and the proprietor and as regards the succession to the office in the event of a vacancy. There is no other apparent reason why there should be a division into classes at all

The exclosion of arisans offices from class (3) is because they are included in class (4) and are to be dealt with differently from the offices included in (3) and the express exception was necessary because they are hereditary village offices in proprietary estates as are those in (3)

I do not think this construction does violence to the language of section 3, but if it does, I think we ought, at the risk of some straining, to adopt a construction which gives effect to what was so elevity intended rather than a more natural one which trustrates the intention of the Legislature

The authorities are not numerous. In Konnam Naudu v Late! : a Diorally and Rus of Firemaggaram & Danley ida C'cl 126(2), it seems to have been assumed that the artisau offices in / midiri villares are included in section 3 In Chinnayua Acre v. Innigat pa Moontappa Mudahi(3) and Sandanari v. Sen is Wull and I) these offices are held to be excluded, but without di cussion of the question. The two cases in which the s after his been discussed no Veerabhadran Ichari v. Suppiah fe'arr(5), where one view was taken, and Mutinla Bananya v hours Muramullu(6), to which I have already referred, where the contrary conclusion was armed at

For the reasons which I have given I think the latter deci sich is carriet and I would answer in the affirmative the our ton referred to us

If we take clause I alor out means that the Act shall apply to the hereditary offices of village artisans in all villages that is proprietary estate villages as well as ryotwars villages What is the object of the Legislature in excluding the offices of village artisans in proprictary estate villages in clause (3) but again including them in clause (4) of the same section? One very reasonable view is that, though the words of clause (4) include, as it stands, offices of all village artisans whether in proprietary estate villages or in

WHITE, CJ -Phis case comes before us, the appellant being one T Mahomed Ayyub Suhib, by way of appeal from an order of Bakewell, J. sitting in Insolvency, giving leave to the petitioning creditor to amend his petition petition was presented in March 1912 against four persons. of whom the appellant is one, and the petitioner alleges that the appellant and three other persons carried on business as partners under the name of T Noordeen Sahib & Co and T Abdul Kareem Salub & Co On March 22nd an order of adjudication was made against these four persons. This order was not served upon the appellant and no order for substituted service was applied for or made On the 4th May the petition ing creditor applied to the Court by motion for an order under rule 18 of the second schedule of the Insolvenov Act That rule relates to the taking of accounts of mortgaged property and their sale. The next step in the proceedings was an application on August 22ud made by the appellant to annul the adjudication and the grounds on which be asked to have the adjudication annulled tre stated in the affidavit filed in support of his appliention. One ground is that no notice of the adjudication had been sorved upon him Another ground is that he was never a partner in either the firm of T Noordeen Sahib & Co or T Abdul Karcem Salub & Co, that he took no part in the management of the business and had no connection with the This application camo before the learned Judge at the same time as the application made by the petitioning creditor asking for an order under rulo 18 of the second schedule we are told, after the arguments were concluded and the Judge had taken time to consider, the learned Judge took the point that the potitioning cred t is had failed to prove that there was any debt due to them upon which they were entitled to present a petition That is how the Judge outs it in his judgment Grassia & Co. Mr. Cha mer on behalf of the uppellant took a further point on Naman his own be all that the netition was hall in that in stating the daying sum not of in hones on which the potugoning creditor relied there warre or was no allegate n of an intention to defeat or delay eroditors There can be no question that the potition is defective or perhaps I should say informal in two percess. It does not state that the relation me creditor is a secured creditor Section 12 (2) roundes "if the petitioning creditor is a secured creditor, he shall in his petition either state that he is willing to relinguish his scenarity for the honefit of the creditors in the event of the del tor home a landered my lyent or give an estimate of the value of the security In the latter case he may be admitted as a netitioning creditor to the extent of the balance of the debt due to him after deducting the vilue so estimated in the same way as if Lo were an unsecured creditor" Rule 21 says. "If the petitioner is a secured creditor be shall give full particulars of his security and value the same " I do not know whether that carrie the matter any further. With regard to the statement of the debt, all that the petition says is "that at the time afore said (1 e , at the time of the alleged act of insolvency on which the netitioning creditor relies) the insolvents were and are now indebted to your petitioners in the sum of seven lakks and unwards for goods sold, and your petitioners are informed and believe that they are indebted to other creditors to the extent of about two likhs of rapees or thereabouts' It is clear therefore that that statement in the petition with reference to the debts is not in accordance with the Act or rules BAKERELL, J. uses the expression ' the petitioning creditor failed to prove his debt." By this I take it the learned Judge means be failed to prove the balance of the debt due to him after deducting the value of his security Then the petition is also informal with regard to the statement of the act of insolvency apon which the petitioning creditor relies Section 9 says -

(a) * * * *

(b) * * * * * (c) * * * *

(d) if, with intent to defeat or delay his creditor, -

(1) he departs or remains out of British India,

Attub Sahib Mahomad Attub Sahib (n) he departs from his dwelling house or usual place of business or otherwise absents himself.

ATTUBSANIB WHITE, CJ the

The petitioning creditor relies on an act of insolvency within section 9 (d) (1), and the petitioner does not expressly allege an intention to defeat or delay creditors. I shall have to refer to the exact words of the petition and of the affidavit filed in support later on I will content myself with saying now that having regard to the express provisions of section 9 and rule 20, it is clear that the petition is informal. As regards the omission to state the fuct that the petitioning creditor is a secured creditor and the value of the security Mr Chamier has not seriously con tended that it could not be cured by amendment, and, speaking for myself I think that is a defect which could be cured by amendment at the time leave to amend was given. The other matter is whether the learned Judge was right in giving leave to amend as regards the statement of the act of insolvency (the petitioning creditor did not usk for leave to amend, in fact, his case was that no amendment was necessary) is one of greater difficulty Mr Chamier pressed us very strongly with Ex parts Coates, In re Shellon(1) That was a case in which it was held by BACON, V C, sitting as Chief Judge in hinkruptcy, that a potition against a trader which nileges as nn act of bankruptcy that he has departed from his dwelling house or otherwise absented himself, must allege that he did so with intent to defeat or delay his creditors, otherwise the petition will be demurrable and must be dismissed and that such a diffect was a matter of substance, not a mercly formal defect, and it could not be cured by amendment. This case came before the Registrar in the first instance who, I think, gave leave to emend Bacov. VC, took the view that the amendment could not be made, and his view was confirmed by JAMES, L. J., and Lord Justices BAGGALLAY and COTTON, on We have also considered Ex parts Fiddian, Squire & Co (2) excepting in one very important particular which I shall have to refer to in a moment, it seems to me that the present case comes nearer to Expirite Fiddian, Squire & Co (2) than it does to Exparte Coales(1) and for this reason, in Ex parts Coales(1) there was a subsisting order of adjudication Gunis & Co and the Chief Judge held that so long as there was a subsisting arder of adjudication an amoudment could not be made by inserting in the petition the words "with intent to defeat or delay creditors" With regard to section 208 of the rules of 1869, which is reproduced in section 105 of the Act of 1883 the Chief Judge held that a petition after an order of a lundication had been made was not a proceeding within the meaning of the rule. Now in the case before us the order of adjudication has been set aside. It was set aside by the learned Judge before he made the order giving leave to amend although it was all ilone in the same order. There is now therefore no subsisting order of adjudication in this case That brings the case near to France Fuldian, Squire & Co (2), where leave to amend was even before the receiving order. I desire to express no enmon as to whether I should feel bound to follow the decision in Ex parts Coates, In re Shellon(1), if a case came before us in which the facts were the same as the facts in Ex norte Center In To Skelton(1) Tuo case 14 cited in Williams on Bankruptey under section 143 as an authority under the Act of 1883 , when it came before a Divisional Court in En parte Fuldian, Sautes & Co (1) it was not disapproved of, although annarcatly Course, J., did not like it. But for the reasons I have stated I think the present case is distinguishable from Ex parls Coales(1) I said that, in my opinion, the case came near In re l'addian Squire & Co (2) except in one important respect Phat is that the order of amendment in that case was made within three months of the act of bankruptey upon which the petitioner relied. The order of amendment in this case was made more than three months after the date of the act of insolvency on which the petitioning creditor in this case relies, and that really is the crox of the case Can we, in view of the well settled principle as to the encumstances in which an amendment ought to be allowed, give the petitioning creditor leave to amend in this case, the effect of which would be to give him rights which he would not have if he sought to file his petition in insolvency in the first instance on the date when the

Gonate & Co says that "wo must act on the settled rule of practice, which is that amendments are not admissible when they prejudice the rights of the opposite party as existing at the date of such amendments. If an amendment were allowed setting up a cause of action, which, if the writ were issued in respect thereof at the date of the amendment, would be barred by the Statute of Limitations, it would be allowing the plaintiff to take advantage of her former writ to defeat the statute and taking away an existing right from the defendant, a proceeding which, as a general rule, would be, in my opinion, improper and unjust" I may also refer to In re Mound, Ex porte Mound(1) which, as a bankruptcy case, is perhaps more in point There it was held that the court would not amend a heukruptcy petition by adding os petitioners, after three months had elspied from the dote of the act of bankruptcy upon which the petition was founded, creditors whose debts are other than those in respect of which the petition was presented, if the petition was had in the form in which it originally stood, having regard to the fact that the alleged act of insolvency is now more than three months old, the principle laid down in the decisions to which I have referred, I do not think it could, or ought to be, cured by amendment. Then the question is " was the petition bad in the first tostonce in that it did not comply with the requirements of section 9?" I have come to the cooclasion that the potition was not had with regard to this matter in the first instance

Although Mr Chamier his strongly contended to the cootrary I think that, for the purposes of this question, we are entitled to take into consideration the lunguage of the affidavit which is filed in suprort of the petition. The petition rays that on or about the 2(th March 1912, the appellent (and three other persons who the petitioner alleges are pirtuits of the two firms), "being heavily indebted did depart from their place of business and residence and are secreting themselves so as to deprive their creditors of the means of communicating with them whereby your petitioners are advised ond believe that the said in elvents are hable to be adjudged to have committed an act of incolvency." The affidavit in support of the petition alleges in paragraph (1) the indebtedness of the appellant and three others. There is a further statement

19 paragraph 3 that on or about the 20th March 1912 these graves to partners in the two prins, of whom the oppellant is said to he ne "left Madres leaving no one in charge of their respective basices and in se reting themselves for the purposes of ovading their craditors" I think it is clear that the draftsman of the be it a hal before him the works of section 9 although he does not follow the words replater and adon's the word "secretary" instead of "seeln line" But I to not knew whather that is very important for the question we have to consider. The question is taking the patition and the affidavit together, are we able to say that there is a substantial compliance with the requirements of section 9 It is true that there is no express allegation that the act done was done " with intent to defeat or delay cieditors" But we have the words in the notation of secretary humself so as to denry a his creditors of the means of communicating whereby the notitioners were advised and believe that the insolvent is liable to he adjudged to have committed an act of insolvency" and we have in the affilmit the expression " for the purpose of evading thour creditors" I think the phrise 'for the p irpose of evading their creditors" which occurs in the ashd wit may be read as a statement, in the affidavit at any rate, of an intention to defeat or delay croditors -I think In re Skellon, Ex parte Coates(1) on this point also is distinguishable on the facts In Ex paris Coates(1) it seems pretty clear though I do not find it in the report (because the andayst is not set out in the report) that there was no state ment either express or by implication of an intention to defeat or delay "either in the netition or in the affidavit." The Chief Judge observes ' No amendment of the petition can amend the affidavit upon which the adi idication has been made. That affidayit would still remain imperfect' That observation would seem to be meaningless unless it implies that the words "with intent to defeat or delay" dil not occur either in the petition or in the affidavit. The present case is, I think distinguishable at any rate upon the ground (may be on other grounds also) that in the affidavit we have words, though not the words which eccurin the section, which may be taken to satisfy the requirements of the section. My view therefore is that the order which the learned Judge made giving leave to amend the petition as regards the statement of the act of insolvency was unnecessary

Grand Ca, and I think the proper course is to set that uside. The order that I would make in this case is that the order of the learned Judge giving leave to an end be modified by setting aside so much of that order as gave have to amend with reference to this statement of the act of insolveney; subject to this I would dien to the appeal and make no order as to costs. As regards the question of partnership we do not think it a coessary to deal with it in this appeal. The memorandum of objections will be allowed but we make no order as to costs. With regard to the application to stay we make no order and no order as to costs.

Vitte J

Wallis, J .- I agree and have very little to add. Section 9 d (u) u akes it an act of bankrupter if the debtor departs from his dwelling house or usual place of business or otherwise absents himself with intent to defeat or delay his creditor-The petition in this case charges that the partners did depart from their place of business and residence and that is a charge of an act of bankrapter if it is accompanied by a charge that they did it with the intent already mentioned. But the petition goes on to say that they did "depart from their place of busines and residence and are secreting themselves so as to deprive their creditors of the means of co amun cating with them whereby your petit oners are advised and behave that the said molycuts are hable to be adjudged to have con mitted an act of insolvency." It may be true that the e latter words were falen from section 9 d (m), but reading the passage as a whole it seems to me that it does convey with sufficient certainty that the debtors committed an act of insolveney by leaving their place of business and residence with intent to defeat and delay their ereditors. But if that act of insolvener is not expressed with sufficient certainty, I quate agree that we are at liberty to look at the affidavit and after reading the potition with the aff and to find that the act of in-olreacy is charged with sufficient certainty. The important thing in this matter seems to me is that there should be proper materials before the Court to justify the exercise of the serious jurisdiction of making an order of a lindication

For the re-sens stated I have con a to the conclusion that this petition did not require any amenament in this respect. Therefore the question whether it would be open to us to amend the petrion does not really anse for decision. We have been referred to Ez paris Coales. In re Biclion(1) which, as has been Gunnis & Co

pointed out, is distinguishable from this, seoing that there was nothing, amornitly, either in the petition or in the unidayit, to show with what intent the debtor left his place of residence That was the decision in the first place of an amment Judge whose experience lay very far in the past, the late Vice Chancellor Bacos, and it seems to me that, though it was affirmed on appeal, it was treated by Janes. LJ. rither as a matter of discretion and that the application refused on the ground that to alloy the amendment "would be an encouragement to slovenly procedure" rather than on the ground that the Court was incommetent to allow it on the pleadings I cannot help feeling some doubt as to whether Sir George Jessel would have taken the same course, having regard to his observations in Ex varts Vander Landen, In re Pogose(2) whose the ground on which the dismissal of the petition was asked for was the second ground of Mr Chamier which he did not press before us, viz, that the netition did not state that the petitioner was a secured creditor Sir Gronge Jussel said " I am sorry, very sorry, to see this kind of thing. I thought the day had passed for raising such technical chiections But I am satisfied that the Act enables us to do what is right" Now I may point out that to set aside an order of adjudication is a comparatively small matter, but to set aside

a creditor's petition is a very serious thing indeed when there has actually been an act of insolvency Because the effect of setting aside the petition is to rendor inapplicable all those safeguards which are enacted by the Insolvency Act against the frauds which so often accompany the commission of an act of ensolvency Although I feel the weight of the observations of Lord Esher, MR, in Weldon v Neal(3) as to the inexpediency of making orders of amendment which would interfere with the rights of parties, yet I cannot help feeling some doubt as to whether a case such as this, would not come within the last sentence in his judgment where he says that "under vorv peculial circumstances the Court might perhaps have power to allow such an amendment, but certainly as a general rule it will not do so" It is unnecessary to express any final opinion about

This was a Criminal Revision Petition from an order of MAHAMLD MUNIERHAM SAHIS, the Deputy Magistrate, Ranipot Division (in proceedings dated the 3rd day of April, 1912, in Miscellaneous Case No. 80 of 1908), refusing to alter under section 489, a maintenance order which had been made against the petitioner under section 488, Criminal Procedure Code, hy which in 1908, he was ordered to pay a maintenance allowance of seven runees per mensem to each of his four children by the respondent so long as they were unable to maintain themselves Petitioner alleged that one of the daughters had attained her puberty in December 1909, that sha was mora than sixteen years old, and that she was therefore no longer a 'child unable to maintain herself ' He further alleged that she had been exercising the calling of her mother and ancestors, viz, prosti tution He further pleaded that since the date of the order of maintenance his circumstances had changed and that he could no longer afford to pay to high an amount as soven rapces per mensem for each of the children The Deputy Magistrate held that the evidence as to the daughter following the profession of a prostitute was hearsay and found that she was still a child unabla to maintain herself. He further held, that as the income of the petitionor fluctuated he was not entitled to hase his income upon the amount he received in a bad month

ORDER—An order was passed under section 488, Criminal Procedure Codo, directing the petitioner to pay to each of his illegitimate daughters maintenance at the rate of Ra 7 (seven) a month. He now applies for an alteration of such allowance on account of a change in his and their circumstances

The potitioner is a pleader and he alleges that his income has been considerably reduced of late. The Magistrate finds that his income night he fluctuating but there has not been such a change as would justify a reduction in the rate of muutenanco awarded. In revision I cannot interfere with that finding

The eldest daughter is naw said to be 17 years old, and it is niged that she is na longer a "child unable to maintain itself" under section 188 The word "child" has not been defined in the Criminal Procedure Cod. In England it has got apparently various statutory defiations. But in the absence of any definition or anything to the contrary in an Act, I am of opinion that a "child" is a lerson who has not reached full age. It is only then that sha becomes compotent to enter into any contract or enforce her claims, as this daughter has not attained.

Sabraran Nair, J the age of majority, i.e. 18, I think sha is a "child" within the section

The petitioner has, the Magistrate finds, failed to prove his allegation that his daughter already follows that profession. But it is said that at that ngo they become dancing girls and follow that hid.

But this law will not treat prostitution as a profession by which a full might earn her livelihood and maintain herself under section 188, Criminal Procedure Code It is against public policy to do an

It is also said that this woman might earn a livelihood by bonest labour. It is not alleged that shi bolongs to the labouring class. She has not been married nor has the potitioner made any attempts to get her married. There is no ovidence to show that any omelorment was or is open to her.

For these reasons I must hold that no such change of circumstances has been proved as would entitle the petitioner to any modification of the order

i he petition is therefore dismissed

The facts of the case are stated in the following order.

Dr & Sicammodhan for the petitioners

Otheren, J

OBDER—The first and the fourth accused were convicted of an offence pure hable under section 303 and the second and the third accused of one punishable under sections 363 and 114, Indian Penal Code

Objection is taken first to the finding that the fourth presecution witness, the girl alleged to have been kidnapped, was eged less than sixteen. There was oridence to justify the finding, which was purely one of fact, and I cannot interfere with it in raision.

It is urged that the fourth prosecution witness was not a miner and her mother, from whose keeping she was taken, was not her lawful guardian, because she lad admittedly oftained puberty and her minerity and her mother's guardianship ceased under Mahomoden Law, when she did so. The fourth presecution witness was unmarried, and her father was not lying. There is therefore no question of any guardianchip other than her mother's, is lawful, and it is necessary to deal only with the question whether the fourth prosecution writness was still a minor. No doubt according to Mah medan Law the occurrence of puberty determines minurity and the mather's right to custody (Machaughlen's Principles of Mahoma lan Law, page 63) But for the present purpose regard must be had only to the definition of minority in section 3, Act IX of 1875 For no argument has been based and nothing turns in this case on the saving chuse, section 2, or its references to expanity to set in the marter of marriage and to religious mage. In the cases cited, for instance, In the matter of Whatiga Libi(I), the coulat was between the clums of the motter and hasband to the end do of the min r, and ection 2 was restered. Here no such considerations arising, the finding in favour of the fourth prosecution witness's minority for the Re Muthur purpose of this case is justified by the Statute Law, and her Issaun mother's guardianship and right to custody of her person against Oldpikle, J

the accused follow I has objection therefore falls

It is then said that the offence punishable under section 363 is not a continuing one, and that therefore the accused Nos 2 is not a continuing one, and that therefore the accused Nos 2 and 3 who joined the accused Nos I and 1, only after the Lidnapping had been completed, are not hable for ahetment of it It has not been shown that the point was taken in other of the lower Courts. The question at what stage the offence was completed is one of fact and cannot be raised here for the first time.

Though the accused's intention is not shown to have been immoral, the sentences are not excessive. The petition fails and a dismissed
